New and Grand Revival of
CLAUDIAN.
WILLIAM MACLAREN as CLAUDIAN.
LILY C. BANDMANN as ALMIDA.

BRIGHTON THEATRE ROYAL.
The revival of "Claudian"—the greatest creation of the late Wilson Barrett—at the Brighton Theatre Royal, yesterday evening, by Mr. William Maclaren, Miss Lily C. Bandmann, and company, proved a highly artistic success; and the admirable performance was so warmly appreciated that the curtain was raised again and again on the termination of each act in response to the hearty applause that rang through the house. The play was superbly staged and dressed; and the new and magnificent scenery was beautiful and highly picturesque. The part of Claudian was undertaken by Mr. William Maclaren, who achieved distinct success by his masterly impersonation. The various phases of the character were superbly portrayed; the actor gave his lines with clear enunciation; he skilfully blended stirring declamation with tender pathos, and was deeply impressive in the closing death scene. Miss Lily C. Bandmann won the sympathy of the audience by the intense feeling she imparted to her impersonation of Almida.—Sussex Daily News, April 3, 1906.
Vacation, Holy Week.

Best thanks of playgoing community are due to Mr. Henry Austin for the rich and rare treat of witnessing some of the finest of our old English comedies—"School for Scandal," "Heir-at-Law," "Rivals."—Brighton Society.
The old comedy, "The School for Scandal," was very handsomely staged, and the chief characters very well played.—Sussex Daily News.
Charming is the one word accurately describing Henry Austin's "Old Comedies" Co. The screen scene and the second quarrel between Sir Peter and his wife, exceedingly spirited and effective.—Brighton Herald.

A few Extracts from the Press:
The Scotsman, April 2.
The performance was received with every mark of approval. The music is of a tuneful and melodious nature.
The Evening Dispatch, April 2,
A distinct advance on anything seen on these boards hitherto. There is a welcome improvement in the quality of the fare vocally; the singing is, in fact, first-rate all round.
The Evening News, April 2,
Far and away the best thing that has appeared at the Grand. May well challenge comparison with some of the so-called "London successes" in the same line. Judging from the enthusiastic reception accorded to the new musical comedy on Saturday night, a highly successful run may be predicted for it.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER,

BY
ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B. (Lond.).

Chapter I.
COPYRIGHT AS OPPOSED TO PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter II.
PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter III.
INFRINGEMENT AND REMEDIES.
Chapter IV.
MUSICAL COPYRIGHT.
Chapter V.
INTERNATIONAL AND COLONIAL COPYRIGHT.

"The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," by Albert A. Strong, LL.B., solicitor, author of "Dramatic and Musical Law" ("The Era" office), seems to be the one compendious and indispensable authority on the subject, as vexed as the "Bermoothes" and as tortuous as a Chancery suit, that has long been wanted. It is in every essential a text book for the perplexed layman, and no solicitor or barrister worth his salt ought to think of taking or appearing in "proceedings" without consulting its pages. It must suffice, after what has been said, to state little more than that the contents include five chapters, respectively named "Copyright as Opposed to Performing Right," "Performing Right," "Infringement and Remedies," "Musical Copyright," and "International and Colonial Copyright." The work, for all its precise authority, is not dry reading. The statutes, with the elucidatory notes, necessarily impose a task on the reader which takes some tackling, but they had to be there. The cases adduced, however, are full of interest. Certain of them might fitly find a place in the romance of copyright. There was the fight of Charles Reade with George Conquest over "It's Never Too Late to Mend," for instance, and the equally interesting conflict of Mr. J. A. Cave with Chatterton over "The Wandering Jew." The latter was a famous battle. Chatterton took it to the House of Lords, and was finally beaten, to the unspeakable relief of Mr. Cave, who is never weary of relating the story. Had the result been otherwise, it would have meant his ruin. I well remember meeting him on the day of his victory and "crashing a cup with him" in honour of the same. "The Law of Copyright" is dedicated to Mr. A. W. Pinero.—Sportsman.

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

FIFTY YEARS OF THE DRAMA.

Kind expressions from Authors and Managers.

SIR SQUIRE BANCROFT.

"I congratulate you on your 'Fifty Years of the Drama': the list must prove both interesting and useful to lovers of and workers for the stage."

MR. GEORGE EDWARDES.

"I think the new feature of The Era is most interesting and useful. A list of plays produced from 1850 to 1900 will certainly be of great service to a very large number of your readers."

MR. EDWARD TERRY.

"An admirable idea, and will prove a most valuable record."

MR. FRANK CURZON.

"Your list, I think, will be most useful for reference."

MRS. W. K. CLIFFORD.

"I think the list will be immensely useful."

MR. SYDNEY GRUNDY.

"Your list will be exceedingly useful. But, of course, there is no reason why old titles should not be used again. Indeed, some day we shall have to go back to them. Some of our modern titles, when they are not mere proper names with an adjective attached, display the desperation of the dramatist in too ludicrous a light. Such a title as 'The Importance of Being Earnest' amounts to a misdemeanour."

MR. ARTHUR W. PINERO.

"The list of plays produced during the last half-century is a most valuable record. The thanks of those interested in the theatre are due to The Era for this and many other enterprises."

MR. ALFRED SUTRO.

"The list you are compiling will be of very great benefit, and I am looking forward to the time when it shall be complete, and obtainable in pamphlet form."

MR. JUSTIN HUNTLY McCARTHY.

"I have watched with the greatest interest the progress of your alphabetical list of the plays published during the last half of the nineteenth century. It is a most useful undertaking, and when it appears in volume form, it must prove of great value to all who are concerned with the drama."

MR. ISRAEL ZANGWILL.

"The list of plays will be very interesting and useful when published in complete form. The etiquette of the profession apparently still allows of novelists' titles being used by playwrights. Thus, The Master, which will appear in your list as a play by somebody else, is the name of a book of mine; while the new play, Noah's Ark, has the same title as a shorter story of mine."

MR. ARTHUR LAW.

"The publication in The Era of a list of plays produced during the fifty years, 1850-1900, is an excellent idea, and will be most useful to authors who may be in doubt as to their right to a certain title. When it is issued in book form I shall be very glad to possess a copy."

MR. ARTHUR BOURCHIER.

"Mr. Arthur Bourchier thinks the list very useful indeed."

MR. TOM GALLON.

"Your idea seems to me to be a most excellent one. Quite apart from the fact that there is always a difficulty in knowing what titles have been used, there very often arises the question of when and where a play was actually produced—a question difficult to be answered. Actors and authors should alike be grateful to The Era."

MR. HAROLD MONTAGUE.

"I think the idea of printing a list of plays produced during the last fifty years an excellent one. It should be of great value to authors."

MR. ARTHUR SHIRLEY.

"The list of produced plays was not merely a happy thought, for the same idea has probably occurred to many, though until The Era carried it out no one took the pains to collect and publish such a truly valuable record.

"Managers, dramatists, as well as would-be authors, will henceforward have a long list of titles to refer to, and there will be neither reason nor excuse for encroaching on pre-existing copyright in play titles. What a lot of trouble it should save us all!"

MR. WALTER MELVILLE.

"I think it shows great enterprise on the part of your journal, and likely to prove most useful and at the same time interesting to the general profession."

MR. ARTHUR MORRISON.

"The list you are publishing will be a most valuable work of reference to everybody taking an interest in the stage, and I have no doubt that when it is published as a book you will find its success warrant you in issuing fresh editions from time to time, with the information brought to date in each case."

MR. J. J. DILLEY.

"The idea is an excellent one, and there can be no question at all of the usefulness of such a summary. Cousin Grace has not been included. This is a little piece from the French, played at a matinée performance at the Gaiety Theatre, Dec. 4, 1884."

MR. COSMO HAMILTON.

"I think that your new feature is an excellent and most useful one. A list of plays produced during fifty years is interesting not only to the playgoer, but essentially so to the manager and the playwright. They will only have to consult it to be sure that a title has not been used before."

MR. CHARLES H. E. BROOKFIELD.

"My attention has been called to your list of plays produced between 1850-1900. I have no doubt it will prove interesting and useful to many."

MR. F. FRANKFORT MOORE.

"The list of plays produced during the past fifty years, now appearing in The Era, will, I am certain, prove, when completed, extremely valuable to everyone associated with the drama in England. I am convinced—and I have had a considerable amount of experience in this direction—that it will be especially valued by all writers upon stage matters. The advantage of being able to refer at a moment's notice to the criticisms upon the production of various plays in various newspapers must be apparent to everyone. If such a list had been in existence some years ago, I would have been saved a vast amount of worry and vexation of spirit. The Era has once again proved itself appreciative of the conditions under which the best interests of the drama in England are maintained."

MR. LOUIS N. PARKER.

"I think your list of plays, produced between 1850 and 1900, will, like the other contents of your paper, be invaluable."

Cavanah, C.A.—That striking play The Walls of Jericho is presented to good houses this week by Mr. Arthur Bourchier's company. Mr. Herbert Bunston plays most effectively as Jack Frobisher, and Miss Florence Jackson finds scope for her powers in the part of Lady Alethea; Mr. George Brandram admirably portrays Hankey Bannister, and Miss Molly Carton gives a lively and entertaining impersonation of Lady Lucy Derenham.

Palace Theatre.—Lessees, Messrs. Rosen and Bliss; Manager, Mr. Walter Gilbert.—The Two Bees make a successful appearance, and a highly sensational sketch The Maniac is presented by Mr. Sydney Bacon's company, the leading part being powerfully played by Mr. Melville Bickford. Mr. Johnny Alexander and company appear with success in a funny sketch Husband and Lodger; and some fine kaleidoscopic dancing is contributed by Mlle. Effie White. Other very acceptable turns are those of Elverton (the spinning marvel), Miss Beattie Kent (comedienne and dancer), Mr. Harry Wenburn (a quaint comedian), and Bishop and Vale (acrobatic dancers).

ACCRINGTON.—Prince's Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. J. B. Ormerod; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. E. Barnes.—Mr. William Greet's company opened here on Monday in The Earl and the Girl. Mr. Alfred Donohoe gave an excellent performance as Jim Cheese; Dick Wargrave was well played by Mr. Leslie Gaze; Mr. G. Hayes, Mr. Percy Bronson, and Mr. Sam Lysons were excellent in their respective parts. The Misses Hylda Dugdale, Lina Hicks, Beatrice Anderson, Ida Stratham, and Miss Winnie Plumpton were particularly smart in the characters allotted to them.

Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. Willmot, Potter, Vandy, and Weisker; Acting-Manager, Mr. L. Campkin.—The excellent bill provided this week includes Miss Fredricks, with her marvellous performing terriers; Chris. Masters, descriptive vocalist; Sidney Dolf, vocal trickster; and Mlle. Haydee's Royal Miniature Theatre.

ALDERSHOT.—Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. E. Williams.—Mr. Leonard Barry's variety company is proving a good attraction. The feature of a full programme is the wrestling by Tom McInerney, Great Britain's champion wrestler. On Tuesday night McInerney failed to beat Jack Grumbley according to conditions, and handed over £10. Other keenly-contested matches have taken place. The other members of the company are Harry Maynard, Rene and Relburt, Miss Ada Parker, Leslie's Bioscope, Will Walker, E. Clifford, Mark Lorne, and Barry's song-scena, The Moocher's Walk.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE. — Theatre Royal. — Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Armstrong Fairbairn.—Another of Geo. Dance's musical comedy companies is here for the week, with The Cingalee, which is lavishly mounted and dressed. Mr. Lauri de Frece, as Chambuddy Ram, displays comic power and remarkable agility as a dancer. His song, "London Extraordinary," is very well received. With Miss Gladys Guy, as Peggy Sabine, he shares the success of the quaint bird-duet. Mr. Frank Crimp as the tea-planter, Harry Vereker, is full of vigour as the lover of Nanoya, and sings admirably; Mr. E. Edwards in the character of Bobby Warren is also a prime favourite, and his admirable vocal gifts win him applause in the ditty "The Four Little Girls of Ceylon"; Mr. C. Edmunds gives a good character study of Sir Peter Loftus; and Mr. Bertroud Gates makes a picturesque Boobhamba. Miss Marjorie Clarke as Lady Patricia Vane has some of the choicest lyrics to sing, and her vocal gifts are displayed to great advantage; Miss Winnie O'Connor, who makes a dainty Cingalese girl as Nanoya sings her lyrics with much strength of voice and sweetness of tone; Miss Essie Perrin dances with nimbleness and grace.

The Empire Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Sons; Manager, Mr. W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy B. Broadhead; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech.—There is a strong programme at the Hippodrome this week. Drum and Major give a skilful exhibition with batons; Emma Don and Co., in a scena, The Prodigal Son, have ample opportunity for a display of vocal talent; Henry Carlton, as Billy Blobbs, in the sketch, For One Night Only, display ability as a comedian, and is well backed by his company; Arthur Slater, the "whistling man," warbles delightfully; Violet Thorne is a promising juvenile vocalist; and the Nine Zouaves give some clever evolutions; Jay Laurier, as "Silly Billy Brown" provokes roars of laughter; the Celios are a clever pair of instrumentalists; Dubito and Buxton, a pair of vocalists of exceptional talent, are warmly applauded; Les Rupertos, a pair of equilibrists, introduce novelty into that much-exploited variety of entertainment; "The Wedding Morn," depicted on the Bioscope, is a pretty picture.

ATTERCLIFFE.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. G. H. Beagle.—Mr. Alfred H. Cook's company opened a week's engagement here on Monday with The Prodigal Son, which had a hearty reception from a large house. Mr. Ellerslie Pyne portrays with earnestness the part of Jack Fanshaw (title-rôle); Mr. W. A. Buckstone proves himself a capable actor as Captain Harry Fanshaw; Bill Burke finds an able exponent in Mr. Ambrose Horton; Mr. John Bryce is good as Ralph Marsden. That sterling actor of Irish comedy, Mr. John S. Chamberlain, causes roars of laughter by his legitimate interpretation of Larry M'Gehan, his efforts being ably seconded by Miss Rosie Kearns as Mary; Miss Marion Forrester shows marked ability as Margaret Marsden; a pleasing performance is that of Miss Nora Bedford as Nelly Burke, and Miss Nellie Hook is deserving of praise as the outcast Dick. Minor parts are well played by Mr. F. Dudley as Sir John Fanshaw and Mr. William Edwards as Corbett.

Palace Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Lacy Lyne; Assistant-Manager, Mr. J. Gibbons.—Talent of the highest order marks the programme here this week, led off by the Royal Zerbinis troupe of clever and refined musicians in a scena entitled In Fairyland, the stage setting of electrical effects being splendid, and the efforts of the troupe meeting with great favour. The Sisters Tinsley are admirable as duettists and dancers; Little Joe is a juvenile comedian of great promise; Kyoto gives a daring exhibition of pyramid balancing; Baroni and Kemp (lady and gentleman) are exceptionally smart as quick-change artists; Mr. E. C. Clayton's Attergraph pictures are still a most acceptable item; the Three Rubies receive well-merited applause for their graceful act as contortionists and acrobats, and Mr. Martin Conway, the comedian of "walk round" fame, keeps the house in roars of laughter with his quaint songs and funny patter.

AYR.—New Gaiety Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. R. C. Buchanan; Acting-Manager, Mr. Harry W. Day.—On Monday night a crowded house received Mr. Edward Compton and his celebrated company, when the play of Davy Garrick was produced. It was preceded by a short piece, The Desperate Lover, which was very cleverly performed. In Davy Garrick Mr. Compton appeared in the title-rôle, and it is needless to say that he played the part like a true artist. Mr. Compton has capital all-round support from a capable company. Mr. Henry Crocher as Alderman Gresham was excellent; Miss Mackenzie played the part of Violet with great acceptance. The play was well staged. On Tuesday night, Money was the production, and on Wednesday New Men and Old Acres. Mr. Compton and his company were to be followed on the three remaining nights of the week by Mr. Leigh Lovel's company, in The Duke of Killiecrankie and Sowing the Wind.

BACUP.—New Court Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Frank Denman-Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Richard Nightingale.—Messrs. Fred J. Webb and Wilson Benge's company is here this week with the military play The Two Hussars. Mr. J. Stuart infuses the due amount of military dignity into the character of Colonel Manners, and Mr. Wilson Benge as Harry Alford plays as a man of honour should; Captain Paul Villiers is skilfully represented as a thorough-paced villain by Mr. F. J. Webb; Mr. Paradice as Sergt. McFinnie gets plenty of fun out of the character; Mr. Louis Nanton gains enthusiastic applause for his comical efforts in the part of Trooper Runn, and he is ably assisted by Miss Lallah Price as Mollie Cutts; Miss Sadie Smith gives evidence of ability as Ellen Maythorne, afterwards Trooper Gunstock; and Miss Danvers Smith as Marie plays with much charm.

BARNSLEY.—Theatre Royal.—Manager, Mr. A. O. Mitchell.—Messrs. John B. Shinton and Alexander Greenwood's company is here in The Price of Her Soul. Mr. John B. Shinton gives a powerful rendering of Lord Rolf Mandeville, V.C., whilst Miss Ada M. Ryder plays with sympathy and charm as the heroine, Countess Lucy Steinmitz. The villainies of Major Ivan Skoboloff are skilfully represented by Mr. Annesley Hely, and he is ably assisted by Miss Mona Gray as Olga Lanovitz. The play is sufficiently lightened by the humour of Mr. Edwin Coates as the Hon. Algy Fraser, and Mr. Will Percy as Pat Murphy. Mr. Archie Gear is well placed as General Lanovitz; Mr. Murray Yorke is a capable Captain Sergius Petruski. Miss Ina Mervale is seen to advantage as Nadine Marcovitz; Miss Ada Arnott proves interesting as Lady Jemima Fraser; Miss Ida Thompson is a remarkably clever child actress as Vera; Miss Tina Frank is satisfactory as Polly Perkins.

Public Hall.—Manager, Mr. G. E. Hoey.—Mr. William Hamilton is exhibiting quite a new series of "excursions" and animated pictures here this week, which are relieved by some capital variety turns, amongst which are the following—Gustave Fasola, Indian fakir and illusionist; George French's troupe of acrobatic cyclists; the Snow Family, grotesque skaters; the Bros. Warlock Irish comedians. Claude Howell is the guide and elocutionist.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS. — Royalty Theatre and Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Stone.—Mr. F. Marriott-Watson's company in A False Wife is here. Mr. George Langham gives a good account of Sir Colin Mansfield; Mr. W. Howard Barlow is a vigorous Lieutenant George Mansfield; Mr. Frank Strickland plays Jean Berand with care; the Agnes Weyland of Miss Ellen Armor has much to charm; Miss Florence E. Florence in the difficult part of Lady Mansfield is effective; and the humours of Mr. Owen Edwin as Archibald Brown Tee and of Mr. Elton Morgan as Ben Rattler are welcome.

His Majesty's Theatre.—Lessees and Managers, Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge.—Mr. Sidney Dench's company is playing a welcome return visit here in the drama The Rich and Poor of London. Miss Dora Dench gives a commendable performance in the character of May Webster; Mr. Walter Foster makes an excellent villain of Mark Stanley; Mr. Sidney Dench as Spider Jack keeps the audience in the best of humours, being ably supported by Miss Lilah Arlis as Polly Philpot.

Tivoli.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Signor Pepi; Stage-Manager, Mr. Tom Whiting.—Mr. Arthur Rigby, who tops the bill here this week, keeps the house in roars of laughter. Harris L. Bell and Lilly Pearl give a capital comedy sketch entitled A Bit of String; Wilson Blackledge as a society entertainer is successful; Merton and Ryden, speciality artists, give a capital show; the Crystals dance cleverly; Cora Magda is a pleasing lady gymnast; and an Irish comedy act given by the Two Kelsos is acceptable.

BATH. — Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Egbert Lewis; Acting-Manager, Mr. Lewis A. Long.—For a fourth week melodrama holds the boards, the latest production being the play, The Hindoo's Revenge, capitally acted and carried through by Messrs. Arthur Whittaker and Gifford Stacey's company. Mr Cyril W. Mackay sustains the character of the hero, Bruce Glenister, with success, his various disguises showing what good histrionic talents he possesses. His traitor brother, Stephen Glenister, is well handled by Mr. Frank Ridley; Mr. Arthur Willerby as the Irishman, Dr. Murphey, could not easily be improved upon, his brogue being delightful; Mr. Clive Ross is well placed as Major-Gen. Strong; the comedy element is mostly provided by Mr. Stanley Bell as Warren, a man servant; Mr. Hamilton Travers enacts the small part of Count Polskoff; and as Kumar Nana, a Hindoo, whose revenge forms the final climax to the play, Mr. E. H. Dobell puts in some excellent work, his sister Zephan finding in Miss Ethyle Murray a strong exponent. Miss Lilian Laits, acting as Diana Strong, a sort of lady Sherlock Holmes, is full of brightness and decision, and Sylvia Glenister is realised by Miss Daisy Snowden in a pleasing manner.

Palace Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Charles Schubert.—That bright American couple, Barton and Ashley, are appearing here this week, and their reception is cordial in the extreme. Of the many teams of lad vocalists on tour none exceed in excellence that of the King's College Boys, whose combined efforts in excerpts from opera have won a great success. Lester and his trained dogs carry through an amusing and clever turn; two ladies who have previously won their way into popular favour here are Janet Howard Reynolds, ballad vocalist, and Millie Howell, descriptive vocalist, who gain further admirers; Grey and Welford, comedians, give a comic boxing act that goes well; Joe Humphreys, character comedian, starts the programme, which, as usual, closes with a series of pictures by Raymond's Bio-Tableaux. On Tuesday evening a special cricketers' night was arranged, when several local amateurs added items that met with acceptance from large and friendly audiences.

BATLEY. — Theatre Royal. — Proprietors, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Whitty.—Mr. H. G. Place's Opera Co. is fulfilling a week's engagement here in a repértorie of operas, including, Lily of Killarney, Faust, Bohemian Girl, Il Trovatore, The Daughter of the Regiment, and Maritana. The principals are Messrs. F. S. Gilbert (who is in excellent voice), Frank Laud, Fred Wade, J. K. Campbell, H. G. Place, and Mesdames Constance St. Bride, Ella Ross, Kathleen McCabe, and Madeline Stone Humphries. In The Lily of Killarney, on Monday evening, Mr. F. S. Gilbert as Myles and Miss St. Bride as the Coleen Bawn were conspicuously successful; Mr. Kneall Campbell was a good Corrigan; Mr. Edward Griffen gave a faithful portrayal of Father Tom; and Mr. Frank Laud was a capital Danny Mann.

BEDFORD.—Royal County Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Graham-Falcon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter R. Wilson.—This week the boards are occupied by Mr. Charles Harrington's company in Frank Bateman's naval play, The Sailors of the King. Mr. Charles Harrington makes an excellent Admiral Drake, whose son, Dick, finds a powerful exponent in Mr. Harry Douglas; Orrel Drake, the villain, is cleverly impersonated by Mr. F. Vernon Travers; Mr. Fred Owen gives a capital interpretation of Wilkenstein; Miss Sylvia Stella pathetically represents the trials and troubles of Felicia Phrynne; and Daisy Dent is successfully rendered by Miss Gertrude Stenoll; Miss Hero Hathaway makes a charming little Penelope Penn, the Quakeress.

BELFAST.—Theatre Royal.—Managing Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; Acting-Manager, Mr. James M. McCann.—Mr. Charles Macdona's company opened here on Monday with the popular musical comedy The Gay Parisienne. Mackey's company. The company is a capable one, the outstanding feature being Mr. Chalmers Mackey's excellent work as Barney O'Hea. NOTICE. — Provincial Correspondents are requested to send in copy next week to reach us not later than Wednesday morning.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

The balance sheet of the Dramatic and Musical Fund has at last been published, and a copy will be found in another column. It is announced that members of the late fund may obtain a copy of the balance sheet on applying to Mr. Grame, Mr. Edward Terry's manager, at Terry's Theatre. There is a residue of £55 2s. 5d., which it is expectcd will be distributed among the six societies benefiting from the previous distribution of a portion of these funds.

It is difficult to compare the statement now published with the statement sent to the Registrar on the dissolution of the fund; but in the latter statement the estimated balance, after paying the share alloted to the members, and subject to further expenditure on income, was £1302 16s. Of that sum £964 2s. 7d. was distributed among six societies, and £76 15s. 1d. to members in addition to the estimated sum, being an allowance for the period which elapsed from the date of the dissolution to the date of payment. These sums account for £1040 17s. 8d., leaving the sum of £261 9s. 10d., which apparently was required to liquidate the liabilities not covered by the sum set aside for that purpose, and included in the statement sent to the Registrar.

Considering that the members—only thirty-two in number—have received the huge sum of £1865 9s. 7d., one would assume that they are thoroughly satisfied; such, however, is not the fact in one or two cases, as communications have been addressed to Mr. Terry and Mr. Tree, suggesting that the £400 or £500 which has or will pass under the control of Mr. Tree, as president of the Benevolent Fund, which was administered by the officials of the late Musical and Dramatic Sick Fund, should be divided among the late members of the Sick Fund. Mr. Terry stated in a letter to the Era last August that neither he nor his cotrustee, Mr. Henry Neville, had any control over this sum, and that he had suggested to Mr. Tree that it should be divided among the six societies mentioned in the terms of the dissolution, a suggestion which will, no doubt, commend itself to all conversant with the work these societies are doing. It would be an advantage if Mr. Tree would make a public announcement of the decision on this point, although in April last he did inform the Heads of Departments' Association that their Association would receive a share of the sum named. This is the more desirable, as there is reason to believe that he has been favoured with a communication from a late member of the fund, in which statements at variance with the facts have been made in respect of the manner in which at least two of the societies benefiting from the distributions of the funds have treated the late members of the fund connected with the working staff.

An appeal is being made on behalf of Mr. William Lowe, a member of the Scenic Artists' Association, who has not been able to keep up his subscriptions. Mr. Elm-Lester, 8, New Compton-street, W.C., would be glad to hear from those willing to assist in this matter.

Those who desire tickets for the Heads of Departments' fourth annual dinner, to be given on Sunday evening at 7 o'clock, in the Georgian Hall, New Gaiety Restaurant, should apply without delay to the hon. secretary, Mr. G. H. Dyball, stage-manager, at the Tivoli. As already announced, Mr. H. B. Irving will preside. The toasts are "The King"; "Success to the Association," proposed by the chairman, Mr. James Cullen, president, responding for the Association; "Our Guests and the Profession," proposed by Mr. G. Poynton-Applebee, and responded to by Mr. T. P. O'Connor, M.P., and other gentlemen; "The Artist and the Committee," proposed by Mr. A. Earnshaw, and responded to by Mr. G. H. Dyball and others. Miss Ella Lorraine, Mr. Herbert Grover, Mr. F. W. Pedgrift, jun., and others will contribute to the musical programme. Mr. W. W. Arter, jun., will be the accompanist.

The weekly meeting of the Theatrical Sports Committee was held on Thursday evening at 29, Wellington-street, Strand. The following resolution was passed:—"That the balance derived from the 1906 sports be handed over to the Open Benevolent Fund under the control of the National Committee of the N.A.T.E., and that it be stated when applying for prizes or subscriptions to the prize fund that the balance will be available to assist bond-fide employees, male or female, connected with any theatre or music hall whose case is recommended to the committee of the N.A.T.E. by a subscribed to the Sports' Fund or any Association connected with the profession."

The qualifications for competitors were defined as follows:—"The sports are open to threatre managers, actors, and music hall and theatre employees. The term 'employee' to mean civilians employed in any stage department, musicians, attendants, and dressers, who have been engaged in any such capacity for at least thirteen complete weeks during the past twelve months."

The conditions under which championship trophies are to be competed for will be separately considered. It is suggested that such trophies shall be "perpetual" trophies, and that there shall be a maximum weight fixed for the teams entering the tug-of-war competition.

The General Theatrical Operatives' Sick and Benevolent Society will hold its monthly meeting on Sunday evening at the Freemasons' Arms, Long Acre, when the complaint made against the Society to Mr. Edward Terry with regard to the Society's treatment of the late working staff members of the Dramatic and Musical Fund will be considered. The officials express their indignation at the allegations of unfair treatment, which they declare have no foundation

At the Stoke Hippodrome the premier position is held by A Coward's Revenge, a sketch that is admirably portrayed, Mr. W. L. Lee's company being excellent. The Four Rosaires in their bar act are clever and amusing; the Arizona Troupe contribute an interesting club-swinging and tumbling turn; Miss Amy Anderson and company are seen in a sketch depicting Life in the East-end of London; Elsie Earle is a good comedienne; Will Percival dances admirably; Will Letters is a capital vocalist; and the Bioscope shows some interesting pictures.

Mr. T. R. Nugent's No. 1 Company was at the Town Hall Assembly Rooms, Welshpool, on Monday with the drama The Web of Fate. Miss Maggie Gardiner made a good impression as the adventuress, Florence Damer; Miss Polly Smith as Mary Poppin was amusing, her songs being well received; Miss May Kemp was all that could be desired as Olive Veneer; Mr. T. R. Nugent made a capital study of Clement Burnie; Mr. James Fox was good as Sir Wm. Heath, and the same may be said of Messrs. Cameron and Daneville as Frank Damer and Vincent Heath. Mr. Charles Buxton's performance of Pippins Perkins caused considerable laughter.

Presentation.—Mr. J. E. Barnes, acting-manager at Prince's Theatre, Accrington, was last week the recipient of a handsome gold watch and chain and a gold-mounted umbrella, presented by the members of the staff and proprietors of the theatre. Mr. Barnes, who is a great favourite in the town, was spoken of in very high terms, and suitably responded.

A NEW PLAY BY M. MAURICE DONNAY.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Paraître, M. Maurice Donnay's new play produced at the Comédie-Française, deals with the ruling vice of contemporary society—the sacrifice of all considerations to "appearance." But if the author has painted a picture, he also has pointed a moral; and has ruthlessly applied the lash to the shoulders of those who only live for the "gallery."

In his interesting plot he has intertwined the history of an honest bourgeois household, the Margès, with that of a millionaire family, the Raidzells. The Margès family consist of the father, the mother, their son Paul, a politician, married to Christiane (a divorced woman, of whom he is madly fond), their daughter Juliette (a charming girl), and Mme. Deguingois, who, because her name begins with a De fancies herself of noble extraction. Jean Raidzell, a champagne grower, a millionaire, has met with an automobile accident. He has been brought to the villa of the Margès, where he has been carefully nursed, especially by Juliette. Jean falls in love with Juliette. He asks her to be his wife, and in the ensuing act they have been married three years. Jean is not a model husband. Flighty and unsteady, he listens with delight to the flatteries of the hairbrained society women who bow to the young millionaire. But a greater danger awaits him. Christiane has all along been jealous of Juliette's good fortune. She, too, would have liked to possess immense wealth, and a diabolical plan enters her head. She starts by making up to Jean; and winds up by giving him plainly to understand that he has but to lift his finger, and she will become his mistress. Paul Margès of course knows nothing of his wife's infidelity, and loves her as before. He is, however, grieved to see Christiane develop such a taste for excessive luxury. Mme. Margès, his mother, is also dissatisfied. Her old husband, carried away by the whirlwind of luxury raised by the Raidzells, has become fast, and spends his evenings in the company of cocottes. Christiane's plan is very simple. She wants Jean to divorce, and all her efforts tend in that direction. In the fourth tableau Christiane has left her husband in Paris engaged on his electioneering campaign, and she has come to stay with Jean and Juliette at their villa in Cannes. When the scene opens Christiane and Jean have had an interview, wherein the latter has promised to divorce his wife and make Christiane Mme. Raidzell. They have gone out together on a small errand when Paul arrives unexpectedly. He has been hooted at his meeting, and been told publicly that his wife is unfaithful to him with his friend Jean. The first person he meets at the villa is his sister Juliette, who, although knowing the intrigue between her husband and Christiane, is anxious to prevent a calamity, and, therefore, assures her brother that his suspicions are unfounded. Christiane enters, and goes up smilingly to kiss Juliette. But this is too much for the outraged wife, who violently repels her. Paul then rushes forward and questions his wife, who replies: "Yes, he is my lover." At that moment Jean comes in, whereupon Paul takes a revolver from his pocket and Jean falls dead. The play should have ended here, but M. Donnay made an interesting innovation by showing up the scene after the murder, or rather the effect the drama has had on the household. Paul regrets nothing, and, knowing that in a crime passionel a jury will acquit him, leaves the house to surrender himself to the police. His father, old Margès, is terror-stricken. Eugène Raidzell, Paul's brother, also a megalomaniac, becomes quite mad. And the Baron, the philosopher in the piece, remarks that men are wrong to take a life for a question of love.

Philosophical, satirical, violent, M. Donnay's play has the great merit of being always interesting and diverting, notwithstanding that it ends in a murder. Moreover, the dialogue is bright and witty, and, despite some of its defects, the piece will rank among the talented author's best productions.

The new work was excellently played by Mlle. Cerny, who made her début at the Comédie-Française, Mlle. Piérat, Mlle. Lecomte, Mme. Kolb; and MM. Grand, Paul Numa, Henry Mayer, and Sinlot.

"THE LADY BURGLAR."

To the Editor of the Era.

Sir,—I see by announcements in the Press that Mr. Charles Brookfield's one-act play, shortly to be produced at Terry's, is entitled A Lady Burglar. Perhaps my friend C. B. is not aware that I produced, about two years ago at the Tivoli, a one-act play, by Florence A. Smith, entitled A Lady Burglar, and am now negotiating for a reproduction of it at a West End theatre.—Yours truly, CECIL MORTON YORK.

London Hippodrome, March 30.

On Friday evening, at the Tamworth Assembly Rooms, Messrs. Addison Bright and Mr. Walter Maxwell's company appeared in Merely Mary Ann. Miss Margaret Fareleigh in the title-rôle achieved no little success. Mr. Harold Standing as Lancelot gave a capital impersonation of the young composer; Mr. J. Cranstown Nevill as Peter was amusing, whilst Mr. W. Collard as Herr Brahmson was a comedian of no mean order. Miss Ruth Hazlewood as Mrs. Leadbetter made a typical lodging-house keeper; Miss Pauline Emeric as Rosie was decidedly good, and Miss Margaret Hanson made an aristocratic countess.

The alterations at the Castle Theatre, Richmond, are going on apace, under the supervision of the new proprietor, Mr. B. Twitchen. The date of re-opening has not yet been arranged.

KING'S THEATRE, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, April 2,
the Play, by W. G. Wills, entitled
"A ROYAL DIVORCE.

As Mr. Mulholland's chatty "King's Kronikle" reminds us A Royal Divorce was originally produced fifteen years ago, and the present performance at the King's follows on a successful season at the Scala Theatre with all the elaborate scenery and dresses transferred therefrom, together with Mr. W. W. Kelly's talented company, including Miss Edith Cole. A Royal Divorce, which is practically the history of Napoleon from his alliance with the Austrian Princess Marie Louise, to his downfall at Waterloo and exile to St. Helena, is very interestingly told, and makes a stirring play. An excellent acting cast is provided. Mr. Frank Lister undertakes the rôle of Napoleon with immense success, displaying the necessary saturnity and belief in his destiny with masterly skill. An exceedingly clever portrait of Talleyrand is given by Mr. F. Joynsen-Powell; and a very praiseworthy rendering of the Marquis de Beaumont is presented by Mr. G. W. Cockburn. Mr. George Howard is distinctly good as General Augereau; and Mr. St. George Frere acts well as Marshal Murat, particularly where he upbraids Napoleon for his conduct towards Josephine. Mr. Frederick Powell is painstaking as Dr. Corvoisart; and Grimaud, the innkeeper, is amusingly played by Mr. T. P. Haynes. Brigadiers Antoine and Pierre are well represented by Mr. Edward Langford and Mr. Lorton Orme. Judiciously acted is the Lord Keith of Mr. Percy H. Vernon, and Mr. Edwin Sykes makes a typical sailor, Bob Royal. Miss Edith Cole, as the Empress Josephine, acts with marked ability, and delivers her lines with sympathetic earnestness and befitting dignity. A bright and fascinating Stéphanie de Beauharnais is Miss Clara Earle; and Miss Irma Foldi is a charming Blanche d'Hervas. Miss Violet Furnival is pleasing as Angelique; and the little King of Rome is delightfully rendered by Miss Violet Hollam. Miss Elizabeth Watson's performance of Marie Louise is a thorough success, her impressive acting in an altogether unsympathetic part commanding applause. The stage crowds are excellently managed, and the Waterloo tableaux vividly carried out.

THE MARLBOROUGH.

On Monday, April 2, Wagner's Opera, entitled
"TANNHAUSER."

The Carl Rosa Opera Company opened another engagement at the Marlborough on Monday evening, to the great delight of local admirers of high-class music. The reputation borne by this well-known company has been won by aiming at a high artistic ideal as well as by a completeness of representation and staging that leave nothing to be desired. Opera-lovers, too, have the advantage of a wide choice, as the bill is changed each evening. On Monday Tannhäuser was performed to the complete satisfaction of the large audience assembled. In Herr Julius Walther was seen an admirable exponent of the title-rôle. He rendered the music in a manner that stamped him an artist possessed of exceptional gifts, and he quickly gained the favourable verdict of the audience by his masterly interpretation. Miss Hanna Mara appeared in the part of Elizabeth, and while fulfilling all the acting requirements of the character, also sang with much charm of expression. To Miss Grace Nichol was entrusted the rôle of Venus, and this accomplished vocalist was heard to the fullest advantage. The applause with which her singing was greeted was an eloquent tribute to her finished art. Mr. Frank Arthur, as the Landgrave, made the very most of his opportunities, and his fine voice was greatly admired. Mr. Charles Victor did good work as Wolfram; Mr. Edward Wynn was successful in his embodiment of Walther; and Biterolf, Reinmar, and Schreiber had satisfactory representatives in Messrs. Frederick Clendon, C. Brierley, and Albert Fenton. Miss Ina Hill, as the shepherd boy, also deserves mention. Mr. Eugene Goossens was the conductor, and discharged his duties with characteristic zeal, the orchestra and chorus contributing in no small degree to the success of the performance. Tuesday evening was devoted to Carmen, an opera that steadfastly maintains its pristine popularity. Mr. Edward Davies, as José, sang with earnestness and vigour; and Miss Doris Woodall, in the title-rôle, delighted the audience by her admirable work. Able support came from Miss Elizabeth Burgess as Micaela and Mr. Frank Arthur as Escamillo. Mr. Walter Van Noorden was the able conductor. Faust was the attraction on Wednesday evening, and Fidelio was presented at Thursday's matinée, with Miss Grace Nichol in the title-rôle, and Herr Julius Walther as Don Florestan. During the company's recent visit to Glasgow Beethoven's opera was performed no fewer than four times, so delighted were local audiences with this charming work. On Thursday night Il Trovatore was given; and on Friday Wagner's Lohengrin. Each of these performances attracted large audiences, and the wisdom of the management in making this important engagement was completely vindicated.

CRYSTAL PALACE THEATRE.

On Monday, April 2, the Drama, in Five Acts, adapted from Charles Dickens's novel by J. Comyns-Carr, entitled
"OLIVER TWIST."

An elaborate production of Dickens's celebrated story is being presented by Mr. J. Bannister-Howard here this week. The scenery is excellent, the many changes being effected without undue waiting. Mr. Stanley Drewitt gave a cleverly repulsive study of the Jew, Fagan, moving his audience powerfully in the last scene, and as the brutal cracksman, Bill Sikes, Mr. Wm. H. Kemble never once relaxed his deadly earnestness. Miss Edith A Laing was pathetic and restrained as the unfortunate Nancy, Miss Dorothy Marsdin made an interesting Oliver, and as Mrs. and Rose Maylie Miss Alice Maude and Miss Helen Clement were well suited. Fagin's pupils were characteristically represented, Mr. Charlie Clarke's Dodger being lifelike and grotesque, and the Charlie Bates of Mr. R. C. Hunter being a quaint study. In Mr. A. Klein's hands Barney, the spy, was a loathsome fellow enough. Mr. W. H. Rotherham, who doubled the parts of Mr. Grimwig and Monks, had a fine chance, of which he fully availed himself, his mannerisms in the former rôle and his capital acting in the latter being fully appreciated. Mr. Fred Penley made a kindly Mr. Brownlow, and Mr. Cyril Cattley carefully played the part of Harry Maylie. Mr. Edward Walsh, as Bumble, had all the importance which a parish appointment can bestow. The theatre will be closed to-day on account of the visit of the Salvation Army.

THE CAMDEN.

On Monday, April 2, the Play, entitled
"UNDER TWO FLAGS."

Once again we have Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow at this theatre, and their admirers in the neighbourhood are giving them a capital reception. They are again appearing in Mr. E. Felsner's adaptation of Ouida's famous novel, "Under Two Flags," which has lost none of its powers of attraction. It is a fairly strong play, plentifully interspersed with comedy and song and dance. Miss Ida Molesworth of course reappears as the vivandière Cigarette, and repeats her fine rendering of the character, which she handles in an able manner, showing great vivacity in the lighter, and touching a deeper note in the more pathetic scenes. Mr. Mark Blow presents Bertie Royellieu in his accustomed clever style. He cuts a fine figure in his uniform, and acts with dignity and restraint. Barklie Royellieu is carefully played by Mr. Theodore Hill, who makes full use of his opportunities. Mr. Fred Halliwell does well as Lord Rockingham; Lord Royellieu is capitally portrayed by Mr. Charles Brooke; Mr. Walter Rousby as Rake, the faithful valet, is altogether excellent; Mr. Sydney Richards is seen to advantage as Captain de Chaurellon; and Mr. Charles D. Pitt, who once again assumes the rôle of Colonel Chateauroy, repeats his forcible rendering of the character. Miss Mabel Ormonde is imposing and graceful as the Princess Venetia, and Lady Beatrice is charmingly played by Miss Lucy Carr. Miss Daisy Carlton is a very bright Lavinia, meeting with success in her song and dance. Mr. Fred Rolls extracts much humour out of Baroni, the money-lender. The various other parts are capably filled. The play is capitally staged under Mr. Charles Brookes' management, and Cigarette's ride over the Pass is cleverly done. The play is preceded by an amusing trifle entitled Aunt Rebecca, in which Mr. Mark Blow and Miss Ada Palmer are both very diverting. Mr. George F. Ford is to be complimented on the excellence of his orchestra at the present time.

THE SHAKESPEARE.

On Monday, April 2,
the Musical Comedy, in Two Acts, by Paul Rubens, entitled
"LADY MADCAP."

This popular and diverting musical comedy is proving a great attraction at the Shakespeare this week, and Mr. George Dance's principal company is being received with great enthusiasm. The play, excellently interpreted, goes with a swing from start to finish, and the witty lines and amusing scenes provoke continuous laughter and cheers. Miss Vera Vere, a bewitching and vivacious Lady Madcap, scores a decided hit, and is accorded much applause for her clever and spirited acting. Her songs, rendered in taking style, and her clever dancing are received with keen enjoyment, and contribute largely to the success of the piece. A charming and graceful Gwenny Holden is found in Miss Kathleen Ronayne, who gives an excellent performance. Acting her part with quiet sincerity, Miss Ronayne proves a delightful foil to her lively friend, Lady Madcap. Miss Peggy Primrose as Susan comes out very strong indeed, her singing and dancing earning her several well-deserved encores. In the rôle of the flirty Mrs. Layton Miss M. Johnstone is thoroughly satisfactory. Mr. H. V. Surrey, by his droll impersonation of Oroya Brown, otherwise Trooper Smith, causes much laughter. He is well supported by Mr. Vincent Erne, who gets every ounce of fun out of the part of Corporal Ham, of the East Anglian Hussars. In the rôle of the amorous Count De St. Hubert Mr. Alec Chantrens is eminently satisfactory, and his fine voice is heard to advantage in several songs, the tit-bit of the evening being French versions of such popular songs as "Bill Bailey" and "The Old Bull and Bush." The part of the adventurer Stony Stratford is in the capable hands of Mr. Bay Russell, who deserves warm praise for his excellent singing and clever dancing. Mr. Fred Payne causes much merriment as Posh Jenkins, and is to be congratulated for a clever character sketch. Mr. Louis du Cane, who is also responsible for the stage management, does all that is possible with the part of Lord Framlingham, and Mr. Lyall Grant is thoroughly efficient as Colonel Layton. Mr. Frederick C. Leister as Major Blatherswaite, Mr. Robert Cranny as Captain Harrington, and Mr. E. Whitelock as Lieutenant Somerset, all of the East Anglian Hussars, are excellent in their respective rôles. Amongst others giving good support mention may be made of Mr. Ralph Holland as Palmer and Mr. Percy Barrett as an old huntsman. The rendering by the chorus of the concerted pieces is all that could be desired, and the augmented orchestra was under the capable direction of Mr. Alfred C. Toone. Mr. J. Alban Newton is the courteous manager for Mr. George Dance

BRIXTON THEATRE.

On Monday, April 2,
the Romantic Drama, in Five Acts, by Rudolph Bleichman, entitled
"OLD HEIDELBERG."

Mr. Mouillot has engaged a strong company to perform Old Heidelberg. Mr. Robert Minster gives a finished impersonation of the boyish Karl Heinrich. The contrast between his light-heartedness in the earlier scenes and his pathetic parting with Kathie in the last is very marked, and shows Mr. Minster to be a performer of no mean merit. Miss Irene Lavington is a bright and winning Kathie, and gains much favour by her sympathetic interpretation. An excellent Dr. Jutner is presented by Mr. J. Nelson Ramsay, and much amusement is caused by Mr. Willis Searle in his assumption of Kellerman, the audience indulging in hearty laughter at his antics in the Prince's apartments. Mr. Lionel Gadsden appears with much success as Lutz; Mr. Eric Phillips does well as Staatsminister Von Haugk; Mr. P. Wells and Mr. Collyn Leslie are excellently placed as Hofmarschall and Kammerherr. The students Graft and Von Wedell are admirably presented by Mr. Wallace Court and Mr. Martin Pedlar. Mr. A. M. Moore and Miss Rose Hélène are successful as Rüder, an innkeeper, and Frau Rüder, his wife, respectively. The minor characters, of which there are a large number, are all in capable hands, and the students' chorus adds much to the effectiveness of the performance. The play is well mounted, the scene of the Garden of Rüder's Inn calling for special commendation.

GRAND, WOOLWICH.

the Musical Play,
"THE ORCHID."

Mr. George Dance's principal company has been here this week with The Orchid, and the vicissitudes of this valuable flower and its various possessors have been followed with interest and amusement by large audiences. Miss Chrissie Ralland is well suited as Lady Violet Anstruther, her charming acting and tasteful singing making her a firm favourite; her most popular number is "Little Mary," which is enthusiastically redemanded. Miss Mamie Stuart submits a delightful rendering of Josephine Zaccary, throwing herself whole-heartedly into her work, and singing several songs with considerable skill. As Caroline Vokins Miss Florence Vie had a part which fitted her like the proverbial glove, and she causes endless amusement by her impersonation of this matrimonially-inclined cockney, her song "In my time" being one of the most decided hits of the evening. Miss Ruby Garman made a very smart Private Secretary, her clever dancing being a much-appreciated item. Miss Ida Chichester is an aristocratic Countess Anstruther, and Miss Elsa D'Usez makes as much as possible of Zelie Humbert. Mr. Bertie Wright as Meakin, the diminutive gardener, is irresistibly droll, never missing a point, and keeping his audience in a continual ripple of laughter. Another excellent impersonation is the Guy Scrymgeour of Mr. Alfred Bennett, whose refined, genuinely humorous rendering of the rôle makes him immensely popular. Messrs. Bennett and Wright's duet on the troubles of the unemployed is excellently given, and receives a well-merited double encore. Mr. Harry T. Butler is a great success, as Zaccary, and brings down the house with his song and dance graphically descriptive of the pleasures and perils of the ballroom. Mr. C. Stone acts and sings in good style as Dr. Ronald Faussett; Mr. Jack V. Fairley is impressive as Mr. Aubrey Chesterton; Mr. William Benson is sufficiently fire-eating and absurd as Count Raoul de Cassignat; and the seconds are amusingly portrayed by Messrs. Buchanan Wake and Cecil Frere. The chorus is tuneful and well up to its work, and the mounting and dressing are all that can be desired.

ALEXANDRA THEATRE, N.

On Monday, April 2,
the Musical Play, in Two Acts, by Seymour Hicks, Composed by Ivan Caryll, entitled
"THE EARL AND THE GIRL."

The return visit of Mr. William Greet's company with The Earl and the Girl is proving a highly attractive one, and on Monday a large house received it with enthusiasm. The majority of the ladies and gentlemen of the company have been seen here before in their respective parts, and repeat the successes they scored on their former visit. The Jim Cheese of Mr. William Stephens is, if possible, more quaint and more humorous than ever, and the value of this clever comedian's work to the production is incalculable. Mr. Percy Carr is a breezy and natural Dick Wargrave, and has two of the most effective numbers in the piece, "The Mediterranean" and "The Cosy Corner Girl," of which he makes the utmost possible. Mr. Percy E. Wright plays the Hon. Crewe Boodle pleasantly and easily, and misses none of his not too many opportunities. A striking performance is the 'Liza Shoddam of Miss Dot Carey, which is in its way a clever and complete little character study. Miss Aimée Grey and Miss Florence Imeson as the young ladies of the piece, Elphin Haye and Daisy Fallowfield, both give charming renderings of their respective rôles. Miss Gladys Fontaine is an imposing Mrs. Shimmering Black, and as Virginia Bliss Miss Helen Langton is duly dignified. A smart and incisive performance of the American solicitor, Downham, comes from Mr. Will Hudson, and Mr. George H. Curzon is duly assertive as A. Bunker Bliss. Other parts noticeably well played are those filled by Messrs. J. C. Graves, Fred Hill, and Fred W. Pattrick, and Miss Hilda Gray. The piece is very handsomely dressed and liberally mounted.

PRINCE'S THEATRE, POPLAR.

On Monday April 2,
the Romantic Play, by William P. Sheen, entitled
"THE TEMPTRESS."

The Temptress was successfully presented to a large audience on Monday night by Mr. W. H. Hallatt's company. The piece has already won a host of friends in the provinces, and certainly it does not lack qualities to commend it to a public desiring melodrama of the most thrilling and sensational kind. The plot is ingeniously constructed, although not having the distinction of complete novelty. The acting is of all-round excellence, headed by Miss Mabel Scudamore, who is responsible for a charmingly unaffected assumption of the heroine, Marion Fordyce. In fact, Miss Scudamore's portrayal deserves very high praise. She delineates artistically a wide range of emotion, and in Act 3 Marion's unwilling submission to the mesmeric influence of the villain, Nemo, is depicted with vivid intensity. Miss Scudamore's admirable impersonation appeals instantly to the sympathies of the onlookers. Mr. Frederick Ross distinguishes himself by an earnest and painstaking study of Lucas Denbeigh, otherwise Nemo, and earns the full wrath of the audience by his attempts to ruin Marion. Mr. George P. Diaper is successful in his portrayal of Philip Welford, whilst Mr. Robert Wilton is well placed as the clergyman, Austin Dale. Miss Blanche Steele gives a finished embodiment of the unscrupulous woman of the world Lady Fordyce, the many varying moods and passions being well portrayed. Miss Florence Palmer does effective work as Madge. The eccentricities of Fitz Fluke are accentuated in a drily amusing fashion by Mr. Allan Carruthers, ably supported by Mr. Tom E. Sinclair as Bob Tanner. Mr. W. H. Hallatt appears as Pedro Gonzoles, a lion tamer; Miss Lizzie Chambers is Rhoda, and her impersonation is full of vivacity and go. Others deserving of mention are Miss Dora Mason (Dennis), Mr. Forbes Harrison (Caleb), and Mr. James C. Ashworth (Sir Oswald Fordyce). The scenery is good, there being many striking sets, and is the work of Mr. Alfred Whyatt.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

On Monday, April 2,
The Adaptation by J. Comyns Carr of Dickens's Novel,
"OLIVER TWIST."

Mr. Tree's company in Oliver Twist is paying a welcome visit to the Kennington Theatre this week. The scenery and appointments compare very favourably with Mr. Tree's own production at His Majesty's, and the company is composed entirely of clever members of the profession. The Fagin of that experienced actor Mr. William Mackintosh seems to be the very Jew that Dickens himself depicted, having the relentless cruelty and cringing hypocrisy thoroughly brought out. The finished characterisation is a complete success. Mr. Cecil A. Collins makes an equally repulsive Bill Sikes, and his dog behaves himself decorously. Mr. Grimwig is capitally impersonated by Mr. Clifford Bown, his delivery being neat and to the point. Mr. Ben Lewin, a young actor of the highest promise, gives a very creditable rendering of Mr. Brownlow, his performance being a sound, well-studied, and compact piece of work. Mr. Harvey Braban looks the handsome Harry Maylie to the life, his interpretation being excellent. Monks is made villainous enough by Mr. Ashton Pearse, and the small part of Dr. Sime is happily entrusted to Mr. E. C. Buffum. The members of the gang of thieves under the control of Fagin are all adequately caricatured. The Artful Dodger of Mr. Tom Macfarlane is excellent, and the Charlie Bates and Tom Chitling of Messrs. Edgar Coyne and Christmas Grose are all that could be desired. Giles finds a careful exponent in Mr. Miller Davis, and Mr. Horace Adams as Brittles causes no little amusement. The minor characters are all in good hands, and help to give a finish to the artistic whole. The Oliver Twist of Miss Gertrude Lang is a very clever bit of acting, although perhaps her sudden outburst of grief is a little too loudly expressed. Miss Hutin Britton's Nancy is a well-studied embodiment, the despair and terror of the unhappy creature being realistically assumed. Miss Hilda Dick is a charming Rose Maylie, and acts sympathetically. Mrs. Maylie finds an excellent exponent in Miss Elsie Carew, and the Mrs. Bedwin of Miss Helen Boucher deserves favourable mention. Betsy is well impersonated by Miss Edith King, and Miss Betty does everything possible with the part of Mrs. Bumble. Some pretty music is rendered by the orchestra under the bâton of Mr. J. H. Wilson.

CORONET THEATRE.

"THE GEISHA."

At the pretty Notting Hill Gate theatre this week Mr. Mouillot's company is appearing in the delightful tale of a tea-house by Owen Hall, with music by Sidney Jones, entitled The Geisha. It has lost none of its pristine charm and freshness, and some of the songs—such as "The Amorous Goldfish," "The Jewel of Asia," and "Star of My Soul"—will always rank among the happiest efforts of this talented composer. Miss Bessie Allayne makes a most lovable and winsome little tea-girl, O Mimosa San, and she is in fine voice, doing full justice to the excellent material at her disposal. Miss Florrie Saunders is very bright and engaging as the frolicsome Molly Seymour, and sings and dances with charm and vivacity. Mr. Cyril Thompson makes an excellent Reginald Fairfax, and he acts and sings as the tickle naval officer with admirable effect. Mr. S. Lockridge presents a highly commendable portraiture of Dick Cunningham, and sings well. Messrs. Ryton Hoare, Stephen Hall, and Miss Blanche Brown (a cheeky young "Middy") are all well in the picture as young officers on board H.M.S. Turtle. Miss Aubrey Ashton is a fine, handsome Lady Constance Wynne, and Misses Elsie Brocklebank, Marie Gilbert, and Ruby Latham are her guests. Mr. Edward Carlton is excruciatingly funny in the fine, "fat" part of Wun Hi, and keeps the audience in fits of laughter by his droll antics. Mr. Lionel Braham as the Marquis Imari displays a considerable fund of dry humour. Mr. Edgar Ward does well as Captain Katana, and Misses Lydia Bland, Daisy Browne, Victoria Jennings, and Maud Lloyd, among others, figure as Geishas. Miss Violet Kenyon enacts the part of O Juliette Diamante very creditably. Mr. F. Leslie Moreton is the general manager for the company. Mr. James La Fane and his assistant, Mr. George Russell, stage-manage the show. The orchestra is under the direction of Mr. Francis G Knowles, Mus.Bac.

THE ELEPHANT AND CASTLE.

On Monday, April 2, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Walter Melville, entitled
"THE WORST WOMAN IN LONDON."

Mr. Walter Melville's great Adelphi success, The Worst Woman in London, is being presented here this week. Excellently staged and enacted by a really capital company, the piece was received on Monday evening with unstinted applause. Miss Florence Dalton as Frances Vere, the worst woman in London, must be credited with a powerful impersonation of the part. In the many intensely dramatic scenes she thoroughly earns the hisses of the audience, who, however, by their after-applause, greatly appreciate her efforts. Mr. Wallace Campbell as the hero, Jack Felton, is effective, and with Miss Effie Bartlett as Ruth Milford speedily wins the sympathies of the house. As the father, James Milford, Mr. H. H. Barrington is excellent. A capital piece of character acting is tendered by Mr. H. W. Monte as Hugh Drayton, the father of Frances Vere. Matilda Parker, a domestic servant with matrimonial tendencies, is brightly played by Miss Florence Lovell, and as Bertie Heslop, who succumbs to her wiles, Mr. George Cranby is extremely humorous. Mr. Paul Barry Sewers in the lengthy part, Vincent Lyle, is satisfactory. As Philip Armstrong, a ruined gambler, Mr. Leonard Booker by his powerful acting gains the sympathies of all. Jane Nogood is cleverly portrayed by Miss Katie Lawrence; Miss Florence Walkington is well impersonated by Miss Jessie Wilton; Mr. Cass is satisfactory as Fred Thornborough; as Thomas, a sweep, Mr. G. Thomas is successful; and Mr. Walter Clarke is smart and businesslike as Detective Curson. Master Willie Crisp is quite happy as a stableboy. Other characters connected with the circus scene are satisfactorily sustained by Messrs. Percy Dawsone, Fred Smith, Willie Harlee, James Wantage, T. Atkinson, F. Winstanley, B. Featherstone, H. Manners, John Lee, George Fairfield. As policemen and firemen Messrs. A. Rushen, Thomas Oldfield, W. Fortescue, and G. Pikey deserve mention.

GRAND THEATRE, FULHAM.

On Monday, April 2, the Play, in Four Acts, by Hall Caine, entitled
"THE PRODIGAL SON."

Mr. Arthur Collins has organised a capital company to take The Prodigal Son on tour, and playgoers at the Fulham this week have had an opportunity of seeing the Drury Lane success under excellent conditions. It is obviously impossible for a touring company to reproduce the magnificent setting of the original production, but nothing essential has been omitted, and the play itself is as intensely human and impressive on the smaller as it was on the greater stage. The scenery and dresses are fresh and handsome, and the principal parts are in capital hands. The really heroic figure of the story, Magnus Stephensson, is impersonated by Mr. Henry Renouf, whose powerful acting is as impressive as his fine physique. Mr. Norman Partriege scores a decided success in the exacting rôle of the prodigal Oscar, and his work is really strong and emotional. Mr. Henry George acts with quiet dignity as the Governor, and Mr. Frank Collins makes an excellent Oscar Neilsen. Mr. Howard Russell is good as Dr. Olsen, and Mr. Phillips as the Sheriff, Mr. Herbert Hewetson as Neils Finsen, Mr. Fred Grove as the Pastor, and Mr. Bryan Daly as the Director of the Casino all fitted their parts capably. Of the feminine parts, that of Thora is taken by Miss Lily Hall Caine, who will add to her reputation by her powerful yet tender impersonation of the wronged wife, as well as by her fresh and charming acting in the character of the girl Elin. Miss Cecil Cromwell is excellent as the sist[illegible] Helga, the evil genius of the erring Oscar, a[illegible] shows great dramatic power. To Miss Alma Murray we must give a word of praise for her fine work as Anna, the mother of Magnus and Oscar, and the pointed homely sayings of Aunt Margret are admirably brought out by Miss Mima Renouf. Altogether, the management is to be congratulated on the success of the attempt to reproduce in miniature, so to say, the great play which did so well at Drury Lane.

THE CROWN, PECKHAM.

On Monday, April 2,
the Play, in Five Acts, by C. M. S. McLellan, entitled
"LEAH KLESCHNA."

We have a great attraction here this week in the first visit of Mr. Charles Frohman's company in the popular success, Leah Kleschna. The play is very interesting and strikingly original, and, as it is excellently cast, it is no wonder that very large audiences have been the rule. Miss Haidee Wright makes a great impression as Leah Kleschna, the gradual dawning of a better nature in the character of the girl-thief being admirably shown. Her great scene in the second act, when she is discovered by Paul Sylvaine robbing the safe, is especially well rendered. Mr. Robert Pateman as Kleschna presents a most striking portrait of an extremely complex character, the man's love for his daughter, his dauntless courage, his fierce outbursts of passion being all most graphically delineated by this sterling actor. Mr. J. Graeme Campbell is a dignified and restrained Paul Sylvaine, his difficult scenes with Leah Kleschna being admirably rendered. Mr. Cyril Harcourt achieves a great success in the unthankful rôle of the dissolute rake, Raoul Berton, contributing a character sketch which is of the utmost value to the play. Mr. E. H. Brooke, to whom belongs the credit of stage-managing the production, is a capital representative of the faithful Schram. Mr. Roland Daniel is a mercurial and amusing Valentine Favre, whose sweetheart, Sophie Chaponniere, is brightly presented by Miss Dorothy Sidney, the two artists making the most of the small comedy element in the piece. General Berton is played in appropriately pompous fashion by Mr. Kenneth Rivington, and Miss Haidee Hemsley and Miss Ethel Marryat are good as Claire Berton and Mme. Berton respectively. The scenery is excellent, the view of the lettuce fields in the last act being a very pretty piece of brushwork.

THE STANDARD.

On Monday, April 2,
the Musical Comedy, in Two Acts, entitled
"FLORODORA."

Still in the prime of its popularity, Florodora is proving a great attraction at the Standard this week, and is affording much delight to the audience at each performance. The company contains a carefully-selected body of players, and on Monday frequent encores had to be given before the desires of the audience were satisfied. The piece is capitally mounted and staged, and is in every way a great success. Heavy responsibilities rest upon the shoulders of Mr. Gus Danby, who is called upon to portray the many eccentricities of Anthony Tweedlepunch, but he proves himself quite equal to the task, and with his dry humour brings out every point in a manner which is positively irresistible. Mr. Edward Chester shows ability in his impersonation of Cyrus W. Gilfain, the proprietor of the island of Florodora. As Frank Abercoed Mr. Edward Crossland is decidedly good. He used his fine voice to good effect, and his rendering of "The Shade of the Palm" is greatly appreciated. Mr. Harry Perry admirably sustains the rôle of Captain Arthur Donegal and Mr. C. A. James does well as Leandro. Gilfain's clerks have satisfactory impersonators in Mr. Frank Green, Mr. Beaulah Coe, Mr. Claude Farrow, Mr. Geoff Arthur, and Mr. Leonard Robson. These gentlemen assist materially in the very bright rendering of "Tell me, pretty maiden." The heroine, Dolores, is exceedingly well played by Miss Gladys Elvey. She does every justice to the part, and sings in a manner worthy of warm praise. Miss Florence Hersee is a sweet and charming Angela Gilfain, and deserves special mention for her song and dance in Act 2. Miss Kate Leicester contributes a delightful performance as Lady Holyrood; her songs, "Jack" and "I've an inkling," being well received. The minor characters are all in safe hands, and the orchestra and chorus, under the bâton of Mr. J. G. Hahn, render capital service.

DALSTON THEATRE.

On Monday, April 2,
the Comic Opera,
"THE LITTLE MICHUS."

Mr. George Dance's company is meeting with a positively great reception at the Dalston Theatre this week in its representations of the comic opera The Little Michus. The book, an adaptation of A. Vanloo and G. Duval's work, by Henry Hamilton, provides plenty of fun, a quality which a Dalston audience fully appreciates; and the lyrics by Percy Greenbank and the music by André Messager materially add to the general delight experienced. The Little Michus are represented by Miss Alice Coverick as Marie Blanche and Miss Gracie Sinclaire as Blanche Marie. These representations are in every sense of the term artistic, and the duet, which constitutes a supplication to St. Valentine, is one of the features of the musical portion of the entertainment. Special reference must be made to Mlle. Marjorie as Mlle. St. Cyr, a famous dancer of the period. Mlle. Marjorie, by her graceful divertissement, certainly maintains the reputation of the famous lady she represents. Mr. Gerald Clifford as Gaston, the young soldier-lover, has a gallant bearing, and sings well. The humour of the piece is drolly emphasised by Mr. Leslie Holland as the General des Ifs; and the quaint acting of Mr. T. E. Conover as Pierre Michu and Miss Florence Hylton as Madame Michu also aids the success. Mr. D. FitzGibbon as Artistide Vert, an amorous shop assistant, and Mr. Cecil Clayton as Bagnolet, the General's busy servant, lend material help in sustaining the briskness of the action. The representation is noteworthy for its general smartness.

THE TERRISS.

On Monday, April 2, the Drama, by Henry Pettitt, entitled
"A WOMAN'S REVENGE."

This favourite old Adelphi piece, one of the best of the late Henry Pettitt's plays, is attracting good audiences to the popular Rotherhithe house. Mr. Ashley Page, as the young barrister Frank Drummond, scores a great success, and his varying fortunes are followed with interest by the audience, with whom he has long been a favourite. His acting, especially in the exciting trial scene in the fourth act, reaches a very high level. Miss Marion Denvil ably seconds him as the distracted and unfortunate yet faithful Mary Lonsdale, her acting being marked throughout by her usual charms of voice and manner. That sterling comedian Mr. Johnny Chippendale extracts much of genuine fun out of the rôle of the eccentric Dick Chilton, and Miss Mattie Everett creates great amusement as Dick's sweetheart Lottie Bromley. Mr. Richard Norton gives a good study of villainy as Robert Overstone, and John Overstone becomes an excellent character-sketch in the able hands of Mr. S. Major Jones. Mr. John Sargent has an arduous rôle to play as the malignant and revengeful solicitor Jephtha Grimwade, and scores very heavily, thoroughly earning by his able impersonation the execrations of the cheaper portions of the house. Little Mary is well played by little Florrie Green. Mr. H. J. Barrett is a dignified Judge, and Mr. E. J. Collins ably enacts the Counsel for the Crown. Miss Rosemary Rees is good as the adventuress Mabel Wentworth, and Miss Maggie Lindsay, Mr. Sidney James, Mr. Will Skett, Mr. Alf Peters, and Mr. John Adams make up the remainder of a most efficient cast.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

On Monday, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Frederick Melville, entitled
"THE BEAST AND THE BEAUTY."

Mr. Melville's latest and stirring production is commanding good houses this week at the Kingston playhouse, where the capable company appearing in it commenced a six days' engagement on Monday evening. The play, with its vivid contrasts and sensational incidents, was evidently to the liking of the audience, who gave it an unmistakably favourable reception. Mr. Fred D. Davis is cast for the part of the headstrong Jack Barrymore, and gives a very good account of himself in it. Mr. Bernard Mervyn as the villain, Henry Denver, is also well placed, and Mr. Bernard J. Liell makes an acceptable Earl of Loman. The fun of the piece is ably contributed to by Mr. Will Corrie, who plays the aspiring light-weight champion, Tom Chicken. Miss Alice Bowes makes a charming Violet and Miss Georgette Thierry plays with distinction in the thankless part of Delilah Vane. Others deserving of favourable mention are Mr. Ronald Adair as Ned Samson, Miss Mamie Rendle as Clarice, and Miss Jessie Denvers as Mimi. The play was admirably staged, the scene representing a prize-ring being particularly effective.

THE WEST LONDON.

On Monday, April 2,
the Drama, in Four Acts, by Arthur Shirley and E. Hill-Mitchelson, entitled
"I DEFY THE WORLD."

Very much to the taste of Mr. William Bailey's patrons is the dramatic fare provided for them this week in the shape of Mr. Julian Malvern's capable company in I Defy the World, a drama packed with startling incidents and stirring situations. The chief honours fell on the stalwart shoulders of Mr. Lewis Gilbert as Leon Darville, a part he enacted with distinctive force and reality, his various disguises being worthy of Sherlock Holmes at his best. Mr. Frank Eversley was sufficiently convincing as Count de Beaulieu; Mr. Alfred Denning was duly impressive as General Delaporte; Mr. Charles Conway was full of animation as Laroche; whilst Mr. Charles M. Julian scored a complete success by reason of his lively whimsicalities as Samuel Wozzle. Miss Trixie St. Albans was sympathetically graceful as Pauline Delaporte; Miss Maud Lillian was lively and energetic as Marie Wozzle; and Miss Maud Malvern interpreted the rôle of Blanche Darville in such a way as to completely win the favourable verdict of the audience. The piece was staged and mounted in a most effective manner, the scenery being especially noticeable. Mr. Charles M. Julian is the general manager for Mr. Malvern, and Mr. James Sinclair, as usual, looks after Mr. Bailey's interests in front.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BERLIN, THURSDAY, April 5.—Mr. Shaw's latest production met with a very cordial reception, and deservedly so. It is brimful of wit, irony, persiflage, and double-meanings—in a word, a genuine Shaw. The piece has one serious fault—it is too long—and the patience of even the author's warmest admirers was tried, while a few malcontents expressed their feelings without any reserve. The critics, as usual, are divided in their opinions, one declaring the author had intended and dreamed great things, and it was a pity he had fallen into the burlesque tone. Personally, I am not so sure that Mr. Shaw has entertained any lofty aims with regard to his play; it conveys to my thinking rather the impression that he has thoroughly enjoyed himself poking fun at everybody and leading the critics—to use a colloquial expression—by the nose. Plot there is none to speak of, and most of the characters are amusingly-drawn caricatures—caricatures, be it understood, that speak very smart, up-to-date wisdom at times. Caesar is particularly modern, a well-educated, eminently respectable, jovial old gentleman, of radical tendencies, and a philosopher withal, while Cleopatra is represented as a wild little tiger-cat of sixteen—sensuous, cowardly, and false, as a result of the tyranny of her nurse, the "Reichsamme" Hatateeta. The character of Cleopatra is the best of all in the piece, upon which Mr. Shaw has evidently expended much pains. Caesar's private secretary, Britannus, is a delightfully-comical figure, with his English prudery, in whose portrayal the author has let himself go with visible enjoyment. A really fine scene is the meeting of the victorious emperor with the sleeping Cleopatra at the foot of the Sphynx, where she has hidden herself in fear. On awakening she is conducted to her palace by the good-natured conqueror, who teases her with stories of the savage Romans, and in the end discovers himself as the all-dreaded Caesar. The love-scene is of short duration, Caesar almost forgetting to say farewell to Cleopatra at the end, but he promises to send her the man of her dreams—the handsome young Mark Antony. Herr Siegfried Trebitsch has had the translation of the play, and he appears to have done his work conscientiously and with skill. As to the interpretation, it was by no means even. Frau Gertrud Eysoldt had in Cleopatra a rôle eminently suited to her peculiar talents—she has had many similar ones, to wit, Electra and Salome—and her rendering was a grand one, every phase of the character, from the shy child, the self-willed, savage girl, to the imperious queen, being depicted without a flaw. Less successful was Herr Steinrück in his impersonation of Caesar, whom he made too little imposing, and neither was Herr von Winterstein so good as usual. Fräulein Wangel did her best with the uncanny horror of a "State nurse," and Herr Marlow's Britannus was a praiseworthy rendering. The mounting was in good taste and unusually fine, the desert scene by night and break of day being quite beautiful.

AT the Lessing, Ernst Rosenow's three-act comedy Kater Lampe has been revived with the best results. It was first produced at the Berliner some three years ago, and was at the time fully detailed in your columns. The piece has much in common with Hauptmann's "thieves'-comedy" Der Biberpelz, which satirises red-tapeism and provincial officialdom in this country. It is scarcely necessary to say that the Lessing company did Kater Lampe greater justice than the Berliner, in the nature of things, and a splendid cast was got together. Frau Else Lehmann, as a Saxon village Lady Macbeth, was irresistibly comical, and Herren Patry, Meinhard, Ziener, and others were quite as good. The audience laughed till it cried, and applauded frantically, so that there is every likelihood of the piece enjoying a lengthy run.

THE Royal Schauspielhaus was closed on the anniversary of the first Emperor's birth last week, by the Kaiser's orders—meaning a sacrifice of some thousand marks on the shrine of "Pietät." The following day, Otto Ludwig's gloomy play Der Erbförster was revived after a long interval. It was scarcely worth the trouble expended upon it, for the dust of ages has collected thickly upon it, and no amount of care can make the piece anything but old-fashioned and—for the younger generation, at any rate—uninteresting.

AT the New Philharmonic a one-act operetta, Yvette, by Karl Heins, was produced last week, meeting with a very cordial reception. There is nothing much in either music or text that calls for comment, both being of mediocre quality. The composer has arranged with some amount of skill a good many apparently familiar melodies in the Viennese operetta style to which we have grown accustomed in the course of years. Fräulein Mary Hagen and Herr Wellhof—whose services were obtained from the Theatre des Westens—gave their best, which is very good indeed, and to their clever renderings of the chief rôles the success of the evening was principally due.

THE Komische Oper is now running Figaro's Hochzeit in company with Don Pasquale and the inexhaustible Hoffmann's Erzählungen. Mozart's delightful work was produced with an excellent cast, and though the performance could not—as we had been led to expect—bear comparison with those of the Royal Opera, it was nevertheless a creditable one. The chief fault was the over-hurrying of the the overture and several other important numbers under Kapellmeister Cassier's otherwise skilful conductorship.

AT the Apollo Theatre Das bummelnde Berlin—burlesque in three scenes, by Benno Jacobson—is still drawing well. It is full of laughable hits, and is capitally acted. The author has made use of the following idea: Three merry Berliners—an unappreciated painter, composer, and inventor respectively—fall in with a melancholy British Lord, who offers them anything they may propose if they can only succeed in making him laugh. They show him Berlin in all its phases, but the blasé Lord only yawns in their faces, and sighs. How he is made to laugh must be seen to be appreciated—for of course he does laugh in the end. One of the best scenes is where three excellent comic actors appear as Saharet, Isadora Duncan, and Cléo de Mérode; the audience roared with laughter at their drolleries, and applauded by open stage. The burlesque—which comes on at 9 o'clock—is preceded by a good variety programme.

MR. NAT GOODWIN, we are informed, has secured the American rights of Mr. Gilbert Dale's comedy, What Would a Gentleman Do? produced at the Apollo Theatre in the autumn of 1902.

"THE SCOTTISH BLUEBELLS."

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

The book and lyrics of this new play have been written by Mr. David James; and the music has been composed by Dr. F. Osmond Carr, who conducted in person on the opening night. Mr. Harry Fischer, the new manager of this popular theatre, is responsible for the production of the piece; and on the opening night the house was crowded in every part with a most enthusiastic audience, whose appreciation and enjoyment of the new comedy were marked in no uncertain fashion. The scene of The Scottish Bluebells is laid entirely in Edinburgh, with strong local colour successfully supplied. Thus the story appropriately opens in West Princes-street Gardens (an effective bit of stage-setting with a view of the Castle in the background); and the plot, which is planned on simple lines, concerns itself mainly with the search for a missing Scottish heiress, whose mother had been a singer in a concert party touring in India. There is nothing to trace the girl by except a packet of old letters, a few faded bluebells, and the melody of a song which her mother used to sing. A professional pedigree expert, Mr. Montague Migg, appears on the scene in search of the lost one amongst the gay crowd in the Gardens. After getting on various wrong scents Migg at last—in the second act, which passes at a grand charity bazaar and fancy fair held in the Waverley Market—succeeds in establishing the identity of Maisie Maie, the adopted daughter of ex-Bailie Maie, as the missing heiress. Maisie is loved by Guy Chalmers, a poor student of good family, who imagines, however, that he has cause to doubt her attachment to him. So for a time the course of true love runs with its proverbial lack of smoothness. But everything comes right in the end; Guy marries his Maisie and goes, to be happy with her ever after, as chief of the staff to his friend and fellow-student, Prince Izan, a Persian potentate. This is the barest outline of Mr. James's book, which contains much smart dialogue, interspersed with plenty of catchy songs both sentimental and humorous, and well besprinkled with topical hits. Dr. Carr's music is light and sparkling, and includes several very melodious numbers, especially the "Bluebells" air, which is sure to become a general favourite.

For the presentation of the piece an excellent company has been brought together. As the student-lover, Mr. Arthur Cartwright makes a handsome figure, singing and acting with all needful verve and passion. Miss Hettie Gale looks very sweet and pretty as the heroine Maisie, her ditties being sung with much taste and feeling. "Sweet Scottish Bluebells," in particular, is very charmingly rendered. Mr. Peter D. Bermingham plays the part of the ex-Bailie very unctuously on the familiar lines of comic stage Scotchman; and he is ably supported by Mme. Kate Sherry, as Elspeth, his wife, whose singing is cultured and expressive. The two up-to-date daughters, Jennie and Maggie, somewhat ashamed of their homely mother, are capably enacted by Miss Kitty Clinton and Miss Delia Cherry. In the rôle of Montague Migg, Mr. Leon Simpkin shows considerable ability as a low comedian; and the Hon. Bobby of Mr. Harry Stuart is a thoroughly humorous delineation of a dude. The part of Prince Izan affords Mr. Clifford Morgan the opportunity of displaying his undoubted talent both as actor and singer; and two smaller parts of Rory, an Irishman, and Hamish, a Highland policeman, are aptly filled by Mr. Dan O'Connor and Mr. Alec Stewart. An exceedingly smart performance is that given by Miss Elsie Steadman as Mrs. Melton Mowbray, a husband-hunting young widow; and the rôles of an American lady journalist and a Highland servant girl are cleverly sustained by Miss Edith Carlyle and Miss May Anderson. The cast further includes a large number of students, Cranston and Elliott Girls, flower-girls, visitors, &c., besides the celebrated Monte Carlo troupe of dancers. Praise is due to the artistic staging of the entire production. Of the two sets, the West Princes-street Gardens scene was painted by Mr. J. K. M'Lennan, and the Charity Bazaar by Mr. Edmund Sift; and both do credit to local workmanship. The dresses by Messrs. Elkan Bros., London; Mme. Dupont, London; Mr. Morris Angel, London, and others are fresh and fashionable, quite a feast for the ladies.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC.

The Royal Academy of Music gave a most successful orchestral concert at Queen's Hall on Tuesday afternoon, when two new and interesting works by students were introduced. Mr. Montague F. Phillips may be heartily commended for his clever "Idyll" MS. for orchestra, a composition full of poetical feeling and melody, a quality rare indeed among modern young composers. Mr. Phillips has evidently a strong inclination towards the great composer Humperdink, clearly shown in the able scoring for the wind instruments; and the audience speedily recognised the ability of the artist by several hearty recalls. In the other new production, entitled "Two Poetic Illustrations" MSS. for orchestra, Miss Eleanor C. Rudall has endeavoured to musically illustrate two little poems, the first dealing with ocean waves and a storm at sea and the other representing a calm on the sea with mermaids dancing and singing. It was evident Miss Rudall had here a difficult subject, much being expected from the poem describing a storm at sea, but Miss Rudall may be warmly commended for her graceful and imaginative music to the second poem. The vocal side of the programme included "Mignon's Song," by A. Goring Thomas, sung with great intelligence by Miss Clara Smith, the recit. and aria, "Salve, Dimora," from Faust, rendered with taste and expression by Mr. Thomas Gibbs, who was ably supported by the violin obbligato of Mr. Rowsby Woof, and Saint-Saëns' air, "O Love, from thy power," from "Samson and Delilah," given with a fair amount of dramatic power by Miss Edith Kirk. Mr. F. Percival Driver was somewhat overtasked in the difficult scena and aria "I fain would hide," from Weber's Euryanthe.

The instrumental items heard were of special interest, Miss F. Margaret Bennett playing Saint-Saëns' Concerto for pianoforte in C minor with remarkable success, and being most carefully seconded by the orchestra, under the conductorship of Sir A. C. Mackenzie. The young artist, who showed great technical ability, was at the close warmly applauded by the large audience. Mr. Walton O'Donnell also showed great intelligence in his playing of the first movement of Dvorák's Concerto in B minor for violoncello, and Miss Hilda F. M. Barnes may be praised for her playing of the first movement of Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto, o.p. 64, Miss Jessie Bowater being responsible for the other two movements. The young students who played in the orchestra, ably conducted by Sir A. C. Mackenzie, also deserve favourable mention.

PLAYERS OF THE PERIOD.

MR. FREDERICK SARGENT.

Mr. Frederick Sargent has been on the stage seven years. He was educated at the Quaker School, Ackworth, and Durham University, and before commencing life seriously as an actor he put in a year at provincial journalism. In March, 1899, Mr. Sargent began his theatrical career under particularly pleasant auspices, being engaged by Mrs. Louis Calvert to play the juvenile parts in Proof and The Lyons Mail. A six months' tour with Mrs. Calvert was followed by a year with Mrs. Bandmann-Palmer's Shakespearean Répertoire company, in which Mr. Sargent was a "generally useful" man, combining the duties of assistant-stage-manager with the playing of several parts nightly. In something more than a thirty weeks' tour he played about as many parts in varying lines of business. The occasional "purple patches" of the engagement consisted in going on for big understudies, generally at a few hours' notice. In May, 1900, through the kind offices of Mrs. Calvert, his theatrical sponsor, he was engaged by Miss Julia Neilson to play in a suburban tour of As You Like It, with herself, Mr. Mollison, Mr. Louis Calvert, and other noted artists. A season at the Haymarket Theatre followed, when he had the satisfaction of playing Mercer in the original cast of Sweet Nell of Old Drury. Tiring very much of small parts, he returned to the country to play Tigellinus in Mr. Wm. Greet's Sign of the Cross company. Another short season in town followed, Mr. Sargent being in the cast of that clever comedy from the French, Lion-Hunters, when it was produced at Terry's Theatre.

In the autumn of 1901 he made a definite attempt at leading business, supporting Miss Lillian Herries in a fine répertoire of plays, chiefly modern masterpieces. His parts included Dunstan Renshaw in The Profligate, Lucas Cleeve in The Notorious Mrs. Ebbsmith, Philip Selwyn in A Fool's Paradise, Armand Duval in Camille, and Rawdon Crawley in a version of Becky Sharp. Messrs. Edwardes and Frohman next engaged Mr. Sargent to play one of the juvenile parts in the first tour of Are You a Mason? A chance call at Mr. Ben Greet's office in the summer of 1902 led to him being engaged to play Sherlock Holmes, a character he successfully sustained for two lengthy tours. Several special engagements followed, among them being a season at the New Theatre, when he was a member of Mrs. Patrick Campbell's company, playing Herr Holtzmann in The Joy of Living. About this period he also appeared as Henri de Flavigneul in There's Many a Slip, and Clarence Vane in Our Flat. The autumn of 1903 saw Mr. Sargent with Drury-lane drama, sustaining the part of the Boer boy, Paul de Lahne, in The Best of Friends. One or two special engagements early in 1904—including a few nights at the Court Theatre—and then in March he sailed for South Africa, where he remained for the remainder of the year, playing the romantic leads in "unlimited stock" with Mr. Leonard Rayne's company. The company opened with Human Nature, followed by The Cardinal, and then a series of plays, probably unequalled for variety of type in any stock season, concluding with productions of Romeo and Juliet, The Merchant of Venice, and The Lady of Lyons. In Africa Mr. Sargent played Romeo and Claude Melnotte for the first time, also a number of romantic melodramatic leads, such as Harold Armitage in The Lights of London, Cuthbert Cuthbertson in The Trumpet Call, Pharaoh Lee in The Gipsy Earl, Gaston in The Man in the Iron Mask, and Gilbert Vaughan in Called Back. Other favourite characters included Jacky in Sunday, Bernard Gray in A Sung Little Kingdom, and the Marquis de Beaumont in A Royal Divorce.

Shortly after his return from abroad in the early spring of 1905 Mr. Sargent was engaged for leading romantic work in Shakespeare and Old English comedy. During the summer he played in the Hon Mrs. Henniker's play The Courage of Silence, and several other special productions. Other parts played by him at this time include Othello, Brutus, Orlando, David Garrick, Claude Melnotte, and Charles Surface.

Though hard-worked as an actor, Mr. Sargent endeavours spasmodically to take an interest in playwriting. One of his efforts—a dramatic trifle, entitled Love's Comedy, taken from an original short story he wrote for the Newcastle Weekly Chronicle, and dramatised by himself and Mr. Leon M. Lion—was produced in the spring of 1904 at the Opera House, Leicester, and successfully toured in the provinces.

A MARVELLOUS child-actress named Wanda Radford is making a sensation in private circles in Berlin. The little girl, who is only eight years old, was born in Australia, and came to Vienna and Berlin with her mother on her way to London a few weeks ago. She acts the Potion Scene from Romeo and Juliet better than many an adult artist, while in lighter things, and in singing and dancing, she is equally clever. Little Wanda has had some elocution lessons in Adelaide, but she is chiefly self-taught, and does herself infinite credit. She is an uncommonly pretty and graceful child and thoroughly unspoilt, notwithstanding the adulation she is receiving. The small genius is going to London in May, and I hear Miss Ellen Terry and other artists of note are interesting themselves in her.

"THE ERA" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

"THE WIFE'S PERIL."

A New and Original Sketch, by Barry Williams, produced at the Surrey Theatre on Monday, April 2.

Sir Geoffrey Wrenfield	MR. WILLIAM GIFFARD
Lord Trenchard Dene	MR. ERNEST G. BATLEY
Joseph Fleishmein	MR. ROBERT DRYSDALE
Brooks	MR. WILTON FLETCHER
Estelle Boudain	MISS HELEN EDWINS
Lady Alicia Wrenfield	MRS. WILLIAM GIFFARD

Well staged and costumed, this admirable sketch received the stamp of approval from a crowded house on Monday. The plot is of sustained interest, and the period that of George III. Sir Geoffrey Wrenfield has been entrusted with important dispatches by the King, which the traitor, Lord Dene, who is assisted by a German spy named Fleishmein, is determined to obtain, in order to dispose of them to the French Government. Lord Dene comes to Sir Geoffrey's country mansion accompanied by Fleishmein, who is disguised as a monk; but their host is suspicious of their friendly overtures, and orders them out of his house. Being called away, he places his dispatches in a large chest, giving his wife the key, with strict orders not to allow any one access to the room. Fleishmein, who has been hidden in an alcove, makes desperate love to Lady Alicia's French maid, Estelle, and promises to marry her. In the midst of their love-making Lady Alicia returns, takes the dispatches out of the chest, and carries them to her room. Estelle accompanies her ladyship, leaving Fleishmein alone. He avails himself of the opportunity to lower a rope ladder from the window by which means Lord Dene re-enters the house. Estelle returning, is threatened with death if she raises an alarm, and Lord Dene proceeds to lock her up in an adjacent room. Fleishmein meanwhile opens the chest, and finds only some flagons of wine, and being busy drinking, does not see Sir Geoffrey enter by the window. The newcomer soon makes himself known, and a desperate fight ensues between Fleishmein and him. Sir Geoffrey proves the victor, and securely binds the German and places him in the chest. Assuming the rôle of the drunken Monk, he then hides in the alcove. Lord Dene and Lady Alicia return to the room at the same time. She defies him, and when he attempts force a snore from the alcove startles him. He is relieved when he sees whom he imagines to be Fleishmein intoxicated, and again attempts to embrace Lady Alicia. Sir Geoffrey staggers towards them, and gets between his wife and Dene, and when Dene tries to push him aside he finds himself in the firm grip of an outraged husband. The fall of the curtain at this point leaves the audience to surmise the fate of Lord Dene and his foreign ally.

As Lady Alicia, Mrs. William Giffard gives a portrayal full of winsome grace and womanly dignity that merits the highest praise. As Sir Geoffrey, Mr. William Giffard plays excellently. Mr. Ernest G. Batley, as Lord Dene, has little to do, but does that little well. Mr. Robert Drysdale, as the German, Fleishmein, acts his arduous part with firmness and decision. Miss Helen Edwins, as the pert French maid, Estelle, is delightfully arch and lively, while her broken English accent is pretty and effective. Mr. Wilton Fletcher, as the footman Brooks, fills this minor rôle carefully and well.

GREAT QUEEN-STREET THEATRE.

On Friday, March 30, the Comedy, in Four Acts, by Adolph L'Arronge, entitled "HASEMANN'S TOCHTER."

Anton Hasemann	WILLY KLEIN
Albertine	CHARLOTTE KELLY
Emilie	ELSE GADEMANN
Rosa	JOHANNA BECKER
Franziska	MARGARETE RUSS
Wilhelm Knorr	HANS STOCK
Hermann Körner	RICHARD STARNBURG
Baron von Zinnow	ERNST REICHER
Klinkert	BRUNO WIBURGER
Frau Klinkert	IDA WEISS
Eduard Klein	GEORG BASELT
Dr. Seiler	OTTOMAR BLOSS
Anna	HELENE MARSHALL
Fritz	GRETE HAHN
Lohmann	KARL BERGER
Bartsch	WILLY SCHMIDT

A real Teutonic flavour is possessed by the above-named play, which thoroughly delighted the audience at the German Theatre on the 30th ult. The contention that it is better for a maiden to be expert in domestic duties rather than accomplished in the arts is peculiar to no particular nation, but the piece is embellished with many characteristics of German home life which are made as agreeable to the English spectator as to his friend from the Fatherland. Anton Hasemann has three daughters whose up-bringing has been a constant source of dispute between him and his wife, Anton desiring to educate them in the duties pertaining to the household, and Frau Hasemann wishing them to receive a training far above their station. Many schemes are put into practice by the ambitious mother, but in the end Hasemann gains the day with regard to his one unmarried daughter, who is to receive an education quite after her father's own heart. Of the two other daughters, who are married and settled, the second one nearly compromises herself with a baron with whom she was formerly in love, but a reconciliation is effected, chiefly through the intervention of the father, whose parental care is agreeably evident throughout. The part of Hasemann revealed the capabilities of Herr Willy Klein to exceptional advantage. His characterisation of the homely florist was crowded with realistic touches that proved the artist throughout. Fräulein Margarete Russ acted in excellent light-comedy style as the youngest daughter, whose pettishness was realistically expressed. Johanna Becker gave an impressive rendering of Rosa, the second daughter; and the eldest was vivaciously played by Else Gademann. Charlotte Kelly acted with praiseworthy care as the overbearing wife; Herr Georg Baselt made a genuinely comic character of the suitor Eduard; and Herr Hans Stock should be singled out for praise in the part of Wilhelm, the husband of the eldest daughter.

BOROUGH THEATRE, STRATFORD.

On Monday, April 2, the Musical Comedy, entitled "THE WHITE CHRYSANTHEMUM."

Musical compositions are in high favour with Stratford playgoers, and it being the first visit to the Borough Theatre of The White Chrysanthemum, a very large and appreciative audience witnessed the performance on the opening night of the week. The members of Mr. Frank Curzon's well-selected company acquit themselves with entire credit, and the dressing and mounting of the piece leave nothing to be desired. Miss Ruth Lincoln very charmingly impersonates Sybil Cunningham, and her delightful vocalism is greatly enjoyed. Mr. O. E. Lennon achieves a notable success as the volatile Chinaman Sin Chong, and he works indefatigably in the cause of mirth. Much of his good work is in conjunction with Mr. Harry Paulton, jun., who scores heartily as the phlegmatic Private Perks, these two sharing in a duet which is one of the best things of the evening. Mr. Davy Burnaby exactly realises the idiosyncrasies of Lieut. "Chippy" Belmont, Lieut. Reginald Armitage has a manly and buoyant exponent in Mr. F. Pope Stamfer, and Mr. Fred Rolph plays in just the right vein as Admiral Sir Horatio Armitage. Miss Isabelle Dillon is a graceful and vivacious Cornelia Vanderdecken, and Miss Maud Harvey is a bright and pleasing exponent of Betty Kenyon. Other parts are all capably played.

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, April 5.—The Ambigu is not very fortunate in the plays it brings out. La Tourmente, the four-act drama by M. Maurice Landay, is very poor stuff, and I am not surprised to hear it is already withdrawn. The author committed the mistake of serving us another strike story. He should have remembered that we have already had too many of them. Moreover, the work is too violent, and the long tirades are too wearisome.

DOES M. Antoine want to imitate the small théâtres-à-coté, like the Capucines, the Grand Guignol, or the Théâtre Royal? It looks like it, for he has offered us six novelties in one night, all of them in one act. Three of them are rather amusing.

"BABOUCHE," by MM. Louis Marselleau and Jacques Lirla, bears a strong family likeness to Courteline's Boubouroche, except that it plays in a harem in Constantinople. The pretty Nazié has hidden a man in a wooden box, when Nedjib, her lord and master, enters. Nedjib has his suspicions, and wants to open the box, but the woman manages things so cleverly that although—and perhaps because—she taunts him to do so, he refuses, and begs her to forgive him he ever suspected her.

IN Depuis six mois M. Max Maurey shows us the household of M. and Mme. Floche, and we hear that the latter is never able to keep a servant longer than a day. She offers them high wages, and tells them they may do as they please, but all to no good. None of them will stay. Poor Mme. Floche, who cannot explain this anomaly, has no idea that it is her husband who is the cause of it all. It is he who bribes the servants to give notice the day after they have come. Why? Because if there are no servants he has an excuse to dine in the restaurant and enjoy himself. And his unsuspecting wife even pities him that he is compelled to take his meals out of doors. But everything comes to an end. One day a raw-boned girl, Gertrude, is engaged, and, as usual, her master at once gives her a sovereign to clear out. Gertrude takes the sovereign, but remains. And when M. Floche remonstrates with her, she tells him that she has not the slightest intention of helping him to deceive his wife. A man, she says, once got the better of her, and she now intends to assist her oppressed sex against the common enemy. And now M. Floche is worse off than ever, for not only is he tyrannised by his wife, but he is also in Gertrude's power. His happiness is at an end.

AN excellent translation was also given of MM. E. Fenn and R. Pryce's Op o' my Thumb. The delightful little act created a deep impression, and was admirably played by Mdlle. Jeanne Lion and M. Clerget.

AT the Sarah-Bernhardt Theatre, Le Frisson de l'Aigle will be withdrawn and replaced by a revival of L'Aiglon.

THE Théâtre de l'Œuvre announces, for the 11th inst., the première of Le troisième couvert, a new play by M. Alfred Savoir.

At the Variétés La Piste has not had a long run, for on the 9th we are promised the revival of M. Henri Lavedan's Nouveau Jeu, with Mme. Jeanne Granier and M. Brasseur, as before, in the principal rôles.

"LA TROUPE CHAMBERTIN" is the title of the new vaudeville, in three acts, to be brought out at the Folies Dramatiques in the course of next week.

THE PAVILION.

On Monday, April 2, the Military Drama, by Seymour Hicks and George Edwardes, entitled "ONE OF THE BEST."

Military drama appeals strongly to the patrons of this favourite Mile End house, and good business is being done this week with the engagement of Miss Elsie Roberts's company in that stirring play One of the Best, in which a legitimate story is unfolded in dialogue alternately humorous and pathetic. The strong situations in the various scenes, particularly the degradation in the third act and the reparation in the finale, provoke demonstrations of genuine enthusiasm. The scenery and mounting are admirable in every respect, and the groupings of the soldiers and their bands, together with the efficient management observable, reflect every credit upon the stage-manager, Mr. Cyril Melton, remembered for his past association with the Pavilion. Nothing better could be desired than the manly dignity of Mr. Frank Fenton, who gave a powerful rendition of Dudley Keppel, which won the hearty approval of a sympathetic audience. Mr. Escott Robson acted Phillip Elsworth in excellent style, and Mr. George Child was well suited as the venerable cleric, Dr. Penrose. Mr. Edward S. Earle was to be commended for his clear enunciation and martial bearing as Sir Archibald McGregor, and Jules de Cruchy was carefully played by Mr. Lionel West. Mr. Harry Edward Ray as Private Jupp kept the house in continual good humour, and a neat little sketch of Jason Jupp was presented by Mr. Bertram Zardi. Mr. Cyril Melton distinguished himself by his portrayal of Lieut.-General Coventry, and Mr. C. B. Vaughan was imposing as President of the Court Martial. Miss Elsie Roberts gave a delightful example of a loving, noble, and devoted woman in her representation of Mary Penrose, her love scene in the first act being very happy; and a smart and winsome Kitty Spencer was found in Miss Dorrie Roberts, Miss Ethel Sarjient being seen to advantage as Mrs. Spencer. Miss Ethel Royale supplied a well-defined exposition of the erring Esther Coventry; and the minor rôles were capitally played by Messrs. A. J. Vincent, Chris Dashwood, King Egerton, George Croydon, John Sinclair, Edward Rayne, and Fred Riddell. Mr. Leonard Maxwell is the courteous general manager for Miss Elsie Roberts.

11, QUEEN VICTORIA ST., LONDON, E.C.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

The Queen has sent to Miss Ellen Terry a beautiful diamond and ruby pendant as a souvenir of the forthcoming jubilee of the celebrated actress. The Royal gift was accompanied by a gracious message of personal congratulation. Miss Terry, who wished to mark the actual date of her jubilee by an appearance in a Shakespearean play, suggested to Mr. Otho Stuart that she should take part in the performance of Measure for Measure at the Adelphi. Mr. Stuart eagerly accepted the offer, and Miss Terry will therefore appear on Saturday, the 28th inst., by consent of Messrs. Vedrenne and Barker, as Francisca the Nun, a part which is of comparatively little importance, but which will give an Adelphi audience an opportunity of acclaiming the great actress at the most momentous period of her career.

Mr. Edward Terry hopes to get permission from the old members of the Dramatic and Musical Sick Fund to divide the balance available for distribution, viz., £55 2s. 5d., among (1) the Heads of Departments No. 5 Branch Theatrical Stage Employees' Sick and Benevolent Fund, (2) No. 1 Branch of the same society, (3) the Actors' Benevolent Fund, (4) the Actors' Orphanage Fund, (5) the Theatrical Ladies' Guild, and (6) the General Theatrical Operatives' Sick and Benevolent Fund.

Mr. J. M. Barrie's double effort attracted a representative audience to the Comedy on Thursday, when the notable gathering included the Duchess of Marlborough, the Hon. Lady Hardinge, Sir George Lewis, Mr. Goschen, and Sir Charles Rivers Wilson.

A matinée in aid of the Seaside Convalescent Hospital, Seaford, will be given on Thursday, May 24, at the New Theatre. Among those who have already generously promised to contribute are Misses Gertie Millar, Adrienne Augarde, Evie Greene, Louie Pounds, Sybil Arundale, Mabel Love, Amy Augarde, Winifred Hare, and Lily Elsie; Messrs. James Welch, Martin Harvey, Frank Cooper, Rutland Barrington, Hayden Coffin, Louis Bradfield, Richard Green, M. R. Morand, Courtice Pounds, Harry Lauder, Chirgwin, Johnnie Schofield, and J. P. Piddock.

Mrs. Beerbohm Tree was present with her two younger children at Mrs. Adair's juvenile fancy dress party, given on Wednesday at her house in Curzon-street. The two little girls represented Nero and Agrippina, every detail of their dress being the facsimile of the gorgeous apparel worn nightly by their parents at His Majesty's Theatre, and were the most picturesque figures of the party.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell will produce the adaptation from the French entitled The Whirlwind at the Theatre Royal, Birmingham, next week. There is much local interest in the reappearance of the distinguished actress, who will be supported by Mr. Julian Royce, Mr. Noel Pemberton, Mr. Lloyd Lowndes, Miss Mabel Beardesley—a sister of the famous artist Aubrey—Miss Nelly Mortyne, Mrs. C. Bradley, and Mrs. William Burchill. It is intended to present the play at a West End theatre in due course.

We regret to record the death on the 23rd ult. at 19, Eglantine-road, East Hill, Wandsworth, of Miss Ellen Standing, at the age of fifty. She was a sister of Mr. Herbert Standing and of the late Mr. Francis Standing (Frank Celli), the well-known operatic vocalist, who died in December, 1894. Miss Standing appeared as the aristocratic Lady Appleby in The Shop Girl and also as Lady Stilton in Little Miss Nobody (Mr. Tom B. Davis's Lyric Theatre company). When Mr. Geo. Alexander's provincial company went on tour in the autumn of 1900 she was the representative of Frau Teppich in The Prisoner of Zenda, also appearing in Rupert of Hentzau, In Days of Old, and The Princess and the Butterfly, and understudying Miss Rose Leclercq and Miss Olga Brandon.

In The Queen's Double at the Garrick Theatre she appeared as Mme. Campan, and on the production of the farcical comedy Why Brown Went to Brighton at the Kennington Theatre on May 5, 1902, she represented Mrs. Rushbrook. Other parts played by Miss Standing included Mrs. Brown in A Chinese Honeymoon (Mr. Geo. Dance's autumn tour, 1903), the Countess in The Orchid, and also the Countess in The Duke of Killicrankie. Miss Standing paid a visit to America in the autumn of 1902 as a member of Mrs. Campbell's company, playing the part of Lady Nottingham in Aunt Jeannie.

A peculiar explanation of the causes of coughing in theatres is given by a well-known Harley-street physician. "People in theatres," he says, "do not cough because they want to. They cough because they cannot hear. Two nerves connect the tympanum of the ear and the back of the throat, with the result that if the ears are strained through, say, an actor's faulty enunciation, it produces irritation in the throat, which sets up coughing. At this time of the year it is certain that in a theatre several members of the audience will start coughing directly the play begins. This, of course, makes hearing all the more difficult, and the audience generally, being unable to hear, start the nervous cough which shows how intently they are striving to catch all that is being said."

Mr. George Edwardes has sent the sum of £15 to the Secretary of the Actors' Benevolent Fund, Miss E. S. Cooper having forwarded to him that amount as the result of an amateur pantomime in which Mr. Edwardes had permitted the use of musical numbers which greatly contributed to the success. To the same beneficent object Miss Marie Studholme has added a further sum of £5 12s. 6d., which she has collected by means of her autographs.

The commemoration tablet of the new theatre in course of erection in Park-place, Cardiff, was laid on the 29th ult. by Mrs. Grace Redford, wife of Mr. Redford, the owner of the theatre. The stone, which faces the main entrance, and is let into the wall of the crush-room, is of white marble and bears a gilded inscription. Mrs. Redford, having prepared the bed with an inscribed silver trowel, presented by the architects, Messrs. Ernest Runtz and Ford, declared the stone well and truly laid. The niche above the commemoration stone will be occupied by an enamelled shield bearing the arms of Cardiff.

The building has made rapid progress, and it is hoped that the theatre will be opened to the public at the end of the year. The steelwork of the main circle, which embodies the dress and upper circles, has been fixed for some time, the main girders for the top circle are in their place, and the cantilevers are now in course of erection. The auditorium generally is within a few feet of the roof, the dressing-rooms are completed, and the roof is now going on. Every part of the house is provided with two additional staircases, and practically the whole of the structure is of fire-resisting material.

Mr. A. E. W. Mason, the actor M.P., delivered his maiden speech in the House of Commons on Thursday. He dealt with Colonial affairs in an earnest and impressive address, which evoked loud cheers. The Prime Minister was the first to offer congratulations.

Press and players met in friendly conflict on Tuesday, when the London Press Golfing Society scored a decisive victory on the Northwood course over the George Edwardes Golfing Society. Owing to the absence of Mr. H. H. Hilton (Press) and Mr. Fred Leslie, jun. (George Edwardes Golfing Society), only seven a side took part in the singles. For the foursomes, the teams were completed by the inclusion of Mr. H. Dane and Major A. E. Williams. The scores were:—Singles.—The London Press Golfing Society: Mr. F. H. Newnes, 1; Mr. J. Stewart Paton, 1; Mr. G. W. Beldam, 1; Mr. Emsley Carr, 1; Mr. G. L. Jessop, 0; Mr. Dudley Maddick, 0; Mr. A. P. Faulkner, 1—total, 5. The George Edwardes Golfing Society: Mr. A. Hart, ½; Mr. F. J. Foursomes.—The London Press Golfing Society: Mr. Newnes and Mr. Paton, 1½; Mr. Beldam and Mr. H. Dane, ½; Mr. Carr and Mr. Jessop, ½; Mr. Maddick and Mr. Faulkner, 0—total, 2. The George Edwardes Golfing Society: Mr. A. Hart and Mr. Hope, 0; Mr. Hooper and Major A. E. Williams, 1; Mr. Barrington and Mr. Evelyn, ½; Mr. J. D. Hart and Mr. Hatherton, 1—total, 2½.

Touting by theatrical lodging-house keepers was under discussion at the Bristol Police Court on Monday, when William Henry H. Dowding was summoned for trespassing at Temple Meads Joint Station. Counsel for the railway company said the case was of importance to the company, because it was really a question of touting at the station. Defendant was a lodging-house keeper, and particularly catered for theatrical people who came to Bristol on Sundays. He went to the station and tried to get them to lodge at his house, and on Sunday, February 18, he was seen several times at Temple Meads. He was asked to leave the station or produce some authority to show that he was there for some lawful business. Defendant refused, and a police-constable was fetched, and he was taken to Bedminster Police Station. He then said he could produce some authority, and on going to his house he produced a telegram telling him to reserve rooms. It was urged in defence that the baggage men from the theatres and hotel porters were allowed on the station, and defendant had an equal right to look after his customers. The Bench, however, convicted, and fined defendant 20s. and costs.

Mr. H. B. Irving has in rehearsal an adaptation in one act, by W. L. Courtney, of Robert Louis Stevenson's story "Markheim," which will be put on at the Lyric in front of Mauricette. The theme of "Markheim," which is included in the volume entitled "Merry Men and other Tales and Fables," is of the most weird description, and should prove dramatically effective.

The English rights of Les Plumes du Geai, M. Jean Jullien's four-act play, produced in February last at the Theatre Molière, Paris, have been acquired by Mr. Chas. Frohman. The story is that of a self-made millionaire, who tires of the adulation and praise of a legion of sycophants, and looks with envy upon the simple, but contented, existence of one of his clerks whom he visits in disguise. He falls in love with the poor man's cousin, and his affection is returned, but when he reveals his identity as that of the millionaire whose name is held in little reverence by his employees, the girl irrevocably refuses his offer of marriage.

Mr. John Hare, Mr. J. Comyns Carr, and Mr. Ernest Bendall, who were the judges in the competition at the Academy of Dramatic Art for the gold medal annually presented by Sir Squire and Lady Bancroft, have awarded the prize to Miss Mary Barton for the pre-eminence of her pantomime in L'Enfant Prodigue; and in recognition of the all-round excellence and versatility shown by Mr. Robert Atkins in his performance of Shylock, and of M. Pierrot in L'Enfant Prodigue, they desire to award and give him a special prize. The judges further specially commend the work of Miss Estelle Kaufmann in the excerpt from Richard III., and of Mr. Quentin Ayrault in The Times and in dancing.

Miss Nellie Mortyne has been engaged by Mrs. Patrick Campbell, who produces the new play, The Whirlwind, at Birmingham on Monday.

The General Committee of the fund organised to mark the occasion of Miss Ellen Terry's fiftieth year on the stage contains the names of the most eminent members of the dramatic and musical professions, the additions during the past week including those of Mr. Hamilton Aïde, Herr Hans Andresen, Mr. F. R. Benson, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Mr. John Davidson, Miss Rosina Filippi, Mr. Seymour Hicks, Miss Margaret Halstan, Mr. Gerald du Maurier, Miss Eva Moore, his Honour Judge Parry, Mr. G. R. Sims, Mr. Yorke Stephens, Miss Ellaline Terriss, and Mr. Brandon Thomas.

Popular actresses will appear again in the guise of charity at the Elizabethan Fair and Fête to be given in aid of the King's College Hospital Removal Fund at Lincoln's Inn on May 23 and two following days. Among the distinguished stall-holders and helpers will be Miss Ellen Terry, Mrs. Arthur Bourchier, and Mrs. Cyril Maude.

"A Bomb in Pink Bows," a new comedy by Edward Gulich, was given on Thursday evening at the Hampstead Conservatoire in aid of the Gordon Leisure Hour Club, which is to be opened shortly. Mr. Hugh Moss stage-managed, and the orchestra of the Royal Academy of Music, conducted by Mr. René Ortmans, played between the acts.

Mr. Cyril Maude has postponed the revival of The Second in Command at the Waldorf from this Saturday to next. A triple "first night" will thus be inevitable, Dorothy of the Hall at the New and The Dairy Maids at the Apollo being also down for that date.

The Forbes Robertson Dramatic Club will produce an original play in three acts, by Catherine Clivert-Young, entitled The Crimson Rambler at the Cripplegate Theatre on Saturday, the 28th inst., preceded at 7.45 by a new monologue by Clare Shirley entitled Married a Month.

Mr. H. Reeves Smith, who is on tour in the United States, is negotiating for the production of The Marriage of William Ashe in London in September. The play has done excellent business all through America, and is likely to repeat its success in England. Mr. Reeves Smith returns to this country in May.

At the next meeting of the Touring Managers' Association, which takes place on Wednesday, April 11, at the Tavistock Hotel, the question of instituting a new Touring Managers' Club will come up for discussion. Such an interesting topic is sure to draw a large meeting on Wednesday next.

A memorial tablet now decorates the walls of the cottage at Roncole where Verdi was born. There was no ceremony at its unveiling, the poor villagers, whom the illustrious composer had "remembered" in his will, and as a mark of whose gratitude the stone was to be set up, being the only persons present. Neither were there any speeches, prayers only being said by the curé.

A new drama, by Arthur Shirley and Sutton Vane, entitled The Spider and the Fly, will be produced by Mr. Ernest Carpenter at the Grand Theatre, Brighton, on Easter Monday.

Messrs. A. and S. Gatti and Mr. Charles Frohman have underlined Wednesday next for the production at the Vaudeville Theatre of the new musical comedy, The Belle of Mayfair, of which Captain Basil Hood and Mr. Charles H. E. Brookfield are the authors, the composer being Mr. Leslie Stuart. The production is additionally noteworthy from the fact that it marks Miss Edna May's return to the London stage after a prolonged absence in America. The cast, in addition, will consist of Messrs. Sam Walsh, Farren Soutar, Arthur Williams, Courtice Pounds, Charles Angelo, Charles Treede, and Mervyn Dene, and Misses Louie Pounds, Irene Desmond, Maud Boyd, Ruby Ray, Jane May, Camille Clifford, Lillian Digges, and Stella de Marney.

Mr. E. S. Willard has commissioned Mr. Kellett Chambers to write him a comedy for next season, the plot of which has been discussed and agreed upon between them. The central character is along lines quite different from those of any comedy rôle Mr. Willard has played in late years, but promises to have a popular interest equal to that of Professor Goodwillie in Barrie's The Professor's Love Story, and to possess all the vital quality, rugged force, and human interest of Cyrus Blenkarn in The Middleman.

Miss Ethel Barrymore, we regret to learn, is suffering from appendicitis at Boston, U.S.A., and will have to undergo an operation.

The Annual General Meeting of the Touring Managers' Association will be held at the Tavistock Hotel, Covent Garden, on Wednesday next, at 12.30.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil A. Melton have been specially engaged by Mr. Jack Haddon for a summer tour of Under the Russian Flag.

Mr. Charles Frohman is enjoying, with the production of The Beauty of Bath at the Aldwych receipts like unto none he has before experienced in his extensive connection with London theatres. In about a year he contemplates taking Miss Ellaline Terriss and Mr. Seymour Hicks, with their present organisation, to New York, presenting them for a season at the Knickerbocker Theatre there, in order to show New Yorkers one of the most gorgeous productions ever seen in the musical play line.

Under its new title, and with its new features, Messrs. Freeman Wills and Frederick Longbridge's Eugene Aram; or, After All, was sealed with success by an immense audience at the King's Theatre, Glasgow, on Monday night, and Mr. Martin Harvey scored a complete triumph as the picturesque hero; the clever and able company also coming in for liberal applause. No better sign could be desired of the pluck and energy of Mr. Harvey than in the matter of this new version of the Aram story. He had the original After All thoroughly reconsidered and revised, and now he has the satisfaction of knowing that in Eugene Aram; or, After All, he has a play which is received everywhere with the warmest appreciation. On Monday Mr. Harvey commences the last week of his Glasgow engagement with performances of A Cigarette-Maker's Romance, passing therefrom on Wednesday to Hamlet, which will be given on that evening, and on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

The officers and men of the Japanese battleship Katori have accepted the invitation of Mr. and Mrs. Calvert Routledge to visit His Majesty's Theatre, Barrow-in-Furness, to-day. Togo's heroes will be escorted to the theatre by the St. Andrew's Pipe Band in full Highland costume.

Mr. Tom Craven, who is now exceptionally careful in protecting his property, having suffered at the hands of pirates more than most people imagine, will shortly copyright a new and original dramatic episode, entitled Tim's Treasure Trove. This is founded upon a story of Mr. Craven's recently publisned in Household Words.

Mr. Charles Hermann, we are pleased to learn, has recovered from his late illness, and is about to take up with his old love, Uncle Tom's Cabin, in which he made his first appearance in this country.

"Forty Shillings," a comedietta in one act by F. A. Besant Rice, which will be produced at the Brixton Theatre on Monday, will include in the cast Miss Daisy Atherton (Mr. Willie Edouin's daughter) and Mr. Percy Foster. Forty Shillings will precede Our Flat, in which Miss Pollie Emery will be the Bella and Mr. Charles Steuart the Reginald. Mr. Besant Rice, who is the son of the late member of the celebrated firm of novelists of Besant and Rice, was for many years secretary to Mr. Pinero.

"Prunella; or, Love in a Dutch Garden," the pierrot play by Laurence Housman and Granville Barker, which is to be revived by Messrs. Vedrenne and Barker for a series of matinées at the Court Theatre on the 24th inst., will include in the cast Messrs. W. Graham Browne, Nigel Playfair, Trevor Lowe, Gordon Bailey, Edmund Gwenn, C. H. Croker-King, C. L. Delph, F. Cremlin, Edmund Gurney, Norman Page, and Lewis Casson, Mrs. C. Maltby, and Misses Valerie Salberg, Margaret Busse, Ruby Crawford, Hazel Thompson, Amy Lamborn, Agnes Hill, Clare Greet, Agnes Thomas, and Dorothy Minto.

Extraordinary enthusiasm was aroused at the Theatre Royal, Glasgow, last week, on the occasion of Mr. Norman V. Norman's first visit there. Call after call was given to the principals throughout the week, and on the Saturday night, at the conclusion of David Garrick, Mr. Norman, in returning thanks for the reception given him, said that it was a great number of years since he had last appeared in Glasgow, but he sincerely hoped that many months would not again elapse before he returned to the city. He was fully aware how difficult it was to obtain the approbation of a critical Scotch audience; but, once secured, that approbation was not forfeited so long as it was deserved. Mr. Norman's speech was received with the greatest applause.

Mr. Norman V. Norman will play Messrs. Freeman Wills and Frederick Langbridge's adaptation of Stanley Weyman's powerful romance, Count Hannibal—with Miss Beatrice Wilson as Clotilde de Vrillac and himself as Count Hannibal de Tavannes—at the Alexandra Theatre, Stoke Newington, during next week. Part of the action of the play takes place during the Massacre of St. Bartholomew, A.D. 1572, in the reign of Charles IX. of France

Mr. Herbert Shelley has just received a mail from New Zealand to say that Mr. Edward Lauri is playing to enormous business with Bill Adams, the successful musical comedy made popular here by Mr. Arthur Roberts. Mr. Lauri arrives in London in June.

The libretto of Castles in Spain, which is due at the Royalty on the 18th inst., is by Mr. Cosmo Hamilton, and the lyrics by Mr. Eustace Ponsonby. The music of the first act is from the pen of Mr. Harry Fragson, who will impersonate the principal character; but in order to give the proper tone to the second act, which is laid at Madrid, the services of two Spanish composers have been called in. Miss May De Sousa will appear as an American belle, and among others in the cast will be Miss Mabel Nelson, Mr. Johnny Danvers, Mr. Ivo Dawson and Mr. Hubert Willis.

Mr. Edward Compton has had a veritable tour of triumph since Boxing Night, having beaten his records at no less than seven important towns in the North and across the Border, and kept well up to his fine level of business at the many other theatrical centres visited. To-morrow he travels to London from Kilmarnock for a week's "rest," during which he expects to be exceptionally busy one way and another, one of his engagements being to sit to Mr. Herman G. Herkomer each day for his presentation picture, which is to be a three-quarter size painting in oil of the popular actor as David Garrick. On Easter Monday he will continue his tour at the Theatre Royal, Newcastle-on-Tyne, for nine weeks, finishing at Oxford on June 16, thus completing eleven months of genuine "hard labour."

Madame Blanche Marchesi, the celebrated prima donna, the Hungarian violinist Kurcsoy, and the Russian pianist Shapiro have been engaged for a classical concert on Good Friday at the Brixton Theatre. The advance booking is very heavy, a fact which must be very gratifying to Mr. Ernest Stevens and Murray Heriot, showing as it does that their efforts to provide in every way for their patrons are well appreciated.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin," of all plays, has just been banned in Kentucky from which State comes the intelligence that the Bill prohibiting the presentation of the adaptation of Mrs. Beecher Stowe's famous novel and similar plays to The Clansman has unanimously passed the Legislature. The Bill (according to our informant) was presented by Senator J. Embry Allen, of Lexington, in the interest of the Lexington Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. The Bill states that such plays as Uncle Tom's Cabin and The Clansman are harmful to the youthful minds of the younger generation.

Mr. F. R. Benson will go to Jersey with his principal company on Good Friday, opening at the Opera House there on the following day. On the 20th he will be at Guernsey, from which place he will go direct to Stratford-on-Avon for the purpose of starting his three weeks' Shakespearean Festival at the Memorial Theatre on April 23. For his historical plays he has just engaged the services of Mr. William Haviland and Miss Nora Lancaster.

The Easter pantomime at Belfast will be Dick Whittington, and will be produced at the Theatre Royal, on Saturday evening next, the 14th inst. The cast includes the celebrated Scotch comedian Mr. Neil Kenyon, Miss Harriet Fawn, Miss Winifred Reece, Miss Marie Gerrard, the Sisters Vincent; Messrs. Fred Acton, Tom Gilmore, Wattie Nugent, Browne and O'Mallie; the Lohrenz Quartette of Dancers, &c. The pantomime will be produced under the experienced personal supervision of Mr. Fred W. Warden (managing-director, Warden, Ltd.), in conjunction with Mr. Edward Marris.

"The Temptress," a play of the most powerful order, is the attraction at the New Prince's Theatre, Poplar, this week, and Mr. W. H. Hallatt's company is being welcomed heartily by the patrons of Mr. Clarence Saunes' fine theatre.

Mr. J. S. Metcalfe, the dramatic critic, who has been excluded by the American Theatrical Trust from its theatres, has entered a suit against twenty-seven managers, claiming £54,000 damages for alleged conspiracy.

Mr. Fred Locke, the well-known pantomime librettist, is lying seriously ill at his residence, Adelaide Cottage, Saltcoats, N.B. The sympathy of his many theatrical friends will be extended to his wife and family in their time of trouble and anxiety.

The Rev. Frederick Langbridge, rector of St. John's, Limerick, who, in collaboration with the Rev. Freeman Wills, is the author of The Only Way, After All, and the four-act romantic play Count Hannibal, which Mr. Norman V. Norman will produce at the Alexandra Theatre, N., next week, has just been appointed Canon of Limerick Cathedral. As Mr. Freeman Wills has the unusual honour of being a Lieut.-Colonel of Volunteers, Mr. Norman has rather a singular pair of authors for his new production.

Max Goldberg, author of The Rogues of the Turf, Secrets, and several other successes, has written a new drama which is to be produced in the autumn. Mr. Dan. F. Roe, who will head the company, is now booking dates. Much sympathy has been expressed with Mr. Roe in regard to the severe loss he sustained through the destruction of the scenery and wardrobe of The Voice of the People in the fire at the Theatre Royal, Wallsend, his property being uninsured.

Miss Lena Ashwell will produce The Bond of Ninon, of which particulars have already appeared in this column, at the Savoy, on Thursday, April 19. The full cast will comprise Miss Ashwell herself, Messrs. H. V. Esmond, Henry Ainley, Frank Tyars, Edward Sass, Eugene Mayeur, Vincent Sternroyd, Stanley W. Ashworth, Harry Welchman, St. Clair Bayfield, Henry Williams, Thomas Pauncefort, Leonard Calvert, Charles Terris, J. H. Walters, Lionel Scott, and Philip Darwin, Master Herbert Hollom, and Misses Laura Barradell, Evelyn D'Alroy, May Straker, St. Clair Swanzy, Lillian Mather, Beryl Mercer, Beatrice Terry, and Helen Ferrars. The play will be produced under the direction of Miss Clotilde Graves, the author, by Mr. Edward Sass.

"The Dairymaids" will make their entry into the Apollo Theatre on Saturday. The cast and particulars of the new musical comedy have already appeared here, and it only remains to wish Mr. Robert Courtneidge's production all prosperity.

Mr. Henry Tweedie has rented Stanley Hall, Disley, on the Golf Links, Cheshire, and has invited some of the principal members of Mr. Chas. Frohman's Leah Kleschna company to spend the Passion Week vacation with him. Golf, boating, and geological and antiquarian research can be freely indulged, and a most enjoyable time is anticipated.

"The Mirror of Time," a new one-act play by Cyril Wentworth Hogg, will be produced at the Theatre Royal, Manchester, on Monday, in front of Lucky Miss Dean.

Mr. Richard Vane has just concluded a several months' tour as Mark Antony, Richelieu, Iago, Macduff, &c., with Mr. Edmund Tearle, and is now fulfilling a special engagement, as Ned in Sowing the Wind, with Mr. Leigh Lovel.

Mr. F. R. Benson has specially engaged Mr. William Haviland to play the parts of Bolinbroke in Richard II. and the title-rôle in Henry IV. at Stratford-on-Avon during the Festival celebrations. Mr. Haviland's excellent performance of Mowbray in Mr. Tree's revival of Richard II. will be remembered. Mr. Haviland has arranged with Messrs. B. and F. Wheeler to return to South Africa in June with his own company to play a répertoire of classical and other pieces in the principal towns only. The tour will be started in Cape Town with a grand revival of Julius Cæsar, and other productions will include The Taming of the Shrew, The Corsican Brothers, The Merry Wives of Windsor, The Prisoner of Zenda, and The Tempest. Miss Edyth Latimer will again accompany Mr. Haviland as leading lady. Mr. Angus MacLeod will be the general manager of the tour.

Mr. Charles Manners, than whom no more earnest apostle of music exists, submitted his scheme for the production of Wagner's Ring to a representative meeting of Liverpool musicians held in the local Town Hall on Thursday, under the chairmanship of the Lord Mayor. After some discussion a resolution approving the project was passed, and a local committee appointed to arrange general details and invite subscriptions. Mr. Manners, while explaining his propositions, said that his last season had been a more profitable one than any previous, and he would have done even better but for the £6,000 he lost in London "trying to teach the Londoners." He had had to make the money in the provinces in order to lose it in London.

The Annual Ladies' Afternoon Concert of the Eccentric Club will be given at the Hotel Cecil on Tuesday, when a treat is in store for all lovers of good cheer and bright entertainment. The Eccentrics have worthily won renown for the quality of their entertainments. The menu is always of the best, the artists of the first class, and the company the most select.

Miss Florence Hamer, who has fulfilled a two years' tour engagement in Australasia under the management of Mr. J. C. Williamson, returns to England early this month. For the first year Miss Hamer was engaged as leading lady in Mr. Williamson's new comedy company, comprising Cousin Kate, The Marriage of Kitty, and The Duke of Killicrankie, being re-engaged for the past year for Mr. Williamson's Dramatic Company for Damaris Holden in His Majesty's Servant, The Darling of the Gods, If I Were King, and other parts.

"Mrs. Green Obliges" is the title of a duologue produced at an entertainment given on Monday at the Parish Hall of St. Mary's, Bryanston-square. The duologue was acted by Miss Elsie Fogerty, the well-known Albert Hall and Crystal Palace teacher of elocution, and Miss Sylvia Dawson, a pupil of Miss Fogerty. Miss Dawson was a great success in the title-rôle, and her performance reflected creditably on the abilities of her teacher.

Miss Ada Rehan, the famous American actress, whose work with Mr. Augustin Daly at his theatre in Leicester-square will be most recently remembered, has been seriously ill—for the second time—the malady, it is said, resulting from the attack of appendicitis which she had last year. Miss Rehan is now slowly recovering; but plans for her spring tour have been abandoned, and she will sail in a few days' time for her home on the coast of Ireland.

Miss Sybil Ruskin, whose work in connection with the British Empire Shakespeare Society, notably as Ophelia in Hamlet and a Gentlewoman in Macbeth, has met with very favourable recognition, will be the Celia in Mr. Norman V. Norman's production of As You Like It, which Mr. Bannister Howard is making the feature of his Shakespeare Festival at the Crystal Palace. Miss Ruskin is also playing Mme. St. Lo in the new play Count Hannibal, dramatised from Stanley Weyman's novel by Freeman Wills and Fredk. Langbridge, which Mr. Norman is producing at the Alexandra, Stoke Newington, next week.

Ernest Palmer (Berkshire) scholarship was awarded to Alfred G. Millard (organ), subject to confirmation by the Council.

Mr. Albert Bruno, who has for so many years been the provincial favourite as Tweedlepunch in Florodora, has been specially engaged by Mr. Fred Karno to appear in his sketches on the music halls. He will therefore not be seen in The Prince of Pilsen.

Mr. Arthur Bourchier, in order to give Miss Violet Vanbrugh time to regain her strength, has again postponed Monsieur de Paris, the production of which will take place to-day. It will be played at both the morning and evening performance.

At the Fulham Theatre next week the attraction will be The Worst Woman in London. On Good Friday evening a sacred concert will be given, under Mr H. Bernhardt's direction, including Miss Zena Dare, Miss Phyllis Dare, Mr. Henry A. Lytton, Mr. Richard Green, Mr. G. H. Snazelle, and Signor J. Bartolotta.

"Petronella; or, A Royal Romance," the new Spanish comic opera, shortly to be produced in London by Mr. Harold Payne, is written round the adventures of a young Spanish captain of dragoons. The first act takes place in an obscure fortress in Catalonia, and the second in a disused Moorish palace, where a mock court is held. A strong cast is engaged, Mr. Howard Crispin being the business-manager.

The Theatre Royal, Bury St. Edmunds, was registered on March 24, with a capital of £1,000, in £1 shares, with the object of acquiring the Theatre Royal, Bury St. Edmunds. There is no initial public issue. The first directors (not less than two nor more than five) are to be appointed by signatories.

Mr. Wm. Morton's opinion of Messrs. Alfred Northway and W. V. Garrod's production of The Prodigal Parson is evidenced by his immediately booking the play for the Alexandra Theatre, Hull, after witnessing it at Harrogate. The universal opinion is that the play has never been seen to greater advantage, the returns for previous visits having been exceeded at nearly every theatre visited. The advance bookings extend well into 1907.

The first ordinary general meeting of the London and Provincial Pantomimes Company, Ltd., was held at Glasgow recently, Bailie Davidson, Coatbridge, the chairman of the company, presiding. The audited accounts of the company for the year ended Feb. 23, 1906, were submitted. After writing off one-third of the cost of the production as depreciation, dividends at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum and a bonus of 1s. 6d. per share on the Ordinary shares and 60 per cent. on the Deferred shares were declared. The auditors, Messrs. Drynan, Fulton, and Mitchell, C.A., were reappointed for the ensuing year. The meeting terminated with a vote of thanks to the chairman and to the managing directors (Messrs. Ernest Stevens and R. C. Buchanan) for their services during the past year.

Ibsen, in Ghosts, deals with the question, "What is a wife to do when her husband is an incorrigible rake?"; and, in the case of Mrs. Avling, he shows to what dreadful extremities a woman may be reduced who persists in "sticking to" her spouse quand même. "Leave him," says Ibsen; "it is the best way in the end." But M. André Picard, from whose French Mauricette has been "taken," teaches otherwise. Your husband may give you some trouble, he says, but he is certain to "come round" when he gets to the elderly stage; and then you can commence your Darby and Joan existence. Mme. Dautran, the wife of the fascinating and popular deputy, Roger Dautran, has shut her eyes persistently, for the sake of domestic peace, to her husband's many infidelities. At the time that the play commences, he finds that his vices are leaving him. So he tries to become domestic; but habit is too strong, and he has actually to go out and dine at a restaurant by himself in order to get away from the society of his "incomparable" wife, who, like himself, is on the wane. Into the Dautran ménage at this juncture comes an impulsive, inexperienced girl, Mauricette, the daughter of an artist, absolutely frank, and bewitching by reason of her beauty and her simplicity—a simplicity which is not without a spice of natural shrewdness. Paul Aubert, a young doctor, the homme sérieux of the play, falls in love with Mauricette at first sight. And so stand the chessmen at the end of the first act.

And now a change comes over Dautran. He becomes gentle, domestic, and attentive to his wife; and she, with her husband and Mauricette, at a pretty place in the country, is serenely satisfied and unsuspicious. Of course, this fool's paradise cannot endure. First of all, Aubert announces his intention of proposing marriage to Mauricette, and Dautran opposes the project strenuously. Then a libertinish visitor, a M. Chavry, makes a dishonourable proposal to the girl, and, from the manner in which Dautran defends her, his wife begins to be jealous. When Aubert asks Mauricette to be his wife, she refuses him in such a way as to excite his suspicions; so he makes her promise that, if she is ever in trouble, she will seek shelter with his sister in Paris. The trouble soon comes. Mauricette, conscious of secretly loving Dautran, tries to escape from the house; but he meets her as she is going away, and she is weeping in his arms after they have confessed their love for each other, when Mme. Dautran enters, and, at last, is goaded to indignation. Mauricette eventually flies to Paris, and, six months later, we find her married to Aubert; but still cold and indifferent to him. In the interval, Dautran has fallen seriously ill, and he looks a complete "wreck" when, at last, he calls on Mme. Aubert, and, with her husband's full consent and approval, has a conclusive interview with her. But Mauricette, half-unconsciously, has gradually been yielding to the devotion, the tenderness, and the fresh, vigorous youth of Aubert; and when she looks at Dautran, and sees him obviously and repellently outworn, her infatuation dies, and she, of her own free-will, prefers her husband, the deputy falling back resignedly on the patient affection of his wife.

The production of Mauricette on Saturday was one of those after witnessing which one wonders how much of the effect created is due to the merit of the piece and how much to the happy luck of its casting. At least two of the characters had representatives so exactly suitable, so fortunately well-fitted, that to this must be attributed much of the success of the performance. Mr. H. B. Irving's innate distinction and fine voice and presence stood him in good stead as Dautran. He was particularly successful in indicating the point of age and feeling at which the deputy had arrived, and the style and authority of the individual. Mr. Irving acted with vivid intensity in the love scene in the second act; and, in the third, he handled the situation with an unshrinking art and fine subtlety which made a slightly supersentimental situation impressive. Miss Dorothea Baird is unapproachable in characters of the boldly-ingenuous sort—not the ingénue of the French stage, with her demure presence and assumed reticence, but the enterprising, energetic ingénue, who has seen life without understanding it, and is only protected by her instincts. Miss Baird has an exuberant amiability which is invaluable in a rôle like that of Mauricette; and her beauty and individuality, combined with a certain natural ease and grace, made her reading of the character irresistible. As for Mr. Leslie Faber, it would have been difficult to improve upon his Paul Aubert, so commendably firm, steady, and earnest was it, and so entirely free from self-consciousness. Then there was Miss Marion Terry, absolutely irreproachable in tenderness, tact, and delicacy of touch as Mme. Dautran. The character of the devoted wife, with her half-faded beauty and her gentle insipidity, is not an easy one to redeem from tameness and make interesting; but Miss Terry, by her personal magnetism, and by a number of artistic and ingenious touches, deeply endeared the personage to the audience. Miss Terry's delivery of the expository dialogue in the first act was admirable in its pathetic simplicity, and the "tone" of her rendering throughout was deliciously subtle and refined. That excellent and always effective actor, Mr. W. T. Lovell, played Chavry with sufficient character, and without the caricature to which the rôle offers so much temptation, and took full advantage of his one scene in the second act. Miss Ethel Warwick hit off quite cleverly the stylish malevolence of Mme. Chavry, and wore an amazing costume with an appropriate air. The other characters are more or less subordinate, and supply few opportunities to their representatives. Miss Ada Mellon gave a sound and judicious embodiment of the old servant Françoise; Miss Gwladys Morris was efficient as Mme. Rivray; and Miss Eileen Munro did good work as Antoinette Aubert; Mr. D. McCarthy being all that was required as Rivray, Mr. Eric Leslie contributing a neat bit of acting as Phibert, and Mr. G. A. Seager being quite commendable for his acute depiction of Croissard. Mauricette, with its return to the school of domestico-sentimental drama, its simple situations, and its conventional but interesting characters, delighted the audience at the Lyric immensely. There was a hearty demonstration at the end of each act, the applause at the conclusion being loud, long, and enthusiastic. The play was preceded by a monologue by Mr. Sam Sothern, entitled What Shall I Say to Her? A young officer, about to start for India, meditates in his chambers upon the best way for him, at his father's orders, to break off his engagement with a "penniless lassie." After an amusing soliloquy, he resolves to make use of the post; but just as he is about to sit down and write, he observes a note that has dropped on the floor. It is from the young lady in question, informing him of her engagement to a rich wholesale grocer. However, the youth, piqued by opposition, determines not to give up the girl, and goes out excitedly to "win her yet." The monologue, delivered with agreeable expressiveness and easy humour by its author, formed a pleasing prelude to the piece of the evening.

MR. AND MRS. IRVING AT THE NEW VAGABOND CLUB.

A luncheon, in honour of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Irving, was given by the New Vagabond Club at the Hotel Cecil on Thursday, when the guests included Mr. and Mrs. George Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. Beerbohm Tree, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bourchier, Mr. Laurence Irving (Adrian Ross), Miss Constance Collier, Miss Lilian Braithwaite, Miss Marion Terry, Miss Eva Moore, and Miss Genevieve Ward.

Mr. W. L. COURTNEY, who presided, gave the toast of "Our Guests," and said that Mr. Irving's career was before them all. In that clever, odd, humorous study to which Mr. Barrie gave the name of The Admirable Crichton, the author owed much to Mr. Irving for the amplification and embodiment of the character which he had designed. It was a remarkable study from many points of view, because while Mr. Irving had to represent a butler they felt and were conscious of the undeveloped hero, and when he was the hero they had not quite forgotten the butler. Some critics had thought that Mr. Irving's Hamlet was, if anything, too persuasive, too real, and too much of the actual young man on whom had come the crushing fate of having to avenge his father. He could not understand how any student of Shakespeare could regard any of his characters as otherwise than real people, whom, if only they had the lucky chance, they might possibly meet. It was because they felt that Mr. Irving's Hamlet, while it preserved the poetical elements of character, yet put before them the actual lineaments of an actual living man, that his impersonation came home to their hearts. Nor were they likely to forget how much of ingenuous charm and simple gracefulness Mrs. Irving had given them in the course of her career on the stage; the only real and original Trilby or the Mrs. Darling of Barrie's play, Peter Pan. It was indeed a happy incident, he thought, to find two such artists in union. Soon Mr. and Mrs. Irving were going to America. They wished them God-speed, and the success they deserved. Mr. Irving would produce in America some of the great productions which were identified with his great father. He hoped they would win plaudits from that great and friendly American nation, who were always glad to welcome talent, and that they would return happier and more prosperous for the change.

Mr. IRVING, who was enthusiastically greeted, recalled the fact that Mr. Courtney was his tutor at Oxford, and that he had given him one of the best pieces of advice that could be offered to an actor. When asked to take part in a performance of Julius Cæsar at the O.U.D.C., he thought that the character allotted him was not good enough. Quin once said, when asked to play the Ghost in Hamlet, that he would not take the part because he was "not going to catch cold behind." In those days the Ghost was not dressed as he was now. He only had a little armour in front of him, and had to be content with his waistcoat and trousers behind. That was an occasion when an actor might fairly refuse a part. When he found at Oxford that Mr. Arthur Bourchier had a leading part, he felt injured, and consulted Mr. Courtney, who replied, "Don't talk nonsense; you take what is given you." He had been wondering what were the New Vagabonds. A vagabond had been defined as "a wanderer without a home." None in the company would answer that description. The members of his profession once were the "real old thing." They really were vagabonds in the days of the Keans and Kembles, but times had changed, and actors were not the same sort of vagabonds now. Mr. Irving went on to comment upon a recent article in a contemporary in which the writer thought the critics spared the profession too much, and expressed the opinion that they should be treated in the same way as rival politicians were criticised. That was not a pleasant prospect, added Mr. Irving. Fancy the diatribes of Mr. Winston Churchill or the sarcasm of Mr. Chamberlain being imparted into dramatic criticism, or imagine a critic saying "Enough of this foolery" like the Prime Minister. Although such criticism might be exciting, it could hardly be useful or instructive. On behalf of himself and his wife he thanked the New Vagabonds for this token of regard which would remain amongst their most cherished memories.

Mr. GEORGE ALEXANDER, in a speech thanking the Chairman for presiding, also replied to the article alluded to by the previous speaker. The writer seemed anxious to show them how to manage a theatre, but he (Mr. Alexander) would be willing to lend St. James's Theatre for a week if he would undertake to pay all expenses and produce two plays.

FOR the few remaining performances of The Candidate Sir Charles Wyndham has revived another old friend in the one-act piece by R. C. Carton, entitled Dinner for Two, which was put on as a curtain-raiser at Wyndham's Theatre on Monday. The plot of the little piece, which was originally produced at the Duke of York's, then known as the Trafalgar-square Theatre, in 1893, takes place in a private room in an hotel at Richmond, where Stapylton Kidbrook, a member of the Indian Civil Service, awaits a lady who is to dine with him. Instead, there breaks in upon him a prosy old Major, who talks of the wife he has lately taken. Kidbrook accidentally finds out that the lady he is momentarily expecting is no other than the newly-made bride referred to, and he tries every endeavour to get the Major out of the way until at length a telegram arrives to say that the lady is unable to come. Mr. Yorke Stephens acted with his customary smartness and mordant expression as Stapylton, and Mr. Edmund Maurice realised the tiresome and tenacious Indian Army officer to the life. A neat sketch of a waiter was supplied by Mr. Herbert Duppa.

MR. WILFRED STANFORD, the acting-manager of the Camden Theatre, announces a sacred concert at that house on Good Friday at which several well-known artists will appear.

MISS SOPHIE HARRISS.

It was with a feeling of regret that Nottingham bade farewell to its charming principal boy of the Grand Theatre pantomime. Three months' acquaintanceship of Miss Sophie Harriss's delightful Robin Hood had made that character a greater favourite with the local inhabitants and gentry than the original outlaw had ever been in his own day and generation. And the fair outlaw herself reciprocated that feeling of regret, for she regards Nottingham audiences with no small degree of affection. "They are so quick to appreciate one's efforts," she tells us, "so vociferous in signifying their pleasure, and so prompt at recognising a good point. In fact, I always feel at home in a Nottingham theatre. It was a magnificent pantomime, too," she added, as if the memory of it all could not be blotted from her mind's eye.

"What a happy time a principal boy has at Christmas, Miss Harriss—the invitations, the presents, the flowers—"

"Ah, but let me tell you I never accept invitations. I always go straight from the theatre to my rooms. The presents I give away, and the flowers I send to the local hospitals."

There were others present at the interview to testify to Miss Harriss's kindly nature. One lady detailed how Miss Harriss generously entertained the members of the pantomime company at Nottingham regularly to tea, and performed other agreeable and thoughtful little offices. The interviewer was scarcely prepared to meet four members of the fair sex when he went to converse with one, but there lay an advantage in the presence of the other three in that he learnt of many instances of Miss Harriss's good-heartedness that that lady's modesty would have kept in the background. Miss Harriss, by the way, has made a most delightful home of her flat at the Hotel Cecil, and evidences of her artistic sense are not lacking in the beautiful decorations of the different apartments over which we were shown.

A glance round the spacious and handsome drawing-room revealed tokens of visits to many lands.

"I see you have travelled a bit, Miss Harriss."

"Travelled! I should say so! Pretty nearly all over the world—South Africa principally, but India, America, New Zealand, Australia—where I was born—Japan—everywhere! My first hit in Australia was in excerpts from Il Trovatore. I was singing Leonore and another part—and thereby hangs a tale. Australia produces many good voices, and the audiences know how to treat them. I mean by that that they keep as quiet as mice while a singer is entertaining them. One night, during the run I am speaking of, just as I went up to top B, there was a breathless silence, and grating through it there came a raucous juvenile voice from the gods—'My hye, wouldn't she be a stunner to 'awk bananas?'"—and the little chap smeared the perspiration from his brow with his coat sleeve. I simply had to laugh, and the top B came down with a run."

"And how did you find the Transvaalers?"

"They're hypercritical, satiated with good things. Why, Londoners will stand productions that would not be looked at out there! You see, all the rich Jews—American, German, Russian—can pay well for their amusements, and they won't put up with inferior shows. And they will have constant change—répertoire is almost essential in South Africa. Here in England our long runs are good for the manager, but they produce artists capable of perhaps only one style of work. They force specialisation, and give no chance to varied talent. In Australia, most of the Colonies, and in America actors are taught everything, simply because they have to be able to play everything."

Early in her professional career Miss Harriss took part in several of the Australian productions of Drury-lane dramas, afterwards playing Katisha in The Mikado. Then followed engagements in La Mascotte, The Bohemian Girl, in which Miss Harriss played the Queen of the Gipsies, Madame Angot, the Countess in Olivette, Ralph Radestraw in Pinafore, and the pantomime of Dick Whittington, in which her part was, of course, the title-rôle. Then came a series of characterisations in drama at the Theatre Royal, Melbourne, and in the Victorian capital she also took part in a successful production of The Three Musketeers. Her professional engagements next took her to South Africa, by way of England, and she toured in Africa in comedy, comic opera, and vaudeville. During one period the company of which she was a member produced no fewer than eighteen operas in twenty-two weeks. Miss Leonora Bartram was the prima donna of the troupe. Among the operas were The Mikado, Pinafore, Haddon Hall, The Sorcerer, Ruddigore, Iolanthe, The Gondoliers, Princess Ida, Yeoman of the Guard, Maritana, in which Miss Harriss played Lazarillo, Siebel in Faust, Cavalleria Rusticana, Pagliacci, The Bohemian Girl, and others. Then, after playing Aladdin in Chicago and New York, she returned to London to play Selim in Mr. Oscar Barrett's production of Blue Beard, subsequently appearing as Robin Hood in Birmingham, London, and Edinburgh pantomimes. In the intervals of pantomime Miss Harriss appeared in comedies and at the principal London music halls, and took out her own company in A Merry Madcap. She was the Robinson Crusoe of a Brixton pantomime, and opened the Prince of Wales's Theatre, Kennington, playing the Prince in Cinderella.

More music hall appearances, and then an engagement with Ada Blanche in The Telephone Girl, which was succeeded by Colin in The Babes in the Wood. There were further tours with her own company in Lady Madcap, more pantomime, this time as Dick Whittington at Dalston, several musical comedies, a season of comedy proper, a tour all over the Continent of Europe, and back to London.

"The sports of children satisfy the child." One could not help remembering Goldsmith's immortal line after the "Barrie evening" at the Comedy on Thursday. One of Mr. Barrie's most charming qualities is his childishness. It is a question, however, whether this attribute of his is not more or less of an affectation. He has been so much "encouraged," as the nurses say of their charges, that he has become a little "spoilt." It is a "far cry" from the authorship of The Little Minister to that of Josephine, which is an up-to-date political allegory. The English nation is typified in Mr. Buller, the typical John Bull of old agricultural days, in blue coat, top boots, &c. He has four sons, James (Mr. Balfour), Colin (Sir Campbell-Bannerman), Andrew (Lord Rosebery), and Bunting (the Labour Party). Each of these sons wants to be the eldest (i.e., Prime Minister). Colin is frequently detected in flirting with Miss Blarney (the Irish Nationalist Party), while Josephine (Mr. Chamberlain), while still clinging to an old love Free (Trade), is attempted by the alluring promises of Protection, who appears as a Fairy.

The first two scenes of the revue take place in Mr. Buller's house; the third is laid in his London establishment, and represents the House of Commons. Through open doors we see the House sitting, and hear the droning sound of a speech; and a couple of charwomen arrive with brooms and buckets, and are sent off with the words "still sitting." Free (Trade) and Fair (Trade) disappear in turn à la Grigolatis, and the dialogue is a succession of "topical hits" at the indifference of the English public, Mr. Balfour's alleged indecision, Home rule by instalments, the increasing power of the Labour Party, &c. In the end Mr. Buller entrusts its representative with the Premiership, and the attitude of Josephine suggests a coalition with Labour in the near future.

Josephine had every chance given it by the acting, which was, at least, as good as the play deserved. Mr. Louis Calvert's Buller was every inch a bucolic magnate, solid, lazy, and authoritative; Mr A. E. Matthews played James with a polished ease and a quaint, sly humour which were delicately artistic and extremely effective. Mr. Kenneth Douglas was briskly vigorous as Colin, and Mr. Graham Browne made the most of the rôle of Andrew. Messrs. Wren, Eldred, and Matheson Lang, who successively represented Bunting—who may be supposed to embody the electorate—all did excellent work; and Mr. Clifford Brooke was seen to advantage as A Future Prime Minister, Mr. Frederick Volpe giving a sound and droll performance as Sammy. Miss Eva Moore was as arch, winning, and active as could be desired as Miss Blarney; and Miss Mabel Hackney acted with skill and ability as Free, Miss Grace Lane making a very pretty and graceful Fair. M. Dion Boucicault's Josephine was a marvellous piece of feminine impersonation, finished and capable in every detail, and so artistic as to be entirely illusive. Immediately before Josephine came a toy tragedy in one act, by Mr. Barrie, played for the first time, and entitled

"PUNCH."

Punch .....MR. DION BOUCICAULT
Judy .....MISS EVA MOORE
'O Χαρεῖς .....MR. ARTHUR ELDRED
Superpunch .....MR. A. E. ANSON

The scene is a room which is used as a showbooth by an elderly couple, Punch and Judy. The former appears at the window, and his business of hanging the executioner is hooted indignantly by the mob outside. Punch realises that his entertainment is out of date; and when a butcher-boy, representing the public, comes in and tells him so, Punch hits him with his truncheon and kills him. His corpse is carried out by two footmen; and then Mr. Bernard Shaw comes in, announces himself as the modern Punchinello, and "takes" the window stage, amidst roars of applause from the street, while Punch and Judy slink out in dejection. The good taste of introducing the travestie is questionable; but Mr. Shaw should be grateful to Mr. Barrie for yet another bold advertisement. Mr. Dion Boucicault played Punch with a happy mixture of real pathos and eccentric business; Miss Eva Moore was delightfully odd and delicately amusing as Judy; Mr. Arthur Eldred was a most ready and realistic butcher-boy; and Mr. A. E. Anson undertook, with much audacity, the task of "depicting" Mr. Bernard Shaw. The first piece of the evening was a miniature melodrama in one act by Austin Strong, played for the first time, and entitled

"THE DRUMS OF OUDE."

Captain Hector MacGregor, MR. MATHESON LANG
Lieut. Alan Hartley.....MR. KENNETH DOUGLAS
Sergeant MacDougall ..MR. LOUIS GOODRICH
Stewart .....MR. HYLTON ALLEN
Servants .....MR. QUENTIN MACPHERSON, MR. A. FARRER
Mrs. Jack Clayton .....MISS MABEL HACKNEY

The author has drawn upon the Indian Mutiny for his material. The time is 1857; the place, a Palace in Northern India occupied by the British. A large quantity of gunpowder is stored in the Palace, and when the rebels rise and storm the building, Captain Hector MacGregor determines to blow it up if they effect an entrance. His duty is made the harder by the fact that he receives assurance that his love for a fair widow, Mrs. Jack Clayton, is returned; but nevertheless he is about to cause the explosion, when it is fortunately rendered unnecessary by the arrival to the rescue of a body of British troops. Mr. Matheson Lang's Hector MacGregor, with its cool reserve and complete ease and mastery, could hardly have been bettered; Mr. Kenneth Douglas gave a capital representation of a brave and boyish lieutenant, Mr. Louis Goodrich was quite satisfactory as a sergeant, Mr. Hylton Allen played a small part carefully, and Mr. Quentin Macpherson and Mr. A. Farrer were picturesquely mysterious as two Hindustani servants. Miss Mabel Hackney contributed a powerful and poignant performance of the part of Mrs. Jack Clayton, depicting the terror of the poor lady intensely and graphically. Mr. W. Hann's scenery for this piece and for Josephine was suitable, sufficient, and artistic.

ACADEMY OF DRAMATIC ART.

STUDENTS' PERFORMANCE.

If any people who predicted ill of the Academy of Dramatic Art when it was founded by Mr. Tree two years ago were present at the performances given by the students on Monday afternoon at His Majesty's Theatre, they would surely have been willing to admit that Mr. Tree's scheme had indeed fructified with unexpected success. It is pleasant to be able to state that the number of the students who have attended the school has been remarkable, and this fact seems to point to a widely increasing recognition of the usefulness of the institution. Many of the students have already begun their careers upon the professional stage, a result, it is thought, due in great measure to the public performance given by the Academy at His Majesty's in February of last year. It has already been announced that the executive council of the Academy consists of Sir Squire Bancroft (President), Mr. John Hare, Mr. Tree, Mr. George Alexander, Mr. Forbes Robertson, Mr. Cyril Maude, Mr. Arthur Bourchier, Mr. Pinero, and Mr. J. M Barrie. These gentlemen have undertaken to visit the school regularly, and conduct the work of the more advanced pupils. This will be done in the "final school," and here it is of interest to state that managers of London theatres may call upon this final school to give copyright performances of plays.

Undoubtedly the most creditable performance of last Monday's matinée—which, by the way, was given in aid of The Referee Children's Dinner Fund—was that of Miss Mary Barton in the title-rôle of L'Enfant Prodigue. Miss Barton was the winner in 1905 of the "Secretary's Prize" for general industry and progress, and this year she carried off Mr. W. L. Courtney's prize for dramatic blank verse recitation. Pantomimic—i.e., dumb-show—acting is a very high form of acting, and in the character of the Young Pierrot Miss Barton admirably told us, by graceful, easy, and self-explanatory expressions and movements what could scarcely have been better conveyed by words. It was really a brilliant and delightful performance. As the father of the prodigal, Mr. Robert Atkins capitally portrayed the troubled state of mind and unrelenting disposition of the old man, and Mdlle. Denège presented an interesting "study in silence" of the coquettish Phrynette, although it must be said that she was scarcely suited to the part. Mdlle Denège hails from the Theatre Antoine, Paris, and is the "auditrice libre" in the Academy. Miss Muriel Alexander, who in 1904 was awarded "free tuition for merit," was fairly good as Madame Pierrot, and Mr. Reginald Owen, winner of a gold medal last year, and awarded free tuition in 1904, and Mr. Stanley Warmington adequately filled the rôles respectively of the Baron and the Negro. Mr. Landon Ronald played the pianoforte part in exquisite style, and in the interpretation of the piece much was due to the beautiful and expressive accompaniment. It should be mentioned that the pupils received instruction from Mme. Cavallazzi for L'Enfant Prodigue.

Another item in the programme was the trial scene from The Merchant of Venice. Here again Mr. Robert Atkins distinguished himself by the subtle manner in which at one time he showed us Shylock the venomous, and at another time Shylock the pathetic. Mr. Atkin's characterisation was unquestionably the gem in the whole performance. Miss Frances Leighton spoke the lines of Portia exceedingly well, and her movements and gestures were dignified and graceful. A little more practice, and she should turn out an accomplished actress. Mr. Reginald Owen was an acceptable Bassanio, and gave evidence of careful appreciation of the part, while others who satisfactorily fulfilled the requirements of their various rôles were Mr. Edward Ouston as the Duke, Mr. David Powell as Antonio, Mr. Walton Palmer as Gratiano, Mr. Stanley Warmington as Salarino, Mr. A. E. Benedict as the Clerk, and Miss Cecily Stuckey as Nerissa. The Merchant of Venice performance was the result of Mr. J. Fisher White's tuition.

The first act of Mr. Pinero's play The Times—under Mr. Frederick Kerr's tuition—was also given. In this several of the pupils exhibited considerable ability. Mr. Quentin Ayrault's representation of the absurd Hon. Montague Trimble was a particularly commendable effort. The intonation of voice and comical mannerism necessary to the part were well sustained, and in other respects Mr. Ayrault thoroughly "looked the picture." Mr. Frank Royde as Percy Egerton Bompas depicted in amusing fashion the doings and sayings of the vulgar, but rich, ex-merchant, who yearns to go into society. Mr. Royde was rather too forcible in his impersonation, which otherwise was an excellent one. A commendable piece of acting was Miss St. Clair Swanzy's Mrs. Hooley. It was a characteristic likeness of a hypocritical lodging-house keeper anxious to secure a husband for her daughter. Mr. Hubert C. Brett brought out in strong relief the absurd stupidity of Howard Bompas, the weak, sobbing, effeminate voice, and girlish, half-idiotic manner lending an appropriate finish to the presentment. Mr. C. H. Sworder created an excellent impression in the more manly rôle of Viscount Lurgashall, and Miss Rose Hersee's embodiment of Mrs. Egerton Bompas indicated a thorough grasp of the true inwardness of her part, while Miss Ellen Cutcliffe proved a charming and engaging daughter. A word of praise is due to Miss Irene Clarke for a very capably-drawn study of the pseudo-unsophisticated Honoria; while others who showed signs of ability were Miss Gwendolen Williams as the Countess of Ripstow, Miss Ruby Miller as Miss Cazalet, Miss Sheba Brozel as Lucy Tuck, and Mr. Eustace Arundel as Jelf.

In Scene IV., Act IV., of Richard III., Miss Estelle Kaufmann won high honours for the splendid elocution which marked her delivery of the lines of Queen Margaret. This young lady's work was highly commended by the judges. Miss Alison March as Queen Elizabeth, and Miss Gwendolen Williams as the Duchess of York respectively acted with dignity and gracefulness, and spoke with admirable enunciation. All the three ladies received tuition from Mr. J. Fisher White.

A selection of very attractive dances—the outcome of Mr. Louis Hervey d'Egville's teaching—were performed by the pupils. Particularly pleasing was the "Passepied," music by M. André Messager, in which the following ladies and gentlemen took part: Misses Pamela Hope, Irene Clarke, Sheba Brozel, Mabel Piper, Marjorie Rogers, Muriel Dole, Beatrice Smith, Nora Cattley, Dora Arnold, Edith Dent, and Dulcie Coury; and Messrs. Frank Royde, Stanley Warmington, Cecil Norfor, Herbert Lomas, and Eustace Arundel. In the patter step-dance, executed to the accompaniment of some delightful music by Mr. d'Egville, the artists were Misses E. Hilton, M. Hilton, Bertha Dawson, Jessica Stanton, and Messrs. Quentin Ayrault and Percy A. Gawthorne. In the "Danse Rapide" Miss Aileen Caylus was the Arlequina, Mr. Quentin Ayrault the Arlequin, and Miss Vera Wilson the Columbine.

The orchestra was most ably directed by Mr. Adolph Schmid.

The judges of the afternoon's acting were Mr. John Hare, Mr. J. Comyns Carr, and Mr. Ernest Bendall, who awarded the gold medal presented annually by Sir Squire and Lady Bancroft to Miss Mary Barton for her clever pantomimic representation of l'enfant prodigue. A special prize is to be given to Mr. Robert Atkins for his performance of Shylock in The Merchant of Venice and M. Pierrot in L'Enfant Prodigue, while Miss Estelle Kaufmann and Mr. Quentin Ayrault have been commended, the first for her interesting portrayal of Queen Margaret in Richard III., and the second for his acting of the Hon. Montague Trimble in The Times, and for his dancing.

(COPYRIGHT.)

In these columns it is proposed to give a strictly alphabetical arrangement of the titles of plays produced during the last fifty years. It will be the most complete list ever published, and should prove invaluable to authors desiring to discover whether a certain title has ever been used, and when. To members of the dramatic profession it will be useful in determining the dates of plays in which they have achieved successes. Our readers are politely requested to advise us of any omission or inaccuracy which they may notice.

This list as soon as complete will be published in cheap book form.

Presentation.—On Saturday evening, after the fall of the curtain on Sergeant Brue at the Kennington Theatre, the whole of the staff and friends assembled in the foyer to say farewell to Mr. Harold Entwistle, who has resigned his position as acting manager of the Kennington Theatre to take up the management of Mrs. Patrick Campbell's forthcoming tour Mr. C. F. Parsley, treasurer at the Kennington Theatre, made the presentation, which consisted of a handsome diamond pin. Mr. H. Entwistle, in returning thanks, said it was always hard to part from old associations, and their handsome gift and kind wishes would ever be remembered by him in his new venture.

An enjoyable invitation smoking concert was given at the Caversham Bridge Hotel, Reading, on the 28th ult., to welcome the new proprietor, Mr. H. J. Spragg, who has taken over the whole of this well-known hostelry. Some 300 guests accepted the invitation. Mr. Fred Hermann's London Lyric Party was specially engaged, and gave entire satisfaction. Mr. Spragg, who is well known in city and theatrical circles, is having the hotel entirely refurnished and decorated, and it is intended to run a fortnightly series of concerts.

Excellent reports of good business have resulted from Mr. W. W. Kelly's visit to suburban London. His policy in practically reproducing A Royal Divorce with probably more than double the average expenses of similar plays proves that the more the public is given for their money the more they will give in return. The playgoer with average perception wants to see signs of something better each time he goes to the theatre, and good plays produced by practised writers for the stage and performed by experienced professional players under thoroughly proficient stage management, with a well-qualified business man at the head of everything, will assuredly reap a golden harvest. Mr. Kelly's enterprise in taking the Scala Theatre and mounting A Royal Divorce in every detail as well as it could possibly be done was a decided success, and in taking the same company and production to the outlying theatres he affords a still stronger proof that an interesting play, well played, earns a handsome profit. There is no doubt that his visit to the Marlborough next week will be entirely satisfactory.

A RELIC OF HANDEL.

In the Court of King's Bench on the 30th ult., before Mr. Justice Kennedy, Mrs. Henrietta Maria Shearer sued Dr. William H. Cummings, principal of the Guildhall School of Music, to recover Handel's silver presentation watch, or damages for its conversion. Defendant pleaded that he had purchased the watch.

Mr. R. J. Drake, in opening the case for the plaintiff, said his client, who was now seventy years of age, was formerly a professional singer, and known as Miss Henrietta Mackenzie. For many years she took an interest in Handel's works, and she attended the Handel Festivals for forty years. In July, 1879, there was a sale by auction of Handel's relics, and the plaintiff purchased the watch in question for a small amount. The defendant purchased at the same sale Handel's will. In 1905 the plaintiff found it necessary to raise some money, and she asked a Mrs. Herring if she could assist her in selling the watch. The plaintiff informed her that she could not take less than £150 for it, and that any offer made for the watch must be submitted to her before it was accepted. Later, the watch was handed to Mr. Stafford Smith, a commercial traveller, to show to a likely purchaser, but he had no authority to sell it. Some time afterwards the plaintiff heard that the watch had been sold, and Mr. Stafford Smith informed her that he had sold it to the defendant for £90. The plaintiff received from Mr. Stafford Smith a cheque for that sum, but it was not met when presented. The defendant was communicated with, and he replied that he had purchased the watch for £50, and held Mr. Stafford Smith's receipt. Counsel submitted that Mr. Stafford Smith had no authority to sell the watch and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover it.

The plaintiff was called, and gave evidence in support of counsel's statement. She added that neither Mrs. Herring nor Mr. Stafford Smith had authority to sell the watch without the offer being first submitted to her. The defendant had informed her that he purchased the watch of Mr. Stafford Smith for £50. In cross-examination the plaintiff said she paid £4 2s. 6d. for the watch. She had exhibited it at the Crystal Palace. At first she objected to the watch going out of England, but afterwards she withdrew that objection. At the time she handed the watch to Mrs. Herring she was not particularly in want of money, but she thought that by selling it she would add to the sum she had to acquire an annuity. She was offered £150 for the watch in 1888 by some American gentleman, but at that time she did not wish to sell it.

After the luncheon interval it was stated that the parties had come to terms.

The clever synopsis in the native tongue of Old Heidelberg presented to the Japanese sailors who visited the Crystal Palace last week was written by Mr. George Stuart, the translation and printing being carried out by him in every detail.

A committee meeting of the Actors' Orphanage Fund was held on Wednesday, at 18, Russell-street, Covent Garden. There were present Mr. Charles Cruikshanks (in the chair), Mrs. Cecil Raleigh, Mrs. Gay, Mrs. Mangles, Miss Carlotta Addison, Mrs. Fred Wright, Mrs. E. Compton, Miss May Warley, Mrs. E. S. Willard, the Rev. A. Brinckman, and Mr. E. H. Bull (secretary). Members of the committee reported on their various visits to orphans, all such reports being considered to be most satisfactory. The present rules were under discussion, and certain alterations, rendered necessary by lapse of time, suggested. At the present moment there are no less than fifty-three orphans in the care and under the charge of this excellent charity.

The special committee of the Actors' Association held a meeting on Saturday last, when several important questions in connection with copyright in photographs and payment for rehearsals were under discussion, and the secretary received instructions. There were present Messrs. C. Aubrey Smith (chairman), Clarence Blakiston, Arthur Holmes-Gore, and Charles Cruikshanks (secretary).

The usual weekly meeting of the Council was held on Tuesday last, when there were present Mr. C. Aubrey Smith (chairman), Mr. A. E. Drinkwater (deputy-chairman), Mr. Henry W. Mote (hon. solicitor, V.P.), Mesdames Carlotta Addison, Elizabeth Kirby, Kate Phillips; Messrs. J. Cooke Beresford, Clarence Blakiston, Acton Bond, Burton Cooke, A. E. George, Arthur Holmes-Gore, Norman McKinnel, Quinton McPherson, Spencer Trevor, and Charles Cruikshanks (secretary).

The hon. solicitors reported they had advised several members, and a member of the council expressed sincerest thanks for valuable advice given by them during the past week. Two cases of alleged insanitation at provincial theatres were under consideration, and exhaustive reports from the Medical Officers of Health in the different districts were received as fully explanatory and satisfactory. The report of the special committee was received. The following ladies and gentlemen were nominated for election to the association: Arthur Fayne, Willie Garvey, Norman Wrighton, Edward Vaughan, Donald Maclean, and Howard Brenan. The suggestion book was considered, and an entry made.

The Finance and General Purposes Committee met and transacted business, and the secretary received instructions to issue a whip for the meeting to-day at 11.30. There were present Messrs. Acton Bond (chairman), J. Cooke Beresford, A. E. George, A. Holmes-Gore, C. Aubrey Smith, and Charles Cruikshanks (secretary).

On Saturday afternoon, March 31, at the Theatre Royal, Manchester, the Royal Carl Rosa Opera Company presented, for the first time in twenty years, Beethoven's Fidelio, with Miss Grace Nicoll in the title-rôle. The opera was produced by Mr. Charles Victor, and was a pronounced success, the artists being called many times before the curtain at the end of each act, the conductor, Mr. Walter Van Noorden, sharing largely in the applause. The opera is certainly well worthy of a place in the weekly répertoire. A very fine performance of Tristan and Isolda was given also on the previous evening.

Mr. Charles Frohman has decided to produce The Beauty of Bath, Mr. Seymour Hicks' latest successful piece, in New York next winter.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER.

Chapter II.
PERFORMING RIGHT.
Chapter III.
Chapter IV.
MUSICAL COPYRIGHT.
Chapter V.
INTERNATIONAL AND COLONIAL COPYRIGHT.

Copyright confusion is, like the poor, always with us, and as it seems likely to remain so until at least the crack of doom, it were well for all concerned, or likely to be concerned, to take immediate steps to secure a copy of Mr. Albert A. Strong's new work, entitled "The Law of Copyright." Mr. Strong is already favourably known to the profession for his text-book on "Dramatic and Musical Law," which, like his latest production, is published at "The Era" Office. "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer" essays to make clear to the non-legal mind what is—or, in some cases, what probably is—the law as to musical and dramatic copyright. The chapters on the Berne Convention and on the Chase Act, passed by the United States Congress last March, are full of interest.—Referee.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1906.
"The Era" Annual again makes its welcome appearance. I say welcome because, as a work of theatrical reference, it is always handy to have in the house—or office. In this connection I am glad to note that the lists of play-productions for the past year are given in better type and altogether in a much clearer manner. As of yore, there are sundry stories in prose and verse. The best of these include "Stage Superstitions," by Charles Warner; "Boy Bob at Sea," a poem by Louie Freear; "The Last Muster," a weird tragic military story, by Mr. Joseph Wilson, who has been a soldier himself; and "Nellie Bligh's Notices," a capital theatrical story, by Mr. Frank Desprez.—Referee, Jan. 28, 1906.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1906.
"The Era" Almanac and Annual for 1906, is not only a valuable collection of information and a history of the dramatic and musical year. It is also a very amusing and entertaining shillingsworth It contains contributions from many well-known actors and actresses. Mr. Frank Desprez, the editor, contributes a delightful story about an actress who sold her collection of Press notices in order to help a colleague in distress. There are numerous portraits. The lists of English, French, and German plays produced during the year are very useful. Altogether, "The Era" Almanack is indispensable to all interested in the stage.—The Star, Jan. 24, 1906.

THE GREEN-ROOM BOOK.

NEW GUIDE TO THE STAGE.
[PUBLISHED TO-DAY.]

"For a profession so popular as the theatrical, it has often been a matter of comment (and one of great inconvenience) that there was no publication dealing in an adequate manner with its personal side. Now, however, this inconvenience no longer exists, for 'THE GREEN-ROOM BOOK,' A 'WHO'S WHO' ON THE STAGE, was issued this morning. It is a most useful work of reference, and though it is the first year of publication, the information supplied is very complete.

The new book gives biographies of actors and actresses, and also interesting information concerning many of the principal variety artists, dramatists, music composers, conductors, dramatic and musical critics, managers, proprietors, and dramatic and musical agents of the United Kingdom, America, and the Continent.

The fascination of the footlights has been strong enough to group certain families together in a way which suggests many ideas for the student of heredity. This is interestingly emphasised in the series of tables of 'Footlight Families' which are set forth in this book. The genealogical trees of the Irvings, Terrys, Kendals, Robertsons, Grossmiths, Batemans, &c., show how the dramatic instinct has been inherited. As is pointed out, this is rather remarkable, for 'while it is natural on the one hand that the player's children should follow his art, in many instances the strongest impediments are placed in the way, a minute knowledge of the origins of actors . . . would show many ramifications of footlight families.'

Those interested in the dramatic profession—and who is not nowadays—should purchase this book, for it will supply all the information desired, whether it be about a player or a music-hall artist.

SATURDAY, APRIL 7, 1906.

"STANDING ROOM ONLY."

The days when the theatrical and music-hall managers and the County Council were habitually at "daggers drawn," and when legal combats between them were as common as the complaints of the public against the tyranny of the municipal body, have happily passed away. We must always remember that the reputation of the Council suffered from the extreme views of some of its less wise members; and that the odium thus engendered attached itself to the Council as a whole. Experience has "educated" the London County Council as it educates everyone; and the experiences of the Council have been numerous. The recent death of the lady who was known as ZÆO recalls incidents which seem from their strangeness to belong to an antiquated period of municipal history. One can only remember with difficulty the absurd fuss that was made about ZÆO's poster—merely a picture of a female in the ordinary "trucks" and tights of the gymnast; and the ridiculous examination of her back which was made by a Councillor anxious to prove that her picturesque feat of diving, with a somersault, from the roof of the Westminster Aquarium into a net beneath was injurious to her frame. A good deal of water has run under the bridges since those days; and now the County Council is cognisant of feats much more sensational, and posters absolutely identical in subject and treatment with the ZÆO bill, without making any sign or protest.

We may contrast agreeably the old tyrannic tone of the Council in dealing with entrepreneurs with the more moderate spirit in which the matter of standing-room was dealt with both at the meeting on the 20th ult. and that of last Tuesday. Why the question has been revived just now is mysterious. For some five years arrangements have been allowed to rest on the rule which was made by the Council in 1901, requiring that in all new places of amusement sufficient "exit accommodation" should be provided for all the persons who could be admitted thereto. This was done by planning the width and number of the exits in proportion to the number of persons to be accommodated, and it was ordered that "in calculating the number of persons that can be accommodated in any tier or part of a tier of such premises, the standing space from which a view of the performance can be obtained will be considered as well as the seated area." The rule of the Council previous to 1901 was to the effect that "all gangways, passages, and staircases intended for the exit of the audience should be kept entirely free from chairs or other obstructions, whether permanent or temporary."

The proprietors of the eleven theatres and music-halls which have been built since 1901 certainly had a right to suppose that they were entitled to allow standing to take place except in the "intersecting" gangways; but still the Council felt it necessary to increase the stringency of its regulations; and in March, 1905, they sent a circular letter to all persons holding a music, music and dancing, or stage-play licence asking for a statement showing the maximum number of persons whom the management desired to admit at any one time to his establishment; and the places (if any) in which it was considered that persons should be allowed to stand. A deputation representing the principal London music-halls attended before the Council in the October of 1905, and protested against any fresh action in the matter.

The Council then asked the opinion of the Lord Chamberlain, who advised that the audience should not be allowed to stand in the gangways between or at the sides of the seats, but that they should be permitted to stand at the back of the seating accommodation.

The objection of the managers to the new rule proposed by the Council is easily understood. At many places of amusement the "side gangway," as it may be called, is a wide space outside the boundaries of the seats. From a practical point of view, an assemblage of people not more than three deep—and a greater depth of front would prevent the persons at the back from seeing the performance, even through interstices between the heads of those before them—could not possibly cause "obstruction" in case of a panic. These places are not gangways in any accurate meaning of the word; and, even if they were, those occupying them in a standing position could not add to the danger in case of a panic. What would happen on an alarm would be that the standers, having all the advantage of the erect position and the clear space behind them would be through the exits and out of the house several seconds before even the people from the end seats had sprung to their feet and commenced their flight. In these cases a second or two makes all the difference. The first horse in a race does not "obstruct" number two, even though it be only won by a length; nor does the first glass of wine that is poured out of a bottle "obstruct" the second. If people were permitted to sit down in the so-called "gangways" that would be a different thing. They would then be almost on a "par," as far as quickness of flight was concerned, with the occupants of the fixed and numbered seats. But, being on their feet, they are rather an advanced guard of "escapers" than part of the main body. If the exits are made large enough, and numerous enough, to permit of the departure of the bulk of the audience, much more therefore must they be sufficient to allow of the comparatively few standing-roomers getting out by them. We were pleased to find that at the meeting of the Council on Tuesday, Mr. Greenwood, the vice-chairman of the Theatres and Music Halls Committee, stated that, in view of the representations on the subject made by the Theatrical Managers' Association, the Committee did not intend to submit their recommendation that it should be "referred to the Theatres and Music Halls Committee to consider and report as to the number of persons to be admitted to the various parts of the places of public entertainment licensed by the Council with a view to such numbers being registered on the plans in the possession of the Council; that the number of persons to be admitted to any part should in no case exceed the exit capacity of that part; that in no circumstances should persons be permitted to stand or sit in any of the side or intersecting gangways; and that, if standing be permitted in any other part, it should not be in such a position or to such an extent as to interfere with the ready egress of the seated audience."

MR. EDITOR,—Sir,—In noticing my new play, A Heart's Desire, in last week's issue, your Sutton-in-Ashfield correspondent has omitted to mention the name of the author,—Yours faithfully, FRANK ADAIR.—Grand Theatre, Blackpool, April 2, 1906.

TERRY'S THEATRE.

On Saturday, March 31,
Revival of the Farce, in Three Acts,
by H. M. Paull, entitled
"THE NEW CLOWN."

Mr. Lamb	MR. GORDON TOMKINS
Thomas Baker	MR. E. DAGNALL
Winnie Chesterton	MISS HELEN MASSY
Captain Jack Trent	MR. GEORGE F. TULLY
Maude Chesterton	MISS GLADYS MASON
Lord Cyril Garston	MR. JAMES WELCH
Billy	MR. LEONARD BUTTRESS
Mr. Dixon	MR. G. H. SNAZELLE
Rosie Platt	MISS ESTELLE WINWOOD
Mr. Pennyquick	MR. LEOPOLD PROFEIT
Ping Pong	BY HIMSELF
Figgis	MR. JOHN W. DEVERELL
Boy	MASTER JACK FROST
P.C. 1006	MR. C. ENTWISTLE

Mr. James Welch, one of the most artistic and original of our actor-managers, has been rather unfortunate in selecting plays for his season at Terry's Theatre, and has had to fall back upon a revival of Mr. H. M. Paull's amusing play The New Clown, which was successfully produced at this house on Feb. 8, 1892. The piece, which is modestly entitled a farce, contains much genuine comedy, and the mixture of observation and absurdity is very effective. Its tone is pure and pleasant, and it is acted with a finish which elevates it in the artistic scale. Mr. Welch is as quaintly effeminate and dryly droll as ever as the little Lord who, in order to escape arrest for the manslaughter which he believes that he has committed, dons the motley, and suffers so much in his attempts to take the place of a professional clown, Thomas Baker, who is represented by Mr. E. Dagnall with an unctuous and eccentric oddity which is irresistible. Mr. Leopold Profeit as the smug and servile Mr. Pennyquick is very cleverly made up, and acts with all the necessary oiliness; and Mr. George F. Tully is the ideal of hearty, downright good-tempered manliness as Captain Jack Trent. Mr. G. H. Snazelle as Mr. Dixon presents a well-considered and capitally carried-out impersonation of the elderly circus proprietor. Every detail of complexion and character is most cleverly supplied, and the contrast between Dixon in mufti and the same individual got up for appearance in the ring, is extremely funny. Mr. Snazelle must be credited with a performance of genuine humour and real merit. Miss Estelle Winwood plays Rosie Platt—the pleasing personage originally depicted by Miss Nina Boucicault—with bright, expressive simplicity; and Mr. Leonard Buttress is sufficiently athletic in appearance for the part of Billy, and suggests, with sturdy energy, the rough earnestness of the professional athlete. Mr. John W. Deverell's Figgis is easy, natural, and true to type; and Mr. C. Entwistle is a vigorous P.C. The parts of the two Miss Chestertons have charming exponents in Miss Helen Massy and Miss Gladys Mason; and Master Jack Frost shows decided promise as the boy who brings the washing. The performance of The New Clown was punctuated with bursts of laughter, and the revival evidently gave great satisfaction. It was preceded by the play in one act by Charles H. E. Brookfield, entitled,

"A LADY BURGLAR."

Miss Honora Macfarlane ..MISS GLADYS MASON
Mr. Darcy FitzHerbert ..MR. HENRY J. FORD

The idea of this bright little piece, which was produced at Liverpool in the November of 1894, is somewhat fantastic. Miss Honora Macfarlane, a young lady whose head appears to have been turned by Socialistic study, plans to put her theories into practice by becoming a burglar, and, with a view of "learning the business," makes an inroad on the flat of an acquaintance of hers, a barrister named Darcy FitzHerbert, with whom she has already engaged in a sentimental flirtation. FitzHerbert finds her in his room when he returns, and, clapping a pair of handcuffs on her wrists, retains her in his company, amusing himself with her artless explanations of her presence in his flat at midnight. After some diverting dialogue, the lady is allowed to depart, after giving the young man every encouragement to press his suit later on. A Lady Burglar was prettily played by Miss Gladys Mason, who made a delightfully impulsive and very prepossessing Miss Macfarlane; and by Mr. Henry J. Ford, who was crisp, alert, and polished as Mr. Darcy FitzHerbert. The little piece was quite cordially received.

THE members of the Committee of Management of the Royal Academy of Music commemorated the eightieth birthday of the King's Harpist, Mr. John Thomas (Pencerdd Gwalia) on St. David's Day by the presentation of a handsome silver inkstand. Accompanying the gift was a letter of congratulation from his colleagues, who added: "As student, professor, and member of committee your name stands permanently in the history of your Alma Mater, and that of no more loyal servant of its interests or its artistic welfare is to be found recorded in those pages."

FIVE men were prosecuted for musical piracy at Leeds Assizes on the 30th ult. by the Music Publishers' Association, on behalf of Messrs. Chappell and Co. and others. It was stated that during the last twelve months the officers of the society had seized over a million copies of pirated music in the United Kingdom, and the piracy was still going on. Evidence was tendered that no consent had been given to copy the music. The defence was raised that there was no common design or conspiracy. The judge said that he desired to deal leniently with the prisoners, because possibly they did not fully appreciate what they were doing. John O. Smith, described by his lordship as a wholesale dealer, was sentenced to two months' imprisonment. Four other prisoners were sent to gaol for various periods, and others were bound over.

MISS MABEL LEWES has been this week playing Miss Julia Neilson's part in The Scarlet Pimpernel at the New Theatre, and has sustained the rôle very cleverly and creditably.

AT the head of the bill this week at the Palace Theatre, Boston, were Harry Clyo and Rose Rochelle, in their unique speciality act; Chas. Danton, a clever character comedian, shows his ability as a vocalist, whistler, and dancer; Tom Brantford, "the human band," brings the house down with his mimicry; the Hulines, Continental musical clowns, cause much merriment; Miss Bessie Travis is a wonderfully clever ventriloquist; and Miss Nellie Nora, in a refined musical act. Frank Zara, the funny story-teller; and Miss Ruby Ransford complete a really first-class company. Business is very good, many being unable to get in on Monday night.

MISS VI CARLYLE'S charming song, written and composed by herself, and entitled "My Pretty Little Mountain Maid," is in the press, and will shortly be issued by the Charing Cross-road firm of music publishers, who have likewise secured Mr. Harry Bedford's clever and tuneful ditty, by Barnes and Weston, "Live a day at a time."

THE I.A.L.

AT the London meeting of the International Artists' Lodge, held at the Hotel Provence, Leicester-square, on Sunday, Brother 1139 re-opened the discussion which had taken place the week before with regard to the duties and customs demanded in the American ports on goods brought over by artists. He declared that all artists can take goods which are required by them for the gaining of their living into America as their personal luggage. Another brother declared that he had to pay 36 dollars on apparatus he took into America. This was a set-off against the experience of a third brother, with electric lamps, who had had to pay no duty. From the conflicting evidence the chairman said that it seemed as if it was a matter of luck to a great extent. It appeared from the testimony of several brothers that animals born in America, or which had been there before, need not go into quarantine. Also animals to be used in the pursuance of one's profession need not go in quarantine if they are to be taken out of the country again within six months.

BROTHER 1365 informed those present that Mr. Hill, the business-agent of the Dover and Calais line, at the London Bridge station, would always change a third-class ticket to a second, and a second to a first, for anyone who could prove himself a bonâ-fide artist, and wanted to travel to the Continent. Brother 1365 had himself not known this till he got to Paris, where the assistant-manager of the Alhambra had sent his (the artist's) tickets to London, and so enabled Mr. Hill to endorse them, and allow the artist to travel back to England first class with a second-class ticket.

BROTHER 1139 brought forward a resolution to the effect that the meetings of the lodge at the Hôtel Provence should begin at seven o'clock instead of six, which was a most inconvenient hour for nearly everybody concerned. The motion was passed unanimously.

IT was reported to the meeting that he pamphlets which it was decided to print some time ago would be ready in the course of the week, and the meeting recommended that the executive committee should send out small parcels to members in different parts of the country for propaganda purposes, as members are often somewhat at a loss when asked for a clear and definite statement of the aims and principles of the I.A.L. This motion was passed.

MR. SIDNEY LEIGHTON writes from Birmingham, under date April 2:—"Reading in your interesting 'Theatrical Gossip' of difficulties met with and overcome by a lady artist, perhaps an account of a difficulty I met with recently may not be uninteresting. I have just returned from a six months' tour of 20,000 miles through the West Indies and South America, with Willie Freear—perhaps the greatest globe-trotter in the profession. My ventriloquial figure not only caused amusement, but some amazement amongst the superstitious natives of Trinidad, Jamaica, and elsewhere; in fact, so much was it appreciated, that it was stolen from the landing wharf at Trinidad, and the man got clean away with figure, case, and various other props, and I've never set eyes on them since.

"MY reputation must have reached Barbados, for the audience clamoured for my ventriloquial sketch on our opening night. Of course, not having a figure, I had to cut it and substitute something else. However, I promised a ventriloquial sketch on the second night, but what to do for a figure I didn't know. It suddenly struck me that I had seen heads carved from cocoanuts, and I obtained a green one of good size, and carved a very respectable-looking face on it. With a little trouble, and the aid of some wire and elastic, I made the mouth movable, and of course the body was easily made with some small barrel-hoops, an old hat-box, and a suit of boy's clothes. With this substitute I finished the remaining four months of our tour, and if the West Indian papers are to be believed, not without success. I have brought it home with me, and shall keep it as a curio and a proof that one should never say die."

GEORGE ROBEY'S great grievance in life is that nobody will believe that he is a splendid athlete. Robey, who appears at the Hackney Empire next week, complained to the writer that he cannot get people in private life to take him seriously. "My greatest hobby," said Robey, "when I am engaged at a provincial hall, is to organise a scratch cricket team among the stage hands. The town team is challenged, and on the day fixed I lead my team on to the field. Although I seldom publish an announcement that the match will take place, the ground is invariably crowded with spectators, who commence to laugh immediately I make my appearance. If I make a good catch or take a difficult wicket I never get the credit another man would. If I fall everyone regards it as a funny incident, and the laughter is immoderate. Altogether I find it very hard lines being a popular comedian, for one is never allowed to take anything seriously And you know I am really a splendid all-round athlete—I am really. But I can't get anyone to believe it."

SOME months ago it was announced in The Era that the Empire Theatre, Liverpool, was to be converted into a two-houses-per-night concern. The scheme, however, fell through. On Thursday there was a revival of the matter, when an application was made at the Transfer Licensing Sessions by Moss' Empires, Ltd., for permission to introduce the system of two performances a night. The solicitor representing the applicants said it had been found necessary to go with the times, and they could not give the same satisfaction by having the long performance as they could in having the entertainment shortened and giving two a night. That being so, the question was whether the Empire would enjoy its privilege of having a full Excise licence? The Empire Company had bought the whole of the adjoining block of buildings (this was stated in The Era some time ago) and they proposed to rebuild the theatre. Moss', Ltd., had changed their programmes from one to two per night in seven houses which they owned in the country, and the Excise licences attached to them had not been taken away.

THE Chairman of the Bench said that the Excise licence was granted to the present applicants ten years ago, because the building had been a theatre (the Alexandra), and when it ceased to be such he thought it should have been deprived of the licence to sell drink. It was quite true they had theatrical performances at times, and therefore it would have been unwise, perhaps unfair, to take away the privilege of selling drink; but, now that they proposed that the place should cease to be a theatre, and just become an ordinary two-performances-a-night music hall, why should it have any different privileges to the Olympia and Hippodrome? If the Bench granted such an application, all the other music halls would ask for a similar privilege, and, in justice, it could not be refused. In respect to what had been done elsewhere, Liverpool did not follow other towns. Furthermore, considering the immense traffic in Lime-street, the applicants, if they decided to have two houses, would have to make accommodation for the people of the second house inside their premises. The application was withdrawn.

THE praise given to Miss Nancy Browne in last week's notice of the Elephant and Castle should have been devoted to Miss Nell Oliver, who played the part of Morita in Mr. F. Melville's Ugliest Woman on Earth company.

VARIETY GOSSIP.

The annual dinner in aid of the Music Hall Benevolent Fund will be held at the Trocadero on Sunday, April 29, under the presidency of Mr. J. L. Graydon, the president of the fund, who would be pleased to hear from any gentlemen willing to act as stewards. The secretary makes a strong appeal for donations and subscriptions, as the distress is very great and the funds are very low. Tickets, one guinea, may be obtained from any of the committee, or by letter addressed to the secretary at the office, 18, Adam-street, Strand, W.C.

Mr. Bransby Williams will, on Monday, at the Empire produce an entirely new mimetic duologue, entitled Actors, Day by Day, in which he, assisted by Miss Daisy Cordell, from the pantomime at Drury-lane Theatre, will give impersonations of well-known actors in a novel form.

At the Empire on Easter Wednesday, if elaborate scenery will permit, the revue by George Grossmith, jun., Venus, 1906, will be produced. It is in four scenes, the last a mechanical novelty, showing how Venus revenges herself by destroying London. In the production the principal characters will be taken by Miss Sybil Arundale, Miss Firth (who will make a stately Venus), Miss Daisy Cordell, Mr. W. H. Berry, Mr. C. Tremayne, and Mr. Harry Grattan. Pilu, the thought-reading dog, is still puzzling Empire audiences.

An interesting presentation was made on Monday evening at the Lyceum, when Mrs. M. Barrasford was the recipient of a handsome gift, which was handed to her on behalf of a large number of season-ticket holders for her successful management of the house since September last. The presentation consisted of a replica of the famous Lyceum portico in gold, and outlined with diamonds. Mr. Barrasford suitably responded.

When the Oxford and Cambridge crews pay their annual visit (for the third year in succession) to the Alhambra this evening, a special feature of the "Urbanora" entertainment will be a panorama of the Boat Race in animated photographs, for the taking of which Mr. Urban has consummated a most perfect scheme. By this every salient feature in the struggle will be as graphically pictured as are the many exciting incidents in this exhibitor's pictorial record of the recent Grand National, now being given there nightly at 9.50 p.m.

Carl Hertz, having received a cable from America informing him that his father is dangerously ill in San Francisco, sails to-day on the s.s. St. Paul for New York en route to San Francisco.

Mr. Neil Kenyon, who concludes to-night five weeks' phenomenally successful engagement at the London Pavilion, has been ordered by his doctor to give his voice a few days' rest. He returns to the Piccadilly-circus house at the end of October, when he will produce a burlesque scena entitled Rob-Roy, of that ilk.

Three weeks ago the Palace Theatre staff were in mourning for the death of "Jack," known throughout the variety theatre world as "The Palace Dog." On Thursday evening Mr. M. V. Leveaux very generously presented Mr. Fitzroy Gardner, the assistant-manager of the Palace, with a magnificent pedigree bulldog to take the place of the late-lamented "Jack" as third fireman, who now rests (preserved by Rowland Ward) in a glass case in the green-room of the theatre.

Nothing in the progress of modern entertainment is more remarkable than Mr. John Tiller's successful captures of what had previously been regarded as the strongholds of the art of Terpsichore on the Continent. Mr. Tiller lately produced at the Winter Garden, Berlin, a ballet entitled Roccoco, of which a local journalist says that it easily holds its own in contra-distinction to the ballets of the Opera House. It is original and charming; of a distinction almost incredible in one's experience of vaudeville. But Roccoco has done more than captivate a critic. There was a special afternoon performance lately for the delectation of a party, including the Crown Prince and Princess and several other members of the Royal Family, who bestowed upon the Tiller ballet hearty applause and enthusiastic compliments.

Little Elizabeth Neiman, of seven summers, is a daughter of Fred Neiman, the ventriloquist, and is an ardent collector of funds for the Music Hall Home. Her card this week contains 43½ shillings. Let other little music hall misces go and do likewise.

Miss Agnes Molteno, for the first time, on Monday introduced a new feature into her scena, The Daughter of the Regiment. A little girl dressed exactly as herself—in fact, a miniature vivandiere—acted as standard bearer, and brought on the British flag, and was vociferously applauded.

In consequence of the indisposition of Sir Henry Kimber, Bart., M.P., his son, Mr. Henry Dickson Kimber, laid the foundation-stone last Saturday of the new Putney Hippodrome, situate in Felsham-road. The new Hippodrome has a frontage of 110ft. to Felsham-road, and is surrounded on the three other sides by a 20ft. way, being therefore completely isolated.

Mesdames Victoria Monks, Ella Retford, Ella Shields, Julie Mackay, Lilian Lea, and Lily Burnand have been scoring great success with Messrs. Feldman's songs in London this week; truly a fine bevy of talent to make any firm proud.

Mr. Wal Pink, that most ingenious and witty of sketch author-actors, is responsible for a new production entitled Repairs, announced as an acrobatic, knockabout dancing interlude, which describes in the funniest fashion possible how Messrs. Spoiler and Mecsitt set about the refurbishing (?) and redecorating (?) of Muddleton Villa. The sketch was produced with tremendous success at the Hippodrome, Southampton, and has been scoring a triumph this week at the Duchess, Balham. On Monday next it goes to the Zoo-Hippodrome, Glasgow.

The usual fortnightly meeting of the Music Hall Sick Fund will be held at the York Hotel on Wednesday next at two o'clock.

The latest coon craze comes from the pens of those prolific writers, Messrs. Castling, Mills, and Scott. The title is "My Bungalow in Borneo," and the publishers, B. Feldman and Co., anticipate a very lively time with it this summer.

Before departing from this country, Commander Sakamoto, of His Imperial Majesty's battleship Katori, and Commander Ijichi, of His Imperial Majesty's battleship Kashima, sent letters of thanks to Mr. Oswald Stoll and Mr. John Donald for the warm welcome accorded their men last week at the London Coliseum. The letter reads as follows:—"On behalf of the officers and 600 men who have been ordered by the Imperial Government to navigate home His Imperial Majesty's battleships Katori and Kashima, we have to express our cordial appreciation of your warm and enthusiastic welcome to the Coliseum. We take this opportunity on leaving for our respective destinations to tender, on behalf of said officers and men, our most hearty thanks, and beg you to accept our cordial wishes for your prosperity and good health."

At the annual general meeting of the Maidstone Hippodrome Co., Ltd., which took place at Maidstone on Wednesday, Mr. G. Howard Watson was appointed managing director of the company, such appointment to take effect immediately.

Mr. Richard Thornton, who has undertaken the building of one of his Empires at Sunderland, cut the first sod in connection with the enterprise on Monday. The ceremony was brief and business-like. An incision was made in a workmanlike manner, with an ordinary workman's spade, on the spot on the site facing High-street where the central tower is to spring from. Mr. Thornton filled a barrow with earth, and wheeled it away to a spot from which it will be carted off the site.

Following this spell of unusual labour, Mr. T. R. Milburn, one of the firm of architects from whose plans the theatre is to be erected, presented Mr. Thornton, on behalf of Mr. J. W. White, the contractor, and his own firm, with a miniature silver spade, as a souvenir of the occasion. On one side was the Sunderland coat of arms, and on the other the inscription "Presented to R. Thornton, Esq., on turning the first sod of the new Empire Theatre, Sunderland, April 2, 1906. W. D. and T. R. Milburn, architects; J. W. White, contractor."

In making the presentation, Mr. Milburn expressed the hope that the undertaking would be as successful as others of the same kind which Mr. Thornton had carried through, and said that that was the best wish he could offer. Mr. Thornton thanked the architects and the builder for their present. He said it was totally unexpected. Sunderland for a long time had been in need of a good music hall, and he should do all in his power to make the undertaking a success.

The new hall, which is on the site of the old Bishopwearmouth Rectory, High-street, Sunderland, is estimated to cost £21,000 for building (capital £43,000). The building will be of three tiers, and will look on High-street and Dun Cow-street. It will have seating accommodation for 3,000 people. One noticeable feature will be the absence of stage-boxes, the space usually occupied by the same being seated so that the occupants will face the stage. There will be waiting-halls for each section of the house, and distinct exits apart from the entrances, the site being an island one. When completed, the house will be run in conjunction with the Moss, Thornton and Stoll tours.

The new Empire at Sunderland will be the 39th in conjunction with the great Moss combine all over the country, and we understand that Mr. Frank Allen, the chief of the staff of Moss' Empires, will be one of the directors.

Croydon's new Empire Palace of Varieties is announced to open its doors to the public for the first time on Saturday next, April 14, when Croydon amusement-lovers will be able to boast of a variety theatre worthy of such an important borough. The new house occupies the site of the old National Palace of Varieties, situated off North End, but whereas the old building was approached through a passage, the entrance to the new house fronts directly into North End—an important position, seeing that North End is one of Croydon's principal thoroughfares and is on the main road for traffic London to Brighton.

The old National Hall was built by Mr. Percy Hubbard for Mr. T. Gardiner Hales in 1895, and it was then used as a circus. In October, 1896, it was taken over by Messrs. Seymour and Athol, and run as a variety hall, and remained under their management until January, 1897, when a company was formed, under the title of the National Palace of Varieties (Croydon), Ltd., with Mr. Jesse Sparrow as general manager, the directors being Messrs. Dan Leno, Herbert Campbell, Harry Randall, Fred Williams, Henry Joyner, and G. E. S. Venner. The old house closed for good in May last, and Mr. Hales decided to have it pulled down and a more substantial and up-to-date theatre erected in its place. At various times the National was under the active management of Mr. P. A. Lennon, Mr. Arthur J. Barclay, and Mr. Eustace H. Jay, the latter being a very popular manager from the time he took charge in June, 1898, until the house closed last May.

The new Empire is not the first of its name in Croydon, as the present Theatre Royal was run as a music hall from September, 1897, until April, 1898, under the title of Empire Theatre of Varieties, Ltd., under the directorship of Messrs. Fred Bartlett and Edmund G. Pratt, with Mr. Will Sergeant as manager. Mr. Hales is, however, the first to introduce two houses a night to Croydon, and it remains to be seen whether this innovation is a wise one. The new house seems at present far from complete, and doubt is expressed in the town whether it will really be finished by Saturday next. Those concerned, however, seem sanguine about the date, and Mr. Wallis, the builder, is said to have 170 men engaged.

Mr. Thomas Barrasford has kindly lent to Donald's Agency, of 85, Victoria-street, Liverpool, the Hippodrome, in that town, for their first "trial" performance for latent talent, on condition that the proceeds, after paying the usual expenses, are devoted to the Music Hall Home. The agency is simply inundated with applications, and as soon as a special staff has evolved order from the present chaos a definite announcement will be made concerning the dates and other particulars. Aspirants are requested to have patience while waiting for a reply and particulars. Applications, accompanied by a stamped addressed envelope, should still be sent in. There is room yet for talent of all kinds, and the best will come out "on top."

A pleasant instance of the good feeling which exists between the artists and staff of the Empire Palace Theatre, Edinburgh, was shown last week. Mr. Harry Stuart, stage-manager, in the name of himself and one or two friends, took the opportunity, behind the curtain, after the turn of the Aurora troupe, on Wednesday evening, of presenting a gold pendant to little Miss Aurora. The tiny performer has endeared herself, by her bright and winning ways, to all the staff, and Mr. Stuart expressed the admiration of the subscribers for her fearless act, and their love for her personality.

A public and gratifying presentation was made on Saturday last to Mr. P. D. Elbourne, resident-manager of the Birmingham Hippodrome, by Dr. Bodie, of a handsome solid gold match-box and sovereign purse combined, bearing the inscription, "To P. D. Elbourne, a live manager, from Dr. Bodie." The presentation was accompanied by much cheering on the part of the audience, who, uprising, sang, "For he's a jolly good fellow."

A painful accident happened on Wednesday morning at the Ardwick Empire, Manchester, to an Old Trafford gymnast named Arthur Baxter during a trial performance by him as "the Human Bullet."

At the Palace Theatre, Sunderland, on March 29, Mr. Andrew McManus presented Mr. W. J. Ashcroft with a gold-mounted umbrella, and from Mr. John Kirk the "solid man" received a silver-mounted walking-stick. Mr. McManus accompanied Mr. Ashcroft on the stage, and said he felt it impossible to let the opportunity pass without showing in some small way the intense and heartfelt appreciation of an old friend. Mr. Ashcroft suitably responded.

Miss Mary Allestree, who is playing Virginie in Drink with Mr. Chas. Warner at the Coliseum, is having quite an experience in character studies, her last four parts being a Russian lady, a Scottish chieftainess, a Red Indian girl, and a French bourgeoise.

Miss Margaret Ashton is greatly benefiting in health from the sea voyage and delightful climate of Cintra. The charming cantatrice returns by one of the R.M.S. boats from Lisbon next week, and will appear for the next six weeks at the Oxford. Later in the year she fulfils engagements at Leipzig and Vienna.

Mr. Sam Mayo has instructed Mr. Wilfrid Powell, his solicitor, to issue a writ against the Sun newspaper for alleged libel under the headline "Around the Halls" in a recent issue. The writ has been served.

Miss Lily Burnand has in active rehearsal one of Messrs. B. Feldman and Co.'s latest gems entitled "I wonder if the girl I'm thinking of is thinking of me."

Miss Florrie Gallimore has accepted from Messrs. John P. Harrington and Jas. W. Tate a new comedy song of unique character entitled "Are you coming home to-night, Mister Brown?" which she is producing while on the Stoll tour, and to which she will give prominence in conjunction with her evergreen success "Remember Me to Mother Dear," at her forthcoming Oxford engagement.

Miss Millie Lindon has during the week been scoring a "hit—a palpable hit," with Messrs. Ballard Macdonald and Jas. W. Tate's delightfully quaint story-song, "Mary—she kept a Dairy," at the Palace Theatre and her other engagements, and the Monte Carlo Publishing Co. have already been inundated with orders for it. It is one of their "Sixpenny Successes" series.

Charles Collette, who returns from a flying visit to Manchester, will present his brilliantly-successful farce-duologue Tea for Two at the Metropolitan on Monday, supported by the graceful young actress, Miss Helen Perry.

Miss Katie Marsh, the rising young entertainer, has been compelled to relinquish her engagements for the present, to undergo an operation by a throat specialist at Brompton Hospital. She, however, expects to be able to resume business shortly.

H. Cee-Mee has just returned from Frank Brown's Circus in South America, where, we are pleased to hear, he achieved a great success. His son, Lionel Harry Peat Cee-Mee, made his first appearance on the stage as a fat policeman in the water pantomime at the tender age of four years. We hope the kiddy's career will be as successful as that of his grandfather, the great Cee-Mee.

Mr. John Lawson and his company, with The Shield of David and A Bride for a Living, will visit New Cross Empire next week, when they will also present The King's Minister, by Cecil Raleigh. Only quite recently Mr. Lawson sustained a loss of £5,000 worth of scenery through railway trucks taking fire when he was en route for Belfast.

"Dronza," the latest sensational novelty at the London Hippodrome, is a marvellous mechanical invention. A beautifully modelled wax head, slightly larger than that of a human being, is brought into the arena and placed on a machine, somewhat resembling in appearance a miniature organ. It is this head which, without assistance of any kind, speaks in a loud, clear, and perfectly distinct voice, displaying a remarkable knowledge of things past, present, and even future, and also possessing a wonderful aptitude for answering questions on various subjects. The entire mechanism is laid bare for inspection, and undoubtedly one of the most surprising features of the entertainment is the sight of this complicated machinery suddenly set in motion without the aid of any outside agency whatsoever. An elaborately-dressed footman stands by the side of the head during the performance. "Dronza" is well up in "events," and Datas will have to look to his laurels.

The Press were invited on Monday to the Hippodrome to view the working of the great water scene in the latest sensational melodramatic spectacle The Flood. Under the apt guidance of Mr. Frank Parker a small army of stage hands construct, with the celerity of magic, the village of Ripplemere. Shapeless masses of canvas-covered woodwork become picturesque mountains, bridges, and cottages. In a few minutes the stage is peopled with villagers celebrating the wedding of hero and heroine, while a translucent waterfall dashes into the mill weir below. At a signal from the stage-manager the sky becomes o'ercast, the thunder rolls, and the lightning flashes. The waterfall grows in volume until, with a mighty roar, it bursts forth in its full fury, sweeping everything before it. Horses, cattle, men, women, and children are submerged, and never was a catastrophe more potently realised. The spectacle is even more amazing from the wings than the auditorium.

An unfortunate accident occurred at the Walthamstow Palace on Tuesday evening, when, during the interval between the two performances, one of the men employed on the stage, J. H. Barrick, in descending the "flies" ladder, missed his footing, and fell a considerable distance on to the stage. Mr. Arthur J. Barclay immediately sent for aid, and it was found that the unfortunate man had sustained a severe fracture of the leg. He was at once conveyed on an ambulance to the Walthamstow Hospital, where he is likely to remain for some time to come.

Miss Victoria Monks has this week secured two new songs from the combined pens of Messrs. Tom Mellor, Alf. J. Lawrance, and Harry Gifford. Both numbers will be produced during the forthcoming week at the Tivoli. They are respectively entitled "Ev'ry little bit of help's worth a deal of pity," and "Hullo! Who's there?"

Mr. C. Wordley Hulse, whose sketch The Fight in the Forge has met with much success in the provinces, has now brought it to London, opening last week at Sadler's Wells. It is gratifying to note that the verdict of the provinces is confirmed in London, and that the miniature drama is nightly winning favour, culminating in enthusiasm over the realistic battle with sledge-hammers between two blacksmiths. This week The Fight in the Forge is being played twice nightly at the Palace, Bow, and the rest of the Macnaghten halls follow consecutively.

The following artists left Southampton per the Kildonan Castle on Saturday to fulfil engagements with Sydney M. Hyman (Limited), of Leicester-square, W.C., at the Empire Palace, Johannesburg, and the Tivoli, Capetown:—The Picquays, singing and dancing act; Fred Land, quaint English comedian; De Witt, Burns, and Torrance, American artists in the mirthful presentation The Awakening of Toys; Stuart, American male-voiced Patti; and Cora Corina, Anglo-Spanish speciality artist. Amongst the artists arriving home from South Africa on the same day were:—Bros. Damm, Odeyne Spark, Lillie Soutter, and De Vere and Kenwick.

At a meeting of the Theatre, Concert, and Variety Agents' Association recently it was decided to advertise in The Era inviting artists who may be asked for preliminary or registration fees by agents to communicate with that Association, which has been formed for the protection of artists against not only bogus agents, but so-called agents who demand preliminary fees of various amounts from artists before they will attempt to do any business for them. It is this practice which caused the London County Council to introduce their recent Bill, which came into force last January, and which makes it compulsory for every agent who takes any preliminary fee of any kind to take out a licence from the County Council. The founders of the Association know very well that there are quite a number who do charge these preliminary fees, and have no licence. They are particularly desirous to impress upon the profession that members of the Association are working in conjunction with the London County Council. They do not accept any fees or payment from an artist until such artist has fulfilled the engagement which the agent books, and are not required to be licensed. In dealing with any agent who is a member of the Association, artists know that they are being properly treated, and are in respectable hands.

Mr Joe O'Gorman occupied the chair at the 457th meeting of the committee of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association, held at the general offices in Wellington-street on Tuesday. There were also present Messrs. Fred Herbert, James Finney, Frank Gerald, Chas. Pastor, Jeff Vendome, and C. Douglas Stuart, secretary. The minutes of the previous meeting having been duly passed, the secretary read a letter from the Ocean Company, saying that an ex gratia payment would be made to the mother of the late Mr. Donaldson (Allen), who lost his life recently at sea. The secretary reported the death of Mr. Chas. Proctor, the Association's agent in Plymouth, and a vote of sympathy with the widow was passed. A letter was read from a railway agent, giving particulars of a case of base ingratitude on the part of a performer whom he had assisted by a loan and otherwise, and submitting a bill for expenses incurred, and the secretary was instructed to communicate with the artist.

A letter, stating that the widow of the late J. D. Humphreys was left unprovided for, and suggesting that some means of assisting her be promoted by the Association, was considered. It was decided that the applicant be informed that it was contrary to the Association's rules to deal with such matters, but that the committee would be glad to give their individual support should the case be taken up in any other quarter. In answer to an application by a member for a loan, the secretary was instructed to write that the committee had no power to lend money. Mr. Henry Brown, jun., of the Canterbury Hotel, Southend, was appointed agent in that town. The secretary reported the addition of fifty-two new members, and read the financial statement for the week, the receipts amounting to £37 19s. 6d.

Mr. J. L. Graydon, the chairman of the annual dinner of the Music Hall Benevolent Fund, asks all those directly or indirectly connected with the profession, to render all the assistance possible to make this event successful, with a view of helping the fund, which is now so greatly in need of support. It is only by the liberal support of the profession and others that the good work can be continued, and it is hoped that all interested in the chief music hall charity will show their willingness to assist in befriending those who are so much in need of help. Donations will be gratefully acknowledged both at the dinner and through the Press.

The Terriers gave their last social of the season on Sunday at the Dover Castle. Mr. Fred W. Millis, who was in the chair, was warmly welcomed after his tour of the East. During the evening the following were well received: Miss Ada Norman, Miss Elsie Baker, Miss Kathleen Leslie, little Minnie Atlas, Miss May McCrystal, Messrs. Beaverly Long, Tom Packer, H. Cory Woodrow, Steve Buckingham, Andie Caine, Edward Bartell, Walter Norman, and F. W. Millis. Archie Howells acted as accompanist, and Walter Norman ably officiated as M.C.

Something quite new in violins will be seen at the Lyceum next week, when Simms and Simms will submit their new musical comedy entertainment. The latest invention has been termed the "Kokiu." It consists of one string, on a long frame, but the special feature of the instrument is the blending of five different kinds of wood, ranging from bamboo to pine. This is a violation of the usual law in the manufacture of string instruments, and the result obtained is the nearest approach to a human contralto that has yet been heard.

Mr. Charles Craig, who has succeeded Mr. Chris. Wordsworth as acting-manager at the Surrey, was the other evening the delighted recipient of a valuable token of the esteem in which he is held by the staff. Mr. Chris. Wordsworth, in making the presentation on their behalf of a gold lever watch, said the inscription inside, "A token of respect to Mr. Charles Craig by the staff of the Surrey Theatre, March 29, 1906," conveyed more than he could say as to the sterling qualities of the recipient with whom he had worked in perfect harmony. To Mrs. Craig was given a silver mounted umbrella and a diamond and opal ring. Mr. Craig returned thanks in a few graceful sentences.

Mendel, the blind pianist, who is this week occupying the premier position at Her Majesty's Theatre, Walsall, is introducing for the first time in public a decidedly clever novelty, by giving at one and the same time three tunes. He first of all plays "Stop yer tickling, Jock" and "The Bluebells of Scotland," one with each hand. Afterwards, on repeating the same, he introduces vocally another tune, "Auld Lang Syne," making three distinct melodies at once. He has had a most successful tour in the provinces of six months, and opens in London again with Mr. Walter Gibbons at the Hippodrome, Ealing.

"Pimple" and Tom White's Arabs are this week meeting with tremendous success at the Hippodrome, Stockton-on-Tees, the scene of "Pimple's" former triumphs, he having made his first appearance in public there with the late James Haslam (England's great clog dancer), at the old Star Varieties, when Haslam led him on by the hand to sing "The ship that never returned." This was at the age of six!

Miss Lil Hawthorne's latest song novelty, which has been secured for publication by Messrs. Francis and Day, is entitled "My cosy caravan," and is written and composed by Messrs. Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford. Mr. Day, at the same time, also acquired a "free" song, entitled "Like a sailor of the King," by the same author-composers.

The musical curtain-raiser, In the Strand, which at present precedes Messrs. Lionel Glenister and Wood-Ingram's production of Sweet and Twenty on tour, will most probably be seen on the halls in the autumn. It will be taken out by Mr. Walter Cranch, the author. Mr. George Ess, a young composer, is writing new music for it. Two songs from the pen of the latter gentleman will be produced by Miss Maidie Scott at Morecambe in Easter week.

That amusing and most tuneful comic effusion made so popular by Messrs. Walton and Lester, entitled "Down by the river," has been secured by Mr. David Day for publication. It is the joint work of those well-known writers T. F. Robson and Percy Edgar.

Mr. T. E. Finglas's tuneful number entitled "She's my only gal" has been accepted for publication by Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter. It is by H. F. Greenfield, who has also just fitted Miss Alma Gray with a song entitled "My Paramatta Queen."

Miss Nell Richardson has made quite a hit at the London Pavilion with "The Rose of my heart," the charming ballad by Charles Wilmott and Henry E. Pether, which Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter have just placed on the market.

The new musical comedy sketch Missing; or, the Light of Day, written by Preston Hope, composed by Ernest Vousden, which was produced at the Shepherd's Bush Empire on April 2 by Johnnie Schofield and J. C. Piddock, has proved such a great success that they at once start on tour, opening at Belfast on Monday, the 9th inst.

Mr. Harry Taft, after a successful run of four years in England, will sail on April 28 for New York, where he will book turns in conjunction with Mr. Harry Burns. He will return on August 6, opening at the Park Palace and Haymarket, Liverpool

Mr. Will Smithson intends striking out in a new line. He will work the Theatre Royal, Merthyr, one week with variety companies, and the next with drama or opera. No doubt his fifteen years' experience in the music-halls and fifteen in the theatres will serve him in good stead.

Mrs. Walter Groves wishes to express her sincerest thanks to the many kind friends who sent telegrams, letters, and floral tributes as a mark of their sympathy in her recent great bereavement.

Sacco, the fasting man, who caused such a sensation at the Royal Italian Circus by his forty-five days' fast, has been booked by his sole agents, Chester's Agency, Ltd., Manchester, a series of thirty-day fasts in Manchester, Liverpool, Blackpool, and Southport.

Mrs. Geo. Thursby, of Thursby and Alexander, after six weeks in hospital, is now convalescent and anticipates resuming work in a few weeks time.

Mr. P. A. Lennon, the late popular manager of the Richmond Theatre, had a very successful complimentary benefit at the Castle Theatre, Richmond, on Wednesday last. The theatre was packed, Mr. Lennon's friends loyally rallying round him, his brother Terriers being agreeably prominent. Mr. Orlando Powell conducted a superb little orchestra, and the following artists appeared during the evening:—R. Bland, comedian; Kathleen Leslie, male impersonator; Mr. and Mrs. F. Elliston, All the World's a Stage; Mabel Sinclair, lady ventriloquist; Leo Sheffield, baritone; Arthur Blount, eccentric patterer; Lily Esplin, comedienne; Ed. E. Ford, Australian comedian; Fred Bronte, descriptive vocalist; Harold Hughman, in imitations; Edith Blanchard, contralto; Andie Caine, comedian; Ella Shields, comedienne; Ernest D'Almaine, tenor; Syd Godfrey, comedian; Lazern, in modern magic; Joe Lawrence, comedian; Fred W. Millis, ventriloquist; A. E. Sinden, comedian; Little Ganty, comedian; and E. Carter Livesey and Miss Lillian Rosebery in the farcical absurdity The Would-be Actors.

The bénéficiaire was the recipient of an illuminated address and a handsome cheque. Among others who were present were Messrs. Sydney Hyman, H. Cory Woodrow, Edward Granville (Fortune and Granville), Kay Draco (Richmond Theatre), and Percy Felgate.

The Royal Zanettos have been absent some time from London. We hear that they are making a successful tour of the Continent, where they have appeared in all the principal cities. This is their sixth month. We hope to see them in town again shortly.

Mr. Andie Caine has acquired the Mustor Sands, Filey, for his pierrot performances this season.—Cosgrove and Burns are deputising for the Four Bon-Bons at the Queen's and Tivoli, Glasgow, with gratifying success.—Ernie Myers and Lily Lonsdale, who are going strong at the Hippodrome, Southampton, this week, will shortly be seen in London as single turns in new songs and business.

Mr. Tony Pastor recently celebrated the forty-first anniversary of his proprietorship of his house. Tony first came into notice as a church singer in 1843, and afterwards proceeded to Barnum's Museum as an infant prodigy. He afterwards became a minstrel, and may be said to have begun his variety career at the Broadway Music Hall, New York, in 1861, afterwards going into partnership with Sam Sharpley, with whom he opened a house on the Bowery on the site of which the People's Theatre now stands.

"I've Built a Bamboo Bungalow for You," Lawrance and Mellor's delightful song, as rendered by Miss Alice Lloyd, has conquered Johannesburg and Cape Town, and the Monte Carlo Publishing Co. have just been the recipients of cablegrams for trade copies for South Africa. "Remember Me to Mother Dear," another of the firm's publications, has also achieved much success there.

Mr. Marsham had before him at Bow-street Police-court, on Tuesday, Charles H. Houghton, commission agent, 218, Theobald's-road, and Hedley Howard, alias H. Gay, livestock dealer, Waterloo-road, charged with obtaining money from Miss Violet Crossley by false pretences. Detective-Inspector Dew stated that he went with Detective-Sergeants Stephens and Wyborn to an office on the third floor of 62, Strand, which was advertised on the windows as the office of the Empire Dramatic and General Agency. The accused were there, and he told them he held a warrant against them for obtaining money by false pretences from Violet Crossley. Houghton said, "We sent Miss Crossley to Mr. Murray, of Woolwich, and she has settled with Mrs. Murray." On this evidence a remand was asked for. Gay was released on bail. Houghton applied for bail, which was refused.

A case of some importance was heard on Thursday at the Westminster County Court before his Honour Judge Woodfall. Mr. George Foster, variety agent, claimed the sum of £14 from Mr. Philip Bisera, proprietor of a troupe called the "Eight Biseras," for procuring him an engagement at the Alhambra, Paris, for four weeks. Mr. Walter Payne, instructed by Amery-Parkes and Co., appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. Powell for the defendant. It was admitted by the plaintiff that the engagement was not worked, owing to the proprietor's refusal, as it was alleged the troupe had made certain changes. The defendant brought an action against the proprietor, and recovered his salary as damages. It was therefore submitted that the plaintiff was entitled to his commission. The defendant contended that the engagement had not been performed, and that there was nothing in the plaintiff's commission note agreeing to pay commission on any damages which might be recovered. His Honour upheld the plaintiff's submission, and gave judgment for the amount claimed, with costs.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

THE EMPIRE.

No important change of programme has yet to be recorded at this favourite place of entertainment, those extremely attractive features of the bill, The Bugle Call, ballet divertissement, and the fairy ballet, Cinderella, being nightly received with every sign of popular appreciation. In the first-mentioned piece, with its charming suggestions of rural life in a Normandy farmhouse more than a century ago, Mlle. Zanfretta continues to give her delightful performance of the Lady of the Manor, whose accomplishments include that of the art of dancing in the most dainty manner imaginable. Then we have Miss Elise Clerc as Charlot, the bright little bugler boy; and a strong incentive to mirth is found in the Colonel de Mille Tonnerres of Mr. Fred Farren, a comedian who has studied the difficult art of pantomime with such good effect that he can express his meaning very clearly without uttering a word. There are numerous other characters who have able and pleasing representatives; and life and colour are imparted to the pretty rustic picture by the presence of handsome peasant lads and lasses, gaily clad soldiers, and smart cantinières.

The old well-worn but never wearisome Cinderella legend comes out quite fresh in the form of a ballet; and though it does not fall to the lot of the heroine of the ancient story to delight us with a plaintive ballad as she sits alone by the fire she fully makes up for it by her delightful dancing. She conceals her ragged dress by the coloured cloth which she snatches from the table, and she adorns her fair hair with four bright-red feathers, and then, forgetting her disappointment at having her ticket for the Prince's ball torn up by her irate step-mother, she dances amid the shadows of the ancient hall with a grace and charm that arouse the applause of the whole house. No more fitting exponent of the part of the Baron's youngest daughter could be found than Mlle. Adeline Genée, as dainty and sweet a Cinderella as was ever seen on the stage. As to her dancing, it continues to charm everybody by its truly delightful qualities. Mlle. Zanfretta, as the fairy godmother, again renders the most valuable service by her clever embodiment of Cinderella's protector, who suddenly changes from a decrepit old dame to a dazzling creature whose habitation is unquestionably fairyland. Mr. Fred Farren furnishes a genuinely comical portrayal of Fi-Fi, the Baron's second wife, whose daughters, Brunette and Blondine, have capital representatives in Miss Elise Clerc and Miss May Paston. Miss D. Craske is a very handsome and stylish Prince, and Mr. P. Sundberg does some excellent work as the court dancing-master. Mr. W. Vokes as the Baron and Miss M. Dawson as Dandini are also deserving of a word of praise. The scenery elicits the warmest admiration.

Amongst the single turns engaged here this week is Mr. Bransby Williams, who is presenting a selection of his clever character sketches from the works of Charles Dickens. We thus renew acquaintance with Montague Tigg, who figures in "Martin Chuzzlewit," Uriah Heep, the crawling hypocrite who entertained a secret hatred for David Copperfield; and Sergeant Buzfuz, whose address to the jury in the famous breach of promise case of Bardell v. Pickwick is such a remarkable example of forensic eloquence. Mr. Williams happily hits off the peculiarities of each character he selects for portrayal; and the excellence of his illustrations from the works of the world-famous novelist are recognised by repeated applause. "Pilu," the wonderful dog, astonishes everybody by his performance; in reply to questions the animal picks out certain figures which correctly furnish the answers. Ganivet II. is an eccentric French comedian, who gives a droll turn, and is received with considerable favour. Kelly and Rino give a curious performance in which there is much smashing of chairs; while the acrobatics feats of one of the two deserve recognition. The Duo Paulus are a couple whose song and dance contributions are well received. Mac Turc scores with a comic juggling act; Mr. Burt Earle continues to add to his fame as a banjoist and comedian; and the Three Braggs also contribute to a programme which is as varied as it is attractive.

THE TIVOLI.

The near approach of Lent makes apparently no difference to the business being done at the Tivoli, where Mr. Joseph Wilson smilingly surveys a crowded house every evening. The cosy establishment in the Strand is noted for the excellence of its programmes, and this week's is no exception to the rule. There is a fine and large assortment of comedians. One of the most successful is Mr. Russell Wallett—among the few funny men who have migrated with success from the theatres. We are given to understand that Mr. Wallett languished in the provinces; but his opportunity came a few short months ago, and he made such good use of it that he is already well booked up at the principal variety theatres. He is fulfilling his second engagement at the Tivoli, where his clever performance makes a great hit nightly. He appears as "The Lady in Black," and causes roars of laughter by his imitation of a modern Romeo serenading a twentieth-century Juliet while afflicted with a very bad cold. His talk to the girls is exceedingly droll, especially when he tells them that it is better to have freckles on one's face than spots on one's reputation. Mr. Arthur Nelstone, who won a reputation on the variety stage a few years since as a soft-shoed policeman, has come to the Tivoli from Drury-lane Theatre in his celebrated sentry song and dance with which he won such a complete success in the recently withdrawn pantomime of Cinderella. Mr. Nelstone's dance is of its kind unique, and recalls the days of Fred Vokes. It is received with tremendous applause. Mr. J. P. Ling's turn is away from the ordinary groove of the comedian. He satirises with considerable ability the "turns" at an amateur entertainment in the country, and is decidedly funny in his sketch of a slightly inebriated reciter, who mixes up Longfellow's "Wreck of the Hesperus" with the same poet's "Village Blacksmith." Mr. Harry Lauder is making a greater hit than ever in his now celebrated song, "Fou the noo," and the laughter of the audience must be grateful music in the eminent Scotch comedian's ears. It has taken some years to acclimatise at the London variety theatres the pawky humour of our canny brethren north of the Tweed; but Lauder has at last accomplished it, and Scotch comedians threaten to become as numerous as Irish. Mr. Ernest Shand is quite English, of course, and proclaims the fact in his clever patter to the "bachelors" among his delighted hearers. He also triumphs in his song "What curious weather we're having." Mr. Harry Rogerson engrafts considerable humour on his song as a sleepy acrobat, and also displays the comedy gift in a slight sketch which precedes his remarkably quaint tumbling display.

That well-cultured and well-endowed vocalist, Miss Florence Esdaile, who looks particularly charming in a costume that suggests sunny Spain, is heard to advantage in a medley which includes an excerpt from Gounod's Faust, and several snatches of bright numbers from famous comic operas. The popular lady meets with well-deserved success. Miss Annie Purcell, another big favourite at the Tivoli, has a capital number in "The swallow and the airship," and scores unmistakably by her comedy in the description of the courtship of an admirer, who secures a high musical reputation by his playing of the pianola.

Nothing in the programme is more diverting than the entertainment of the Follies, who repeat their success in their burlesque of a typical pantomime. It is entitled Bill Bailey. The lyrics are by Arthur Wimperis and Arthur Davenport, and the music has been composed and selected by Mr. H. G. Pelissier, the chief of the combination. The production is a blend of the story of Cinderella and Dick Whittington, and it is exceedingly funny from start to finish. Miss Gwennie Mars, Miss Marjorie Napier, Miss Ethel Allandale, Mr. Dan Everard, and Mr. Lewis Sydney all support Mr. Pelissier very ably, and the harmless but trenchant skit has a laugh in every line.

The Mumming Birds, presented by Mr. Fred Karno's company, provides a most hilarious wind-up to a programme that is mostly cast in the lighter vein. The clever people in this amusing parody of a variety entertainment are not mentioned by name on the bill, and therefore we can only speak of them collectively. They contribute to some admirable fooling, and create roars of laughter. Mr. Harry Leybourne gives clever imitations of a village choral society in "Hail, smiling morn," and of an old country couple singing as a duet "The Anchor's Weighed." He is also responsible for a startling quick change from gentlemen's evening dress to the giddy skirts of a lady ballad singer, afflicted with a desire to sing "Whisper and I shall hear." Miss Carlotta Levey is heard to advantage in her tuneful chorus song, "Put a little bit by for a rainy day"; and others announced on the bill are Dandy George and his dog Rosie, and Miss Ella Retford.

THE BEDFORD.

It is part of Mr. B. P. Lucas's policy at the Bedford to inaugurate competitions at that popular Camden Town establishment, and it is found that these events never fail to create a lively local interest. This week the inhabitants of the North-Western suburb have been invited to enter a contest for ballad-singers, and at the first house on Tuesday Mr. A. F. Lovesy, the manager, announced the names of no less than four competitors for the first, second, and third prizes offered by Mr. Lucas. The first young person who tried her luck behind the footlights chose Asher's well-known ballad, "Alice, where art thou?" and though Nature had done something for her in the way of vocal endowment, she used her gifts so villainously that not a word of the song could be heard, and the rendering was marked by a gentle melancholy which ever seems to afflict the cockney amateur vocalist. The young gentleman to whom a place in the final competition on the evening of Friday (in the second house) was given by the judges, chose Loder's well-known song "The Diver," but could not apparently get his voice out of his throat. His low notes, however, saved him. He was the best of a very indifferent lot, and, judging by the display given, the cult of music among the masses in the North-West does not reach a very high plane.

The sketch of the current programme is presented by the Collinson combination, and bears the title of The Gambler's Daughter. The heroine, Madeline Gregory, during her father's long absences from his country cottage, has managed to fall in love with Reginald Langley, who announces at the opening of the playlet that he has been lucky enough to inherit a legacy of £40,000. Madeline is much puzzled at the reason why her pater is so much away from home, but the secret is revealed by that worthy in a portentous aside. He is the chief of a gang of swindlers, who carry on their operations in a gambling-den in London. His chief confederate is an ex-officer in the Guards, who had been cashiered for card-sharping ten years before the action commences. He it is who, getting hold of Reginald Langley, promises to let him see life in London, and takes him to the gambling hell owned by his chief—who is called the Captain. Reginald plays at cards, and loses £10,000 in a very few seconds. Warned by a former victim—now a waiter—that he is being swindled, he would get away from the den. Accidentally he drops a letter of introduction written by Madeline to her father. This is picked up and read by the Captain, who discovers that he is chief conspirator in the ruin of his daughter's fiancé. There is time to retrieve disaster, and, telling Reginald to stake on black, the "Captain" is relieved when he finds that the young fool wins the £10,000 back again. The ex-Guardsman, however, gets nasty, and there is a "scrap" with the "raw-uns" between him and the Captain. Madeline then comes on the scene, and is in time to witness a duel with swords between her father (the "Captain") and his chief confederate. The latter, fatally wounded, draws a revolver and shoots the Captain. We may suppose that Madeline and Reginald live happily ever afterwards. Mr. Collinson is responsible for a powerful performance of "the Captain"; but the actor who plays the ex-Guardsman should be careful not to say roilent, and he should know that an officer in one of His Majesty's regiments of Household Cavalry would never say "Between you and I."

The variety company has an amusing couple of entertainers in Ray and Calden, the gentleman being a smart acrobatic dancer. The lady also shows the way in a cake-walk, the turn being brightened by some amusing patter. Larry Lewis evokes appreciation for his skit on the descriptive song, which is written with some cleverness; George Rapley has an amusing style in his impersonation of an ancient dame, who has been christened by her sterner half "a pansy blossom"; and Miss Daisy De Roy's dainty style and fascinating ways easily ingratiate her into the favour of the audience. Valvero, the mechanical painter, draws a naval battle on a specially-prepared board, and then illustrates a sea-fight with a number of firework effects. The enthusiasm exhibited by the audience at the running up of the Japanese flag—the nationality of the conquering vessel—is tremendous. Thiel's Pom-Poms contribute a bright and versatile music and dancing turn, which deservedly scores a success; Jansen and Lion are amusing as speciality artists; and the Imperial Bioscope is responsible for a series of comic films illustrating the story of a lost legacy. Mr. George Hatley is the new orchestral chief here.

HOLLOWAY EMPIRE.

At the Holloway Empire this week the curtain rises upon a scene in which the familiar framework to a Punch and Judy show is a conspicuous object, and one naturally jumps to the conclusion that a performance by these old favourites of the public is about to take place; but doubts arise when it is observed that the gentleman with the squeak is absent, and there is no sign of dog Toby. As a matter of fact, the venerable Punch and the maltreated Judy never make their appearance at all; and the entertainment is given by a company (Messrs. Denton and Rowland's) of juvenile performers, who are known as the Punch and Judy Girls, the showman, who is accompanied by Mrs. Showman, acting as director of the revels. Miss Marjorie Lawrence, a very clever little girl, delights the audience as a vocalist and dancer. Indeed, her dancing for one so young is remarkable; but there are several other little girls in the company who also distinguish themselves in a similar line, one of them appearing in a neat military uniform. The rest of the company join in the choruses and dances, and this charming song scena is greeted with loud applause. On Monday evening each of the principal performers, at the conclusion of her turn, was the recipient of a box of sweets, these presents being thrown upon the stage by some kind friends in front.

"The Little Charwoman," described as a petite musical comedy melange, played by the Holles and Goldman Trio, has done duty at the halls for some considerable time now; but no slackness is discernible in the performance. On the other hand, it is acted with more spirit than ever. The charwoman, who proves by giving a rehearsal that she is capable of taking the place of the leading lady, who has sent a message that she will be unable to appear at the evening performance, is indeed a rara avis; and the delight of the manager at the discovery is naturally of a rather extravagant character. And one can scarcely recognise the humble charwoman when she re-enters attired in the dress of the absent leading lady. She sings her songs in racy style, and appears in various characters, including that of a boy of the "poor Jo" type. "How to Treat a Burglar" is the title of a very amusing duologue, played by the couple known as the Maples. The husband has returned home at five o'clock in the morning considerably the worse for drink, and his recently-wedded wife, at the first opportunity, proceeds to give him a lesson which is likely to prove a salutary one. She points out very forcibly that in his inexcusable absence the house might be entered by burglars, and she forthwith gives a practical illustration of how she would deal with a Bill Sikes by catching hold of the unfortunate little man and throwing him to the ground, where he lies helpless and gasping for breath. But the lesson is not yet over. A formidable-looking bludgeon is called into requisition, and eventually the peccant husband, fearing further punishment, makes a solemn promise not to imbibe too freely again. The duologue concludes with a smart acrobatic display. The lady shows much vivacity and go in her embodiment of the wife who relies upon physical force rather than persuasion as an effective drink-cure. Mr. Maple presents an exceedingly comical figure as the rollicking husband who is only just recovering from the effects of a prolonged orgy.

Boswell's Stage Circus is an interesting item in the programme, introducing as it does a number of well-trained dogs, horses, and mules. The ancient game of see-saw is played by some of these educated animals, and they also accomplish other wonderful feats under the direction of the lady and gentleman who act as their tutors. Dogs and ponies afford evidence of how they have overcome the difficulties of the revolving table; whereas the lads who make the attempt are ignominiously flung off on to the stage, amidst the laughter of the audience.

The Canary Company appear with success in a comic pantomime, the scene of which is a kitchen, the performers being dressed as cooks. They are clever jugglers, and make ingenious and novel use of various articles used in the culinary art. Miss Bessie Featherstone, a comedienne of handsome presence, has a song in which fun is made of the style of the authors of penny novelette fiction, and she also sings a ditty called "The Latest London Betting," one verse of which has reference to the approaching wedding of Princess Ena. Sloan supplies an excellent mixture of comic business and jugglery; Mr. Harry Bedford as "the second-hand aristocrat" quite upholds his reputation as a droll comedian; the Six Lancashire Lasses distinguish themselves as clog-dancers; and the Morton Trio win applause as comedians and vocalists. Those who arrive in good time have the pleasure of listening to the "Church Parade" march from The Catch of the Season, excellently played by the orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Henry W. May.

CAMBERWELL PALACE.

The centre of amusement at Camberwell is attracting crowded audiences, who find ample provision for their delight in the programme placed before them by Mr. Jesse Sparrow, the indefatigable manager whose taste in the choice of an artist never errs. A feature of the current programme is the sketch Drummed Out, of which an elaborate revival is given. Mr. A. C. Lilly repeats his well-marked impersonation of the recreant officer who has to undergo the degradation suggested by the title, and is well supported by his admirably-selected company. A military drum and fife band add picturesqueness to the production, and gain hearty cheers for their spirited playing.

An early appearance is made by Walker and May, the coon comedians, whose singing and dancing surpasses that of most of the artists who exploit that form of entertainment. Mr. Walker is a comedian of the drollest resource, and jests in a manner that drives home the point of every joke, with the result that the audience is kept in roars of laughter. His partner is the exact replica of the coloured songstress as she exists in the United States, and she renders her numbers with unfailing vivacity and humour. Their give-and-take conversation is admirably done, and the duet "Back to the woods," in which they join at the end of their highly-successful turn, is artistically sung. Echoes of the land of the Stars and Stripes are also brought by Terry and Lambert, who present a neat sketch of character, in which the sunshine and showers of domestic felicity alternate in quite a seasonable manner. The lady of the pair indulges in some wonderfully expressive facial play, and she and her partner sing tunefully. Their vocal and mimetic abilities are further displayed in a duet between a New York Bowery boy and girl, whose courtship is quaintly depicted.

Blithesome and bonnie as ever, Happy Fanny Fields continues to make comic capital out of the merest trifle, and laughter is general while the captivating Dutch girl occupies the stage. In singing and dancing she is equally irresistible, her skill and precision in the latter department being agreeably marked, and in the beating with her feet of a drum tattoo her practised art is again revealed. Mr. Billy Williams, the Australian comedian, is also an optimist whose example is infectious. He sings by desire his own parody on "All coons look alike to me," and his burlesque of "I wouldn't leave my little wooden hut for you" is a further means of merriment.

The beauteous Lily Burnand, charmingly arrayed, receives a cordial welcome when she appears to sing "When she was in the ballet," in the tuneful air of which the fair comedienne's voice is heard with the greatest pleasure. "The Stowaway" affords Miss Burnand the opportunity of touching the hearts of her audience with a little sentiment neatly expressed, and the refrain of the song is taken up with vehemence by the songsters perched up above. Mr. George Bastow represents the comic countryman in youth and age, and both pictures are equally well drawn. As the old man of four-score, whose advice in song to the youngsters is "Wire in, my lads," he arouses mirth, the force of which is increased when he appears as the youthful yokel to give a burlesque version of the old lay "She's young and she's beautiful." Mr. Phil Ray keeps the audience rocking with laughter by the "patter" which he adds to his song "Only Seventeen," and none among his hearers is able to resist the hilarious effect of his utterances. Mr. Harry Taft's whistling is invested with humour as well as skill; there is novelty in the acrobatic feats of the Athos Troupe; Mr. Archie Glen has abilities above the average as a raconteur; and other items of the liberal programme consist of Miss Lilian Lea (soprano), Miss Jenny Belmore (comedienne), the Sisters Hall (duettists and dancers), the comedy sketch The Mummy and the Undergrad, and animated pictures on Vernon's bioscope. For Thursday an addition to the programme in the person of Mr. Albert Mackelvin, Scotch humorist, was announced.

RICHMOND THEATRE.

Love and lucre form the stakes in the unpretentious but none the less clever playlet which is presented here this week by "The Players," and which is winning a favourable verdict. Briefly told, the story runs as follows: Jack Vivian is hopelessly in love with Ella Warrener, and opens the scene by proposing to her with the usual masculine coyness. Ella accepts the protestations and her preux chevalier, but has some misgivings as to the reception of the news of the engagement on the part of her mother, whom she knows to be a gambler. A moment later the mother and Prince Sergius—her evil genius—enter. They have both been tempting the dice, with the result that the Prince—who bears quite a shocking reputation—has plundered Mrs. Warrener of all she possesses, including the gems she is wearing. But he would win still another stake. He is in love with Ella, and infamously suggests that there should be one final throw of the dice for his chance of winning her. There is a scene; but in the end Mrs. Warrener accedes. The dice rattle ominously; she throws a double-five; Prince Sergius is more fortunate, and scores with a double-six. It is at this point that Ella enters to announce her engagement to Jack Vivian; but the Prince claims his prize. It is then that Mrs. Warrener confesses, to her own shame, that the riches which her daughter should inherit are legally the property of Jack Vivian, and that Ella is penniless. The Prince is somewhat upset at this turn in the tide; and in the end, after receiving a castigation at the hands of Jack Vivian, he beats a retreat, leaving the field clear for his rival.

With a little judicious pruning and a quickening touch here and there Her Last Chance should become quite popular. The piece is admirably interpreted. Premier honours go to Miss Violet Ellicott, who as the distraught mother, Mrs. Warrener, succeeds to admiration; Mr. Henry Doughty is sufficiently villainous as the Prince; and Mr. Fred Conyers is a fine bluff, breezy lover. Miss Rose Temple makes a charming Ella, playing with much ability.

Of the other good things provided at this pretty theatre on Monday, Bliss and Bliss are divertingly amusing as comedians and dancers; Mr. Joe Gold exhibits his skill as a lightning artist, assisted vocally by Miss Dorothy Sterling, her rendering of "Asthore" being excellent. Miss Ruth Lytton makes a bonnie Highland laddie, and infuses considerable humour into her ditties dealing with the Gaelic race. One of the novelties of the evening is presented by Mr. Kennedy Allen, who opens his scene by singing, to orchestral accompaniment, excerpts from the "Wanted columns" of The Era. Mr. Allen evidences his versatility as a comedian, a tragedian, comic old man, and a low comedy man. In each of these characters he does remarkably well, and is in every respect admirable. Miss Lilian Lee has a soprano voice of considerable flexibility, and she has quickly won her way to popularity. Her operatic selection is one of the musical treats of the entertainment, and in a quaint song-scena, entitled My Bungalow in Borneo, she proves her ability as an artist of a high order.

Baldwin's Bank Clerks, a wonderful knock-about pantomimic show, create the greatest hilarity, but the show would improve with compression. Vernon's bioscope gives one a peep at the Nice junkettings, and Mr. Norfolk Megone's orchestra contributes a capital selection from Carmen. Mr. Kay Draco is to be complimented on the excellence of all the arrangements, and his courtesy is highly appreciated.

WALTHAMSTOW PALACE.

Few programmes presented recently by Mr. Arthur J. Barclay at the handsome house under his direction have been more completely filled with attractive features than that of the current week, and the natural result is the crowded state of the Palace at every performance, and the pervading spirit of enthusiasm that prevails. Where every item of a programme is excellent it may seem invidious to praise one more than the other; but there is no getting away from the fact that the engagement of Miss Victoria Monks has proved an unmistakable success. Miss Monks came, sang, and conquered her new audience. An artist to her finger-tips, the charming American comedienne carries all before her. Looking supremely dainty, she delivers her song having for its refrain "Kind regards to Leicester Square" with a delicacy of style that at once stamps her as an artist; while her imitation of an American lady singing a coon song is as pretty as it well could be. Miss Victoria Monks adds, this week, another public to the long list of her devoted admirers. Miss Florence Schuberth, handsome in appearance, irreproachably costumed, and in good voice, gives her song with immense success. Mr. George D'Albert is a comedian with a capital voice, and his chief contribution to the programme, in which he amusingly contrasts the "difference 'twixt the ideal and the real," calls forth the heartiest plaudits. A merry little sketch, entitled The Member for Muddlesex, is played with all the requisite touch-and-go manner by Mr. William Lee and Miss Helen Bentley. The latter, as the exceptionally loquacious lady who asserts that she never talks, is particularly amusing, while Mr. Lee upholds the best traditions of farce. Miss Jessie Preston has already established herself as a popular favourite here, and has had a very cordial reception this week. Her singing of "Remember me to all the folks at home" is full of good points, while her appearance in a burlesque edition of Highland costume, singing "I'm his Daisy"—a sort of reply to the song of a well-known Scotch comedian—with some wildly grotesque step-dancing, is the signal for loud and prolonged applause. Mr. Charles Faning rattles away concerning Mr. Plowden, the magistrate, with a volubility that makes his audience shout with laughter. Every point in his amusing patter is taken up at once and applauded to the echo. Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope shows, as usual, some very excellent films.

The longest and, in some respects, the most important feature of the programme is the new and original musical pantomime, Dwarfland, written by Mr. James Hewson, and performed by the Six Brothers Luck. The piece, which is in three scenes—or acts—recalls visions of Christmas-time, music, dancing, brilliant dresses, and lovely scenery combining to form a pretty picture, enlivened with much excellent fooling. There is a sort of connected plot concerned with the doings of a "rightful heir" to a throne and the machinations of a yellow dwarf. The whole is redolent of those days when an Easter féerie was an acknowledged dish in the ménu of the theatrical year. The pretty dances have been arranged, and the chorus drilled by Mr. Joseph Pomè, the scenery painted by Messrs. McLellan and Turner, the costumes are creations of Alias, and the wigs are by Mr. C. Haley. Dwarfland is received with unbounded satisfaction. The overture for the week is from the pen of Mr. H. Petersen, and is entitled "Ate." The heavy stage-management is admirably carried out by Mr. John Grant.

THE EUSTON.

The visit of Mr. Harry Lauder to this well-patronised hall has proved quite as successful as one, without laying claim to the gift of prophecy, might with confidence have foretold. His humour is happily combined with the originality and finish of the true artist who takes a pride in his work, and does not risk his well-earned popularity by even a suspicion of carelessness or indifference. Mr. Lauder also fully appreciates the value of contrast, as his selection of songs testifies. Attired in the garb of his native land, he first sings the pretty ditty "Mary, my Scotch blue-bell," the chorus of which is so catchy that it is generally sung by the audience while the comedian is changing for the next song. The curiously crooked walking stick which Mr. Lauder carries as he sings in praise of his Scotch blue-bell cannot possibly escape observation and amused wonder. Remarkably lifelike and intensely amusing is the Scotch comedian's sketch of an individual who has been having an evening out with a friend he had not met for three years. The convivial spirit which they have jointly cultivated has caused them to imbibe a good many "wee sma' drops," and the result is that the festive gentleman is, as he admits, quite "fou." He sways unsteadily as he rattles on with the garrulousness of the drunken man. Taking from an inner coat pocket a small flask, his face assumes a bibulous smile of calm content as he congratulates himself on the fact that there is a drop left for the morning. In his left hand he holds a miserable looking fowl, which he explains is a present for his wife. Mr. Lauder has never presented a more comical or effective character-sketch; and all the details of the picture have been so cleverly worked up as to make the whole quite a perfect study of inebriety.

On Tuesday evening, at the conclusion of his turn, Mr. Lauder introduced to the audience the Scotch lad who recently walked from Scotland to London with vague expectations of finding the streets of the great city paved with gold. In order to earn a living he gave performances in the streets, and was taken into custody by the police. He was brought up before a magistrate and, having given proof of his ability as a musician, was set free. The notice of Mr. Lauder was called to the case, and it was he who secured for the lad an engagement at one of the music halls. On Tuesday evening the youth, who speaks with a broad Scotch accent, gave a musical performance, which included an imitation of Mr. Lauder was heard through a gramophone, and an express train leaving Euston Station. The newcomer was well received, and Mr. Lauder watched the lad's performance from the wings.

Miss Alice York and Mr. Royston Keith in the duologue A Yacht For Sale, continue to excite the merriment of the audience by a mutual misunderstanding, which is ingeniously maintained until it suits the author of the trifle to clear up matters. The gentleman is referring all the time to a yacht which he has for sale, while the lady is under the impression that the subject under discussion is a maid servant for whom she has advertised. Merriment again reigns during the time that the Bros. Griffiths occupy the stage. These well-known comedians are still giving their genuinely comical burlesque of a wrestling match, the younger of the two presenting a grotesque appearance as an athlete with muscles of abnormal development. To many this performance affords more enjoyment than the real thing.

The Mayvilles, with their living marionette show, retain their popularity as entertainers, successfully impersonating a policeman and a cook, a couple of members of the Salvation Army, and a Scotch lad and lass. Little Cliff, the boy comedian, makes a very smart drummer, and his clever dancing is loudly applauded. Miss Edie King sings a ditty in the character of Little Red Riding Hood and dances gracefully. Herr Fritz, conjurer, accomplishes all his tricks neatly, concluding with a well-contrived cabinet illusion. The singing of Miss Florence Esdaile is greeted with applause, Mr. Frank Sylvo scores as a comedy juggler, and Miss Madeline Rees, comedienne, also successfully contributes. With Mr. Fred McEvoy as manager and Mr. Chas. E. Wellman as acting-manager, the front of the house is well looked after.

GRAND, CLAPHAM.

The constant cry at the elegant hall at Clapham Junction this week has been "Standing-room only!" but seekers after amusement who have gained admittance have been well rewarded in the feast of variety laid before them by Mr. H. Ketteman, whose judicious management and unfailing courtesy have helped greatly to place the hall among the most prosperous of Mr. Walter Gibbons' enterprises. The biggest line in the bill this week is taken by The Belle of India, which, although described as an Indian sketch, is very much akin to the musical comedy which has its birthplace in the Strand, with the exception that the company playing the sketch is headed by a Hindoo rajah, and the Oriental nature of the production is further sustained by the inclusion in the cast of Rhanee Singharee, "the beautiful Indian Nautch Queen," evidently the heroine of the piece. She arouses the admiration of the Prince of Kashmir, in whose dominions the action passes, and he eventually chooses her to share his throne. Cupid is also busy with a young captain in the English garrison, who falls in love with the daughter of an American millionaire, travelling in India in the candy interest. The sketch is everything by turns and nothing long, and by means of songs, dances, concerted pieces, and funny situations wins the plaudits of the audience. Rajah Rham Singh makes a picturesque figure as the Hindoo prince, who sings the praises of the nautch girl, and afterwards acknowledges the sovereignty of the British Emperor in a fine rousing song, "When the King commands," sung by the English officer, a part played in spirited fashion by Mr. Charles Hampden. An excellent light comedian is found in Mr. Cecil Rutland, who represents the millionaire, and engages in a mock wrestling combat with a native with a pronounced cockney accent, played with great humour by Mr. Harry Chase, who secures many laughs. Rhanee Singharee renders her numbers well and dances with sinuous grace as the "belle of India," and Miss Adelina Balfe, who sings prettily and acts with unfailing vivacity as the belle from New York, can also trip a dainty measure. The scenery is of a gorgeous description, and a meritorious feature of the production is the excellent work of the chorus.

An eccentric figure is cut by Mr. George Antill, who appears as a sailor with equally peculiar methods of vocalisation. His song "Over the sea" has irresistible attractions for the audience, who let themselves go with wonderful unanimity in the refrain. Still greater effect is attained by his elongated appearance in which he sings "You are a-carrying on," the dance that follows including some extraordinary leg manipulation that caused roars of laughter. Mr. Russell Wallett commands admiration by his appearance as "the Lady in Black," who performs at the piano, but his sex is soon betrayed by the masculine voice in which he delivers some feminine confidences. He has a clever "sneezing song," and the lay of the "Lady in Black" is supplemented by a dance.

A humorous absurdity entitled Fun on a Broom Handle enables Morris and Morris to go through some quaint acrobatic manœuvres both on the stage and on the trapeze; and Les Sprays well distinguish themselves as Continental dancers. Excellent views of interesting events are pictured by Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope. "A Tragedy at Sea" and a representation of the carnival at Nice providing both excitement and humour. Miss Ella Retford sings "The sun am shining" very tunefully, and dances with lightness, ease, and precision; Silvo, who plays expertly on the concertina and upon a number of zinc cylinders, also extracts the sweetest melody from the musical glasses, winning a hearty recall; and the programme is contributed to by Miss Lilian Doreen, speciality vocalist. Mr. David Dealer has succeeded to the post of musical director at the Grand, and keeps his forces well in hand.

BILLIE BARLOW.

AT GRIMSBY.

A HOST IN HERSELF.

There ought to be few empty seats at the Palace this week, for the management are giving the public another first-class bill. Billie Barlow is a host in herself. Vivacious and dainty, stylish yet graceful, with comedy that at once secures the ear and mind, this popular comedienne entertains the house as she only knows how. What Billie Barlow does not know about comedy business is not worth knowing. She has visited Grimsby in the past; we are false prophets if she does not return yet again. To hear Billie Barlow once is to want to hear her again. There is comedy in her every word and act, and her winsomeness captivates the whole house, especially in the songs "It goes" and "Fidgeting."—Grimsby News, April 3, 1906.

DEATH OF ZÆO.

We regret to announce the death of Zæo (Mrs. Adelaide Wieland), who passed away at 7.20 on Monday morning with painful suddenness at her residence in St. Martin's-street, Leicester-square, in the presence of her husband, Mr. H. W. Wieland, the well-known musical and dramatic agent, and her children, with the exception of her eldest daughter, Miss Clara Wieland, who is at present fulfilling engagements in America, and who received the sad news by cable at Newark, N.J. Just before 12 o'clock on the previous night the deceased lady, who was an excellent linguist, was coaching her son—a pupil of the City of London School—in his French, and though she was slightly ailing no anxiety whatever regarding her health was felt by her family.

One of the greatest gymnasts of the nineteenth century, Zæo made her first appearance in public at the Alexandra Palace in October, 1878, and went in 1880 to the Westminster Aquarium, then the home of sensational gymnastic performances. Nothing more startling than Zæo's turn had been seen. She was a most accomplished wire walker, and her rope descent was instinct with classical grace; but it was when she was hurled into the air from a catapult that she thrilled her audience. Her salary was demurred to by Captain Molesworth, the then manager, and sharing terms were suggested; but at the end of the first week the salary, which was the largest ever drawn by any artist at the now defunct temple of amusement in Tothill-street, was paid.

When she had completed her first engagement at the Aquarium, Zæo departed for the Continent, ostensibly for a fortnight's engagement, and stayed away from England for ten years. She appeared at the Cirque d'Eté and Cirque d'Hiver, Paris, at Bordeaux, at the Teatro Zarzaella, Madrid (four months), at Lisbon, and during her triumphant career also visited the chief cities of Germany, France, Switzerland, Italy, Austria, and went as far as Cairo, where she performed with immense success at a hippodrome, specially erected by Mr. Wieland, in the Esbikiah Gardens.

She did not enjoy complete immunity from accident. In Trieste an enthusiastic gallery boy dislodged a piece of decorative iron, which Zæo, standing on her trapeze, endeavoured to divert from the audience. It struck her from her perilous position, inflicting a terrible wound, and caused her to lie prostrate during three months. Among many kind friends at this juncture were the late Sir Richard Burton, author of a free translation of "The Arabian Nights," and Lady Burton.

It was in 1890 that Zæo returned to the Aquarium. The London County Council had not been long in existence, and the posters on the then hoardings announcing the gymnast's sensational performance attracted the attention of some zealots on the newly-formed body, and came in for much criticism. Thus a splendid advertisement was given to the star. Where there had been one Zæo poster there were soon half a dozen, and every night the Aquarium was crowded when Zæo went through her daring performance.

Just when the poster was ceasing to be talked about, another fillip was given to the performance by a statement publicly made to the effect that Zæo was suffering from injuries to her back caused by her dive into the net. This was strenuously denied by the Aquarium management and by the lady herself, who afterwards appeared with enormous success at the Oxford, under Mr. C. R. Brighten's management.

After many years' success in her aerial performances she appeared at the Palace Theatre, the Metropolitan, the Aquarium, and other establishments, in her celebrated fire dance, which was also a great success in the United States.

Her gifts to local charities were on a queenly scale. For instance, she received a fee of £200 for a single performance in Valencia, and promptly handed half of it to the Hospital for Incurables in that town. She received the special commendation of the Queen of Spain for her skill and equally for her benevolence. In Lisbon, enjoying the patronage of the King and Queen of Portugal, she gained the tremendous profit of £4,000 during a season of eight weeks.

The funeral took place on Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Nunhead Cemetery, the deceased lady being interred in her husband's private grave. In the cortége were three mourning coaches. In the first were seated Mr. H. W. Wieland, three children (Harry, Lizzie, and Olga), a grandchild (Clara), and Mr. J. Munro. The second carriage was occupied by the two sisters of the deceased, and in the third were Mr. Antonio Pierri and some intimate personal friends. Among those who followed in private broughams were Mr. and Mrs. Percy Harvey, Mr. E. J. Leamy, Messrs. Ted and Taff Volta (retired members of the celebrated Hanlon-Voltas), and Mr. and Mrs. Basil Dawson. There were many beautiful wreaths and floral tributes sent by the following:—Mr. H. W. Wieland (husband), Clara (daughter), Harry (son), Lizzie (daughter), Olga (daughter), Clara (granddaughter), Mr. and Mrs. Curtis (sister), Mr. and Mrs. Barchard (sister), the Alhambra company, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wilson of the Alhambra, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Urban (Urbanora), Mr. Sydney M. Hyman, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Munro, Mr. and Mrs. James Holden, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Holden, Messrs. Fortune and Granville, Theatre, Variety, and Concert Agents' Association, Messrs. Anger and Bauer, Mr. Arthur Carlton, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Day (Miss Lottie Lennox), Mr. McWilliam, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Howard (Howard and Harris), Messrs. Taff and Ted Volta, Mr. and Mrs. de Gracia, Mr. Antonio Pierri, Mr. Ahmed Madrali, the Bros. Egbert, Mr. and Mrs. Maple (The Maples), Mr. and Mrs. James Finney, Mr. E. J. Leamy, Mr. Sam Elton, Miss Rosina Casselli and Mr. Vanola, Mr. and Mrs. A. Schwartz, Mrs. Brustmeyer, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Cochran, Mr. A. D. Robbins, and Mr. and Mrs. Percival Hyatt.

The announcement that the Baronne de Rahden is to sing for the first time in public at a concert under the patronage of Princess Louise of Belgium takes the memory back to a remarkable and pathetic history. Ten years ago Mme. de Rahden was a well-known rider in the circuses of Paris The French have a particular admiration for feats by horsewomen, and a proof of it is the prosperity of the amateur circus in Paris, which occasionally performs for charity. The feats of Mme. de Rahden were celebrated by the newspapers, and no circus was complete without her.

At the height of her fame she married the Baron de Rahden. While she and her husband were staying at Clermont-Farrand, where she was performing, the Baron became jealous of an officer, and killed him. The jury, believing that the Baron had been provoked, acquitted him. The Baronne de Rahden herself was almost shattered by the shock, and a good deal later she woke up one morning to find that she was blind. Careless of what she did, she decided to appear that night as usual at the circus where she was engaged. What she almost expected happened. She was thrown against a wall, and for days lay half dead. She never rode again, but finding that she had a good voice, she has learnt to sing.

The Five Dandies, who are assigned important parts in Mr. Oswald Stoll's forthcoming revue at the Coliseum, were founded by Mr. H. J. Corner two years ago for a series of concerts at Prince's Hall, Piccadilly. Shortly after, they received a Royal command to appear before their Majesties the King and Queen, at Sandringham, on the occasion of the Queen's birthday. So pleased were their Majesties with the performance of the Dandies that they shook hands with them individually, and made some very complimentary remarks. In the autumn the Dandies will sail away to America for a long tour.

MR. FRANK PARKER.

An Appreciation.

By Henry W. Garrick.

In my time I have, as Shakespeare says, "filled many parts," but I am open to say that whatever parts they may have been I have accomplished them "more by good luck than good management." A proof of this was demonstrated to me on a recent Sunday morning when taking an airing I found myself in the vicinity of Thames Ditton, and remembered that Frank Parker lived there. I called, and by great good luck found him in. Whenever I have met the genial and volatile Frank before on a Sunday it has been at the London Hippodrome rehearsing in the "wee small hours," with the inevitable cigar, half eaten, plugged into his mouth, and his three-hour-old meal stone cold, placed upon the ring fence awaiting his pleasure—a pleasure which I have never had the satisfaction of seeing realised. Hour after hour, while all London sleeps, I have seen him directing a million and one salient points, nay, even solving problems of mechanical importance; his deductions from blue drawings, specifications, mathematical problems, and calculations, worked out on a rough sheet of paper to the fraction of a degree; draughtsmen round him arguing theoretical possibilities, defeated by practical possibilities evolved in the mind of one who knows, and who has the courage of his opinions and the strength of mind to carry them out. My own impression of the man has always been clearly from a journalistic point of view; that is to say, I have always taken him at my own estimate. I will not say that I have always found him immaculate—that would be absurd—but I have always found him to be a producer, a stage-manager, an expert equestrian, an electrician of the first water, an organiser in every possible department, and, what is more, in a vast collective establishment a disciplinarian, who, despite the fact that he is not ten feet high and five feet broad, can control a staff of over 400 individuals with the same ease that can be applied to looking at the hall clock for the time when you leave home in the morning.

Many people beside myself have often puzzled themselves about Mr. Frank Parker's adaptability to any and all circumstances. How came it that he is such a splendid "Jack of all trades"? He is an expert photographer, and can take photographs in natural surroundings equally well with the successors of Vernon Heath, and yet his judgment of colour under artificial surroundings is so perfectly balanced that the eye is pleased, and the "one touch of nature" is presented as real. Perhaps some day he may instruct us how to solve the problem of producing a black rose; let us hope he will; but up to the moment I do know that he is composed of the concentrated essence of resource, knowledge, and energy.

The privilege I gained from my promiscuous visit turns out to be an important one, from the reason that Frank Parker in town is as inaccessible as the Governor of the Bank of England, not from the fact that he does not want to see everybody who calls to see him and engage his services, but that he finds it impossible to cram forty-eight hours into twelve. However, I found him, and I determined to extract from him something about his career, and how he came to be the "greatest producer"—as a leading daily newspaper has it.

To look at Frank Parker in his miniature drawing-room at Sunnyside, surrounded by tokens of past accomplishments, souvenirs of old-time theatrical celebrities, the majority of whom are now "resting" but still vivid in the minds of playgoers, is a revelation. Who would think that this fresh-coloured little gentleman of forty-three years could have completed his thirty-second year of extremely active association with stage production?

I glance around, and view autographs, and recall the days of my youth when as a lad I saw the individuals perform. I look again at Mr. Parker, and doubt if it can really be true that the testimonial on the wall from Chatterton, the numerous presents from the late Sir Augustus Harris, his brother Charles Harris, Mr. George Edwardes—in the old Gaiety days of Fred Leslie and E. J. Lonnen—were presented to him or his namesake. But I find I am mistaken, for Frank Parker started life very young indeed. In fact, he can scarcely remember when he first joined Chatterton at the Adelphi Suffice to say he has, from the time he was a gas-boy thirty-two years ago, climbed the hill in sunshine and storm, and reached the pinnacle of success as London's premier stage-director and producer.

In the theatrical profession as a rule modesty, as far as one's own histrionic abilities are concerned, is a quantity very difficult to obtain, but not more so than in the case of our subject. True, I managed to get some sort of a tangible story of his doings, but it was at the rate of an inch an hour, for he would insist upon me inspecting his beautiful garden and homestead, his ponies, his motor-car, and his ideal farmyard, with its bantams and ducks, black lambs and "neddies"; the vineries, asparagus beds, and aviaries. No talk of self could I get out of him in his "den," so I had to glean all I could while strolling round the charming demesne of Sunnyside.

"Yes," he said, "I have worked with Chatterton, Sir Augustus Harris, Mr. George Edwardes, Mr. William Greet, Mr. Milton Bode, Mr. C. Rider Noble, and Mr. Charles Harris. I cannot think of all the good men and true I have been associated with or under whose banner I have served. Perhaps you do not know it, but my father, Geo. Parker, was a music-hall proprietor in London, so you see although I do not quite remember the regime under which my father worked, I was born with an instinct to follow in his footsteps. But I must tell you one thing, Mrs. Parker (my wife) has been a wonderful help to me. It was a very happy day for us when we met at Drury-lane Theatre. She was a splendid dancer, and now, by the way, she trains troupes and troupes of ladies for my productions, and that really explains how I am able to do two things at once—that is to say, be responsible for two productions 300 miles apart."

"Tell me, Mr. Parker, how many plays you have brought to light in your time?" "Well," he said shrugging his shoulders, "I'd rather not acknowledge; let us come and see 'Tuppence'—a dear old favourite of mine. Now, there are only two things in this world that I would not part with. One is 'Tuppence' and the other is 'Haidee.'" "Oh, yes; but who is the former?" "Why, my favourite pony; 'Haidee' is my missus!" "And very nice, too," said I. "But what about the productions?" I inquired. "My dear old friend, leave business alone; I am at home now." Nearly despairing, I was half inclined to get a trifle hasty. However, I managed, by a frantic effort, to squeeze the following facts from him.

"Theatre Royal, Drury-lane, the old Gaiety Theatre, and the old Adelphi I was at for many years. Morocco Bound I produced at the Shaftesbury, where it had a very long run. I re-staged it at the Trafalgar Theatre, where also I put on Go-Bang. Then came The Dandy Fifth, which has not stopped marching yet; but that was in the first instance at the Duke of York's. The Avenue came afterwards with Dandy Dick Whittington and Pot Pourri—a very big revue that was at the time. The Prince of Wales's, On the March, with Mr. Tom E. Murray, the quaint comedian; Terry's Theatre, The French Maid; Vaudeville, Her Royal Highness and Piccadilly, in which Dan Leno appeared; Lyceum, "Lydia Thomson Benefit"; Empire Theatre, with Sir Augustus Harris. Other productions include Vienna, Berlin, Brussels, three pantomimes at Brixton, one at Brighton, two at Plymouth, one at Hull, and three at Northampton. Then I was hon. stage-manager at the King's Dinner to the poor—I mean at the entertainments organised by Sir Edward Moss." "Yes!" "Just a few little items in my six and a half years at the London Hippodrome, where I have been stage and equestrian director since its inception. That the public at large have appreciated my efforts with the various successes there, such as Siberia, Cinderella, Tally Ho! Aladdin, The Bandits, Dick Whittington, The Redskins, The Golden Princess, Butterflies in Fairyland, The North Pole, Rob Roy, Among the Stars, and my latest, The Flood, is very gratifying to me indeed. Further, five or six of these pieces I have re-staged in the provinces—at Olympia, Liverpool; Hippodrome, Manchester; Empire, Edinburgh; and Empire, Liverpool."

Having gained this amount of information, I was eager to obtain more, and I tried very hard to induce Mr. Parker to come out of his shell and explain to me how his dual life is so consistent—the one side so incredibly real (to the public), the other side so sincerely ideal in his domestic environment where no possible element of artificiality exists. But it was all to no purpose.

I take my farewell, and journey back to town wondering about this many-sided genius and his next development.

THE PUTNEY HIPPODROME.

LAYING OF FOUNDATION STONE.

Flags flew across Putney's main street on Saturday afternoon last, and their meaning was explained by a huge crowd which had taken possession of one side of Felsham-road. On the other side a mass of huge poles, woodwork, and unfinished masonry was gaily bedecked — it was the beginning of what is to be the Putney Hippodrome. Sir Henry Kimber, Bart., M.P., who was to have performed the ceremony of laying the foundation stone, was prevented by illness at the last moment from attending, and his son, Mr. Henry Dixon Kimber, C.C., appeared in his father's stead.

In a brief speech Mr. Kimber said: "Ladies and Gentlemen,—I have to apologise to you for being here myself and for my father's absence, due to illness. It was only at very short notice that I heard of this function, or I might have made myself better acquainted with the circumstances and objects of the building. I should like to congratulate you upon this fine building you will have in your midst, and I would like to express the hope, in which I am sure my father will share, that it will have a long career of usefulness and uninterrupted success."

Mr. Kimber then declared the foundation stone well and truly laid, amid the cheers of the onlookers.

Mr. Frederic W. Hingston, the architect, in proposing a vote of thanks to Mr. Kimber, mentioned that the new establishment would be conducted on strictly teetotal principles, and that a high-class entertainment would be provided. As there was no other similar place of amusement in Putney, the Hippodrome should be very largely supported by the local public.

Mr. T. H. Kingerlee seconded the vote of thanks, and after Mr. Kimber had suitably acknowledged the compliment, the party went on a short tour of inspection.

The new Hippodrome is situated in Felsham-road just off the High-street, Putney. It has a frontage of 110ft. to Felsham-road, and is surrounded on the other three sides by a footway 20ft. wide, completely isolating it from the neighbouring buildings. The depth is 80ft., and it is about 60ft high. The front is of red brick and stone, and a fine ornamental tower rises to a height of nearly 80ft. at the right-hand corner, near the High-street.

The house will accommodate 1,500 people distributed as follows:—110 seats in the stalls, 460 in the pit, 345 in the circle, 565 in the gallery, and 20 in the four boxes.

The exits are ample and well arranged, being thirteen in all, viz.:—Gallery 3, circle 3, pit 3, stalls 2, and boxes 2, and the house can be emptied in a very few minutes.

The building is constructed on the cantilever principle, with no intermediate columns to obstruct the view. It will be entirely fireproof throughout. On both sides of the fireproof curtain the stairs, floors, tiers, and every possible part will be fireproof, and fire hydrants will be fitted throughout the building.

The stage is 49ft. long and 30ft. wide, and the proscenium opening 31ft. wide and 32ft. high.

The house will be run on strictly temperance principles, and no intoxicants will be allowed.

The entertainment will be of the highest class, and will be on the two-houses-a-night system now so popular.

The architect is Mr. Frederic W. Hingston, of Portland House, Basinghall-street; the builders, Messrs. T. H. Kingerlee and Son, of Oxford. Messrs. Dawnay and Sons are supplying the steelwork, the ventilating and heating are by Messrs. Hendry and Pattisson, and the electric lighting by Messrs. Roger Dawson, Ltd.

An almost unparalleled reception has been accorded "The Players" this week at the Richmond Theatre in their successful sketch, Her Last Chance, by M. A. Curtois and George Unwin. Rounds of applause marked the excellence of the acting of Miss Violet Elliott as Mrs. Warrener, Mr. Henry Doughty as Prince Sergius, Miss Rose Temple as Ella Warrener, and Mr. Fred Conyers as Jack Vivien. The dresses are beautiful in the extreme. "The Players" have secured a funny farcical sketch, written expressly for them by Mr. George Unwin, which will shortly be produced in the West End.

"The Era" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

DEATH OF ENA BERTOLDI.

We regret to have to record the death of Ena Bertoldi, the well-known gymnast, equilibrist, and contortionist. The sad event occurred on Sunday morning, at five o'clock, at the deceased's lady's residence at Balham, the cause of death being heart failure. Bertoldi was trained in the gymnastic profession by her father, Mr. Tom Claxton, the well-known agent, himself a celebrated performer in his day, and made her first appearance at the age of five years at the old Amphitheatre, Portsmouth, then under the management of Mr. D. Barnard. In 1891 Bertoldi introduced her intrepid and graceful performance on an illuminated staircase at the Grand, Newport, whence she went straight to America, in which country she remained some seven years. She played three seasons with the Howard Athenæum Co. of Boston, then under the management of Mr. J. D. Hopkins, and later became associated with Sam De Vere's Vaudeville Company. She was afterwards seen on the Keith and Proctor circuits, and at Koster and Bial's, and visited every important theatre in the States from New York to San Francisco. She was a great favourite, too, on the Continent, being especially so in Vienna and Berlin. She also astonished, by her intrepid performance, the patrons of the Casino and Nouveau Cirque, Paris. One of her most difficult feats was the ascent and descent of a staircase on her hands. She was not content with a downward course step by step, but bounded down with two or three graceful movements, alighting, of course, each time upon her hands. Another striking act was the ascent of a kind of double tower, on the summit of which she performed several astonishing balancing feats. During a professional experience of some twenty years Bertoldi never had an accident, except once, when, in an inverted posture, she dropped off a platform about 4 feet high. This led to no serious consequences. She was half-sister to Vonare, herself a graceful contortionist, and the wife of Dandy George (Spink). She leaves no family.

The deceased lady was interred in Tooting Cemetery on Wednesday. Beautiful wreaths were sent by Dandy George (the husband), Mr. Tom Claxton (father), Mr. and Mrs. E. De Vere, James and Lucy Allison, Mrs. Fred Karno, Miss Daisy Dormer, Dicks's Comedy Five, Fred Howe, and Mr. and Mrs. Silvo. Mrs. Claxton and Tom Claxton, jun., sent a cross, and the Philippi Brothers and Marie Rieff a floral harp. The funeral arrangements were ably carried out by Mr. Theophilus Dunkley.

STRATFORD EMPIRE.

"Anniversary Day" drew tremendous crowds to the Stratford Empire, both "houses" on Tuesday night being packed from floor to ceiling. This is little to be wondered at, for, apart from the desire of local pleasure-seekers to be present on this notable occasion to show their appreciation of possessing this high-class variety theatre in their midst, there was the strong attraction of a largely augmented bill. Among this week's company (most of whom had to curtail their turns), a huge hit was made by Will Evans, who rattled off in his own inimitable style on "Rates and Taxes," which pleased the audience mightily. The Two Allisons proved themselves bright and interesting entertainers, and the Lawn Tennis comedians, Grell and Grey, evoked plenty of applause. Hermann Melot's conjuring was much to the liking of the audience, for, in addition to its mystifying and amusing everybody, there was the chance of being a lucky recipient of one of the numberless button-holes and cigars which the performer extracted from a hat and threw to those in front. Conn and Conrad, in a burlesque burglary act, caused much hilarity; and the Serenaders, as masked entertainers, gave a much-appreciated performance. Rosie Lloyd was an immense favourite when she appeared in the low-comedy ditty, "Never introduce yer bloke to yer lady friend," and Lilian Doreen sang "Annie Laurie" with much expression. Burke, Andrus, and Frisco in Trafalgar Square at 4 a.m. was a highly mirth-provoking turn, and the Hardinis proved themselves violinists of marked ability. Tom Edwards's ventriloquial entertainment received some of the heartiest applause heard during the evening, and May Henderson, always popular at Stratford, contributed some brisk singing and dancing. The American Comedy Four combined high-class vocalism with excellent comedy business with highly gratifying results, and the illustrated songs by Lloyd Langdon and Coliseum Choristers afforded the keenest pleasure. Robb Harvey gave a sporting recitation with much dramatic effect, and Millicent Marsden's singing was most favourably received. Percy Honri was perhaps more successful as a concertina soloist than as raconteur, but his turn was vociferously applauded; and Bessie Featherstone scored very heavily with "The Latest London Betting," Ella Shields won warm praise for her contribution to the programme, and the Three Leaves are juvenile entertainers of merit. That both performances were carried through without the slightest hitch or wait reflects the greatest credit on the stage-management. "Empire Echoes" served as a most appropriate overture, and the composer and arranger, Mr. Augustus Greco, conducted the well-balanced orchestra with his customary skill. Mr. T. S. Mayne's arrangements for the comfort of the huge audiences were admirable and deserving of every praise, and he had an able lieutenant in Mr. W. S. Bucclengh.

Miss Madge Temple, who by this time next week will have completed a five months' continuous engagement at the London Coliseum in La Mascotte and Fenella, will, after a short holiday, leave England for the Continent to fulfil an engagement at Lucerne. Miss Temple was only induced to accept this engagement by reason of the magnificent salary offered.

WOLVERHAMPTON'S NEW MUSIC HALL.

The old Prince of Wales's Theatre, Bilston-street, Wolverhampton, has been acquired by Mr. Walter de Frece and a syndicate, who propose to conduct it as a hippodrome. The whole of the former interior has been gutted from floor to ceiling, and in its place has been built an auditorium of the most handsome character, the decorative colours being in white, scarlet, and gold.

The new house has been built after the form of a modified horseshoe, with two tiers, which stretch round towards the stage on either side, being terminated on the circle tier by private boxes, and the slope of each is such that each seat in both portions of the house provides a full view of the stage.

The stalls and circle are beautifully carpeted with red material, and the seats are of the most approved tip-up type, and are all comfortably upholstered in dark plush.

The seating accommodation in the pit at the rear of the stalls consists of rows of benches, with backs, while the gallery seating accommodation is in rows without backs.

The general idea of the decorative work is based upon the floreated Corinthian style; while the colour scheme, as already indicated, is chiefly of white, relieved and adorned by red wall-papering and gold details.

Along the borders of the tiers facing the stage, the white panels contain festoons of flower garlands, in the central hoops of which are the brackets fitted with electric lamps, and which, when the house is fully lighted, cannot fail to produce a rich and pleasing effect.

The ceiling has been handsomely decorated in accordance with the prevailing white and gold scheme. In the centre is a gas "sunlight," formed of clusters of burners, and at each corner is a handsome electrolier furnished with powerful electric lamps, and the illumination is further assisted by a number of powerful electric pendants, with brass attachments and mountings.

The private boxes on each side are supported on the auditorium side by graceful fluted Corinthian columns with floreated capitals and decorations, and beneath each box is an open stall lounge. On the right-hand side (looking towards the stage) has been provided a refreshment bar, the arrangement and decorations of which follow the general scheme of the whole buildings.

It is estimated that the new arrangement will find accommodation for an audience of between 2,500 and 3,000.

The building is fitted throughout for electricity, which will be generated on the premises, and a switch-board on the stage will control every light throughout the building. The fire curtain is manipulated by a lever on the stage, and can be drawn up or lowered, as the case may be, practically instantaneously. In all parts of the house a full water supply apparatus has been established, with hydrants and hoses.

In order to provide additional exits (for emergency) a strip of land has been utilised at the side of the old building, by means of which egress can be immediately obtained either into Bilston-street or Tower-street. The main entrances, which are, of course, in Bilston-street, and which open into a handsome foyer for stalls and circle, will be the ordinary exits, but the emergency exits, which will always be available, are such that even when most crowded it is estimated that the building can be cleared in the space of a couple of minutes.

The stage and accommodation for the artists has been dealt with on the same generous scale as the auditorium. The stage is 51ft. wide by 30ft. deep, which is large enough to accommodate very elaborate productions, and has been fitted with all the latest improvements.

A "green room," handsomely furnished and carpeted, has also been provided for the artists. There is a refreshment bar at the back of the pit, a smoke- and refreshment-room for the grand circle, and a refreshment-bar has also been provided for the habitués of the gallery. The alterations have been carried out by Messrs. Horton's, Ltd., and Messrs. W. Butler and Co., and the decorations had been due to the initiative and suggestions of Mr. Latham.

The performances at the Hippodrome will commence on Easter Monday, but there will be an inaugural opening on Saturday next, when Miss Vesta Tilley will be present, and will open the doors. The Hippodrome will be run on the two-shows-a-night principle, and Mr. Lennox Barry has been appointed the acting-manager of the new Hippodrome.

ALBERT CHEVALIER AT EALING.

On Wednesday evening at the Victoria Hall Mr. Chevalier, assisted by an able company, gave one of his amusing and entertaining shows. The popular artist, on making his appearance upon the stage, received a most flattering welcome. Mr. A. H. West, who presided at the piano, and skilfully accompanied Mr. Chevalier in all his songs, played as an overture, the "Valse Rhapsodie," and would have been encored had not the audience been impatient for the popular artist's appearance. In "An old bachelor," given in his most characteristic style, Mr. Chevalier at once secured the sympathetic attention of his audience, who were not slow in showing their appreciation of the old gentleman's pathetic lament. "Anky panky," which followed, showed the vocalist in the rôle of a card and billiard ball manipulator; "Poor Old Joe" was played upon a "cigar-box" violin, and some sweet notes were produced from this singular instrument. In the "Burlesque French Song" the artist found himself, as it were, in his native element. Song followed song in rapid succession—"The Workhouse Man"—where one looks so like another—"Wot vur do 'ee luv' Oi," "Hemmer," and, lastly, "Mafekin' Night" were all items that were thoroughly enjoyed by the audience, Mr. Chevalier's fooling in the last-mentioned number being so delightfully funny that he fairly brought down the house.

At intervals Miss Ethel Walker gave some amusing musically-accompanied recitatives; while Mr. A. H. West, in his "Imperial Patrol," gave a fine imitation of a marching regiment. A most enjoyable evening concluded with the farcical sketch entitled The Goose with the Golden Eggs. The tale is probably too well known to need repetition. As Mr. Turby (a country lawyer) Mr. Chevalier again found scope for some of his funniest witticisms. He was ably supported by Mr. Henry Brett as Mr. Flickster (another lawyer), Master Bertie Baxter as office boy, Mr. Arthur Brankston as Mr. Turby's clerk, and the fiancé of Clara (Miss Winifred Ingham), the old lawyer's daughter. The little company, all working with a will, secured for the sketch the success it so well merited.

One of the chief artists in the Lyceum programme of this week is Madame Bernice de Pasquali, the well-known operatic vocalist. This lady has sung in the capital of every country in the world, and in each of these she has sung in the native language. At the special performance given to the Japanese sailors on Mar. 28 this accomplished vocalist sang the Japanese National Anthem in the native tongue at the beginning of the performance, and so pleased were the Japanese sailors that they requested the officer in command to beg her to repeat the anthem at the termination of the evening.

A rearrangement of prices for the Coliseum's six o'clock performances is to be effected at Easter. Fauteuils and orchestra stalls will be 3s. and 2s. 6d. respectively; royal stalls, 2s.; grand tier stalls, 1s. 6d.; grand tier, 1s.; and balcony, 6d. These seats may be booked in advance, as usual.

"MISSING; or, THE LIGHT OF DAY."

A Musical Comedy Sketch,
Produced at the Shepherd's Bush Empire

Lily .....MISS MARIE ADAIR
Irma .....MISS PEARL KEATS
The Rajah .....MR. ALBERT EVREMOND
Jack Carlyon .....MR. J. C. PIDDOCK
Crooky .....MR. JOHNNIE SCHOFIELD

Precisely where the scene is laid we are not told, nor does it really matter much. The whole of the action of the sketch takes place in one of the rooms of a Rajah's palace, and this apartment provides us with a very beautiful piece of scenic painting. As to the story there is very little to say. Two adventurers—this is rather a charitable description, since it appears the gentlemen referred to do not seem to possess any scruples in the way of honesty of purpose and character—who go by the names of Jack Carlyon and Crooky, arrive by some means or other at the Rajah's palace. This Eastern potentate has lost a very valuable jewel, which bears the name of the "Light of Day." Jack Carlyon decides to join in the search for the missing stone, not altogether unselfishly, it must be admitted. He arranges that Crooky shall act as his servant, and Crooky is accordingly dressed up as a native flunkey. But in the palace Jack meets with Lily, an English governess, and falls in love—and becomes honest. Lily, apparently, has found the jewel, and she hands it to Jack in order that he may receive the reward from the Rajah, and at the same time be at liberty to take her away.

There is any amount of merry fooling in the piece, and most of it is contributed by Mr. Johnnie Schofield in his rôle of Crooky. He looks comical in his turban, red coat, and blue pantaloons, and his absurd doings among the harem ladies and his ridiculously mistaken notions of what his conduct should be in the palace are a great source of merriment. Crooky is told by his erstwhile master to "put on side and show off," and the manner in which Mr. Schofield carries out the instructions is uproariously laughable. Mr. Schofield, by the way, is quite a well-known and popular personality in this neighbourhood, as he was for five years the principal comedian at the Coronet Theatre, Notting Hill. Mr. J. C. Piddock has a lot of work to do in the part of Jack Carlyon, and he does it extremely well. With the amusing acts and sayings of a mischievous schemer he—in the character—combines the more sincere and serious qualities of a lover. His singing of "Are you tired, little heart?" was a particularly pleasing performance. Miss Marie Adair was sweet and engaging as Lily, and spoke her lines well, and Miss Pearl Keats agreeably acquitted herself in the rôle of Irma. Mr. Albert Evremond did all that was necessary with the character of the Rajah. Some most graceful dancing was executed by five girls attired in picturesque Eastern costumes, and the whole piece was beautifully mounted and dressed.

SADLER'S WELLS.

A song that reminds us of the approach of summer and brings to the mind merry retrospects of days on the river is that sung by the Sisters Albert. It is all about a bungalow and the invitation of a lover to his loved to join him. As a love ditty it is most effective, and to the credit of the Misses Albert, be it said, it is effectively rendered. The ladies are also extremely graceful dancers. An attractive ventriloquial act is that furnished by Sergeant Pearl. His vocal representation of the chatter and singing of a little girl is extremely realistic. The singing of "Stop yer ticklin', Jock," by another of his "dummies," and his imitation of a gramophone rendering of "The man who broke the bank at Monte Carlo" are among the cleverest things we have heard in this line lately. Looking smart, debonair, and neat in her masculine attire, Miss Vesta Fay sings in vigorous style about an old sun-dial which is to be the trysting place of two sweethearts. From a serious and dainty love theme Miss Fay turns to a lighter subject, and humorously applies the words, "the real thing," to a variety of incidents, the telling of which evoke the merriment of the audience. Miss Esther Phillips and company appear in the romantic "episode," A City of Shadows. Miss Phillips possesses in goodly measure the sense of tragedy, and with fine dramatic skill and forcefulness does she portray the character of Elise. The other rôles are in capable hands.

A couple of comedy acrobatic jugglers enter the field in the persons of Dale and D'Argan. After producing all manner of articles from some mysterious place unknown to all but themselves, they proceed to indulge in some laughable acrobatic antics, their somersaulting being particularly commendable. Did He Deserve It? the sketch presented by Mr. James Willard and company, proves one of the most entertaining features of the bill. The story, briefly, concerns the punishment meted out to a man who finds pleasure in ruining the lives of young girls. He has for a time pretended to be in love with a young lady who is a champion boxer. Subsequently he brutally informs her that he has no intention of marrying her. She has taken under her wing a flower-girl. While she is out this girl enters her apartments, and is followed by the man, who endeavours to take a liberty with her, but is prevented by the prompt action of a mastiff, who holds him to the ground. When the dog's mistress returns it releases the man. But the latter meets with a worse fate, for the jilted woman dons a pair of boxing-gloves and gives him a good drubbing. Mr. James Willard acts with realistic brutality—at least of speech—in the part of the man, while Miss Lydia Hart, in her impersonation of the boxing woman, leads one to think that there is after all no need for woman's suffrage. Mr. Willie Atom is intensely comical as the boy; and Miss Violet Carr is sweet and pretty as the flower-girl.

Miss Eva Kelland is seen and admired in a pretty little scena. A girl finds it necessary to part with her little brown mare, and the parting is a sad one. However, the purchaser of it is a gallant young bushranger, who offers her his love, and so the little brown mare and its mistress do not separate after all. The song is prettily sung, and Miss Kelland's act is enhanced by its being set in a picturesque Australian scene. Mr. Billy Williams has proved an immense favourite with his laughter-compelling drollery. His parodies on "I wouldn't leave my little wooden hut for you" and other ditties are exceedingly smart and to the point. In Mr. Charlie Deane we have a highly entertaining comedian. He contrives to be most ludicrous when he applies his comical mannerisms to such songs as "Follow the tram-lines" and "You are getting older." The Vaudeville Dramatic Company, under the business and stage-management of Mr. Ernest Wingfield, render a good account of themselves in the sketch, The Isle Despair. Mr. Wingfield treats us to a carefully-acted and interesting interpretation of the part of the hero, and Miss Helena Walbran imparts the charm and sweetness of her own personality to the rôle of the heroine. Mr. Weldon Atherstone is seen in a clever character-study of a wrong-doer in the part of Stephen Hardie, which is, to say the least, admirably played. The other rôles are in capable hands. Raymond's Bio-Tableaux submit several interesting series of pictures, the set describing "What Jones told his Wife on the Telephone" being particularly attractive and clear.

THE Terriers and their friends (ladies specially invited) will have their "Good Friday Dinner and Social" at 7 p.m., at the Hotel Boulogne, 27, Gerrard-street, Shaftesbury-avenue, W.

COUPEAU AT THE COLISEUM.

Mr. Charles Warner can again be seen in London in his favourite character of Coupeau—this time at the Coliseum, where a compressed version of Drink was produced on Monday afternoon, with the following cast:—

Lantier .....MR. HARRY GRIBBEN
Mes Bottes .....MR. ALFRED PHILLIPS
Bibe .....MR. GEORGE ELLIOTT
Bec Sale .....MR. F. SAVILLE
Virginie .....MISS MARY ALLESTREE
Gervaise .....} MISS HELEN GRAEME
Nana .....}
Coupeau .....MR. CHARLES WARNER

Mr. Warner himself admits that when he first played this part at the Princess's Theatre in 1879 he had not acted much in melodrama, and in some quarters doubts were freely expressed regarding the success of the experiment. Every playgoer knows how triumphantly he passed through the ordeal, and what a memorable hit he made in the character of the Parisian plumber. More than a quarter of a century has passed since the production of the late Charles Reade's stage adaptation of Emile Zola's powerful story of "L'Assommoir," and the famous impersonation has been seen in both hemispheres, and has been reproduced at almost every theatre in the kingdom. On Monday at the Coliseum the famous actor showed that his realisation of the downward course of Coupeau to the Avernus of delirium tremens had not lost one iota of its tremendous power. The audience on Monday sat spellbound while the shuddering wretch, having satisfied his unconquerable craving for brandy, raves wildly in his terrible alcoholic dementia, and jabbers of the awful phantasms that dipsomania presents to his mind, until death shortens his sufferings. In the first scene in Drink Mr. Warner suggests with all the skill of a great artist the gradually degrading effects of the drink habit, and indicates with many fine touches the pitiful mental struggle of the unhappy workman against his baser self. The star receives excellent support from the company. Miss Mary Allestree plays with immense spirit and vigour the character of Virginie, whose hatred of the unfortunate Gervaise reaches the point of ferocity. The virulence and spite of the character are fully emphasised by the clever actress, who scores most unmistakably. Miss Helen Graeme in the rôles of Gervaise and Nana displays considerable versatility, sounding a pathetic note in the public-house scene, and quite rising to the trying ordeal through which the character has to pass in the scene of the final catastrophe. The drunken and dissolute Lantier has an effective representative in Mr. Harry Gribben; Mr. Alfred Phillips brings out the humour of the character of Mes Bottes; and Mr. George Elliott and Mr. F. Saville figure to advantage in the characters of Bibe and Bec Sale.

The Coliseum bill has no brighter item than the selection of the second act from La Mascotte, adapted by the late Henry Brougham Farnie and Robert Reece from Audran's famous opera-comique, and produced at the opening of the Comedy Theatre on Oct. 15, 1881. Miss Madge Temple now plays the part of Bettina, originally represented by Miss Violet Cameron, and both sings and acts gaily and artistically. Mr. Charles Trevor makes comic capital out of the part of Laurent XVII., first played in this country by the veteran Lionel Brough; Mr. Watty Brunton's experience and drollery stand him in good stead in the part of Rocco (the Lord Chamberlain); Mr. Andre Kaya is heard to advantage as Pippo, the shepherd; and Miss Clara Webber is a graceful Fiametta.

The Troubles of Tuffin plays closer than on its opening night; and a great hit is made by Mr. George Lashwood, both in his "farewell to his latchkey" and in the song, "She's my best girl." The Ten Loonies at play and the "Umbrella" song are also strong attractions in the bill.

LOVERS of sacred and classical music who were accustomed to attend the famous Good Friday concert at the St. James's Hall will find an efficient substitute in the one arranged by Mr. Barrasford at the Lyceum. The South London Choral Association, numbering over 200 vocalists, assisted by an orchestra of 50 solo musicians, will perform the Stabat Mater, whilst selections from Cavalleria Rusticana and Handel's wonderful work Messiah should attract music-lovers from all parts of the Metropolis. The Lyceum has a capacity of seating over 5000 persons, and the concert has been timed to commence at 7.30 p.m.

MR. ALF COOK and Mr. Harry Brighton have joined hands as the Panlo Bros., and are working a comedy act. They are fast booking 1906.

THE NEW ROYAL HIPPODROME, PORTSMOUTH.

This new theatre of varieties will shortly commence building on a commanding site at the corner of Commercial-road and Salem-street, from the designs of Mr. Bertie Crewe, of the Savoy, London, the architect for many of our best theatres in London and the provinces. The site is in an excellent position, being in the busiest part of the town, close to the railway station, with trams to all parts passing the door, and, being a corner site, is most suitable for a theatre, as numerous exits may be obtained.

The elevation, as will be seen from the sketch, is particularly fine, though plain, and will be of terra-cotta. At night, when the glass canopy, arc lamps, and electric signs are lit up, and the lights inside are shining through the elaborately painted windows, it will look very handsome. The theatre will be a two-tier house, divided up into pit and stalls on the ground floor, circle over, and gallery over that, and will be run on the popular two-houses-a-night principle.

The main entrance is in Commercial-road, in the central position, that to the pit also in the front, and that to the gallery in Salem-street. The extra exits from these—all parts of the house having, of course, two exits—can also be used for entrance if necessary, so that the people from the first house do not have to meet those waiting for the second. The stage-door is placed at the end of the building, right away from the waiting crowd.

Through the mahogany doors to the main entrance is the vestibule—a very fine hall, containing the two box offices to stalls and circle, with marble mosaic floor and wide staircase leading to the foyer. This is a fine, large apartment, and from here a wide corridor each side leads direct to the stalls and lower tier of private boxes, and another wide staircase leads up to the circle and upper tiers of boxes. Off this foyer are also the stalls, ladies' and gentlemen's retiring and refreshment saloon. There will be ten rows of stalls with 252 tip-up armchairs, upholstered in red velvet, the floor covered in thick blue carpet. These seats, and in fact all those throughout the whole building, are comfortably arranged, with wide gangways and plenty of "knee-room" between each row. In front of the stalls is a large orchestra that will accommodate thirty musicians. The pit follows on behind the stalls with fourteen rows of upholstered seats to hold 625 people, and, with a good rake on the floor and the entire absence of columns, a perfect view of the stage is to be had. There is ample lavatory accommodation at the back, and downstairs, below the vestibule, is a large comfortably-furnished saloon. The staircase to the circle lands one at the back on to a fine, wide promenade, extending the full width of the building and down the sides, from which there is a good view of the stage. There will be twelve rows in the circle, seating 362 people in armchairs, the same as those provided in the stalls. At the back is a fireproof cinematograph box. Short flights of stairs each side lead to the retiring-rooms and the saloon. This last room will be one of the finest in any theatre, being large and lofty, with decorated ceiling and walls, thick pile carpet, comfortable lounges, &c. There will be eight private boxes, entered from the stalls corridors and circle promenades, holding forty people. The gallery will be as spacious and comfortable as it can possibly be made, with fourteen rows of seating to hold 695 people, with lavatories off the promenade at the back and a large saloon. All the saloons will be comfortably fitted up for the sale of minerals, tea, coffee, and cigars. Excellent sight lines are to be had from all parts of the house, and the circles being constructed on the latest suspensory principles, there will be no columns of any sort to obstruct the view.

The stage is of ample proportions, large enough for any performance on the road, and lofty enough to take all scenery straight up.

The dressing-rooms, eleven in number, are in a separate building at the end, with self-closing iron doors from the corridors on to the stage. They are all lofty, well lighted, ventilated, and heated, and with lavatories with hot and cold water in each. Under the dressing-rooms will be the electric lighting plant and boiler-house.

Two exits at least have been provided to each part of the house, all leading direct to the street. These will be indicated during the performance by two red electric lights over each door, so that in clearing the house (especially in case of panic) attention would be at once drawn to the exits by these red lamps.

An impression will be made on entering the auditorium by the simplicity and gracefulness of the decoration, which will be in the Empire style, with a colouring of cream and gold, a richness and warmth being added by the seating, while all the handsome draperies to the stage and boxes will be in dark red and the carpet in dark blue. The proscenium opening will be carried up higher than usual, with an arched head, and constructed entirely of marble; either side will be two columns carrying a richly-decorated arch right over from these columns. The walls splay out to the main auditorium walls, and will be divided into bays containing the entrances to stalls and the private boxes, surmounted by pilasters and columns, the whole finishing on the top with a finely-decorated frieze and cornice. The ceiling will be oval in shape, filled in with one large painting.

The whole theatre is as fireproof as it can be constructed, all the floors and tiers being of concrete and steel, the steppings for the seats only being of wood. There will be two hydrants on each floor in the auditorium, and five on the stage. The proscenium opening will be provided with an automatic asbestos fireproof curtain, with a water-sprinkler over, and all other openings in the proscenium wall will have self-closing iron doors. The lighting will, of course, be by electricity, arranged on two separate circuits, half from the plant in the theatre and half from the Corporation's supply, so that in the case of the failure of one the other is always in readiness.

All the electric fittings will be specially made to design, so as to be in character with the general scheme of decoration. The heating will be on the low pressure hot-water system, numerous radiators and coils being placed in the most advantageous positions in the auditorium, retiring-rooms, and saloons.

The ventilation will be by means of air-ducts and electric fans in the ceiling. Ample retiring-rooms will be provided on each tier, placed in the most desirable positions. The dimensions of the theatre are as follows:—Auditorium, 63ft. 6ins. wide by 76ft. 9ins. deep, and height of 51ft. from the stalls to the main ceiling. The stage, 30ft. deep by 65ft. wide, with a grid 58ft. above the stage.

The seating is as follows:—Stalls 252, boxes 40, circle 362, pit 625, and gallery 695, or just about 2,000 in all, and with ample standing room for at least 650 more.

The new theatre will, it is expected, be open by next October.

VARIETY ARTISTS' FEDERATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—I have attended several meetings of the V.A.F., and can assure Miss Alexandra that the word "fight" is only the outcome of her own imagination. Never have I heard a more earnest and unaggressive set of speakers—who one and all speak highly of Mr. Stoll and other managers—than at these meetings. Miss Alexandra asks: "What of the English artists who depend more upon their popularity than their novelty?" This is surely the pot calling the kettle black with a vengeance. I enclose my card.—Yours faithfully,

ONE OF THE V.A.F.

London, S.E., April 3.

OPERA HOUSE, CROUCH END.

Variety still holds the boards at this theatre, and some very good turns are seen this week. Miss Victoria Lytton, burlesque actress and dancer, scores with "When the ship's in port again," and "I'm getting on" is well received. Mr. Gwyn Elwen, a new Welsh tenor, gives everyone a musical treat with "Angels guard thee" and "Tom Bowling." His enunciation is excellent, and the audience highly appreciate his good singing. Mlle. Rosetti, the musical girl, gives evidence of her skill, first with the 'cello and then with the violin. Collins and Hawley, dancing experts from across the "herring pond," receive quite an ovation. Miss Mabel Lynn, an American comedienne and dancer, with her song depicting the waitresses of different nations, is very clever; her coon song and dance are also well rendered. The New York Quartette, with "What the brass band played," is favourably received. The ladies are all excellent dancers and exceedingly graceful in their movements. Lauri Wylie with his Mimicking Mannikins is very successful. Arthur Pearl, comedian, is another excellent turn.

THE Mansfield Advertiser of last Friday says that the Victoria Theatre, which has been occasionally occupied by dramatic and musical companies, has been taken over by the Midland Theatres, Ltd., who intend to open on Easter Monday with a variety company on the two-shows-a-night principle.

"THE ERA" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

A REMINISCENCE OF DAN LENO.

Mr. Arthur Stevens, a personal friend of the lamented comedian, has contributed the following interesting article, "How I first met Dan Leno," to the columns of a recent number of the Leicester Examiner:—"It was in the month of March, 1875. I was employed by the Midland Railway Company at their Newark Station. Being a 'Son of Cockaigne,' and never having previously lived out of London, it was my practice when off duty to take long walks, in order to see the surrounding country. One bitterly cold day, in the early part of the month, when a keen north-easter was blowing, bringing with it heavy showers of sleet, I left the town for one of my usual tramps. I had walked about four miles, when I met a man, a woman, and a boy. My vocation having brought me into contact with many theatrical companies, I could see at once that they were 'professionals.' The father and mother—for such they proved to be—were hale and hearty in appearance, but the son was a thin, weedy, delicate-looking lad, whose age might be anything from ten to thirteen. Neither the father nor the son had overcoats, and the boy looked half frozen, his thin face being blue from the cold. The man had a small portmanteau slung on a stick across his shoulder, the woman carried a bundle in her hand, and the boy had a wooden box perforated with holes strapped on his back, in knapsack fashion. I noticed that the boy was wearing a pair of dancing clogs. I discovered afterwards that, his boots having become dilapidated, he had cast them aside, and their means not being sufficient to buy new ones, he had been forced to take the road in this unusual footwear.

"'Good morning,' I said, 'it's very cold.'

"'It is that,' replied the man; 'we have walked from Sutton-in-Ashfield, and have covered twelve miles this morning. We are going to Newark, to fulfil a week's engagement at the new White Hart, in Carter-gate.'

"'I know it very well,' I said, 'and you will find Mr. Lundover, the landlord, a very good sort.'

"Then I heard the first joke it was my lot to hear Dan Leno make. It was a little far-fetched, but the manner in which it was delivered made it sound very humorous. 'He'll be all right, dad,' said young Dan, 'so long as he will lundover the brass we shall be satisfied.'

"I felt interested, and so turned and walked with them towards the town. As we passed through the village of Kelham, I proposed that we should have some refreshment, and the offer being accepted, we turned into a very ancient hostelry known as the Fox, and I called for what we required. I could see the boy was hungry, but I felt rather diffident in making an offer of food. At length an idea struck me. 'Here,' I said, 'I am going to have some lunch: you may as well join me.' The mother was about to refuse my offer, when I cut the matter short by ordering bread and cheese for the whole of us. It did me good to see how the boy enjoyed the food. He told me, years afterwards, that they had left the lodging-house where they had slept the previous night without having any breakfast, as they had no money whatever with which to purchase it. After a rest and a smoke, we continued our way, and I left them on the outskirts of the town and went on duty.

"In those days the licensed houses in most towns had what was termed a 'singing-room' attached to them. In most cases a professional would be engaged for the week, and the remainder of the programme would be filled by any of the audience who were able and willing to oblige.

"I heard from the lad that, previous to going to Sutton-in-Ashfield, he had spent three very happy and prosperous weeks in Leicester. He told me that he had appeared at Paul's, the Rainbow and Dove, the Antelope, and Barley Mow, and at each place had been most kindly received. He voted Leicester as being the best town that they had visited, and said that, after leaving that place, they had done very badly.

"There are no doubt several old inhabitants of Leicester who were wont to patronise what were in those days the only music halls in existence, who will be able to recall the performances of young Dan, when he visited that town as a lad. Few, I venture to think, ever dreamt of the future there was in store for the weakly, undersized boy. To the very last year of his life Leicester had a warm place in his heart.

"To return to my story, I may say that, during the week he stayed at Newark, I was a frequent visitor to the new White Hart, and saw the lad give several performances. He sang and danced with exceptional ability for one so young, and during his show a variegated rat ran round him, perched upon his shoulder, or found a resting-place in the outside pocket of his costume. The Australian, or variegated rat, was then quite a novelty in this country, and hence it added an extra effect to what was in itself a very smart and attractive 'turn.' The landlord was delighted with the lad, and prophesied that he would go a long way if he had a fair chance.

"I spent a happy week with them, and during that time wrote to a Nottingham licensed victualler whom I knew, and secured them an engagement to follow the one at Newark. When they arrived at the station, on the Monday morning, in order to proceed to Nottingham, they were too early for the train, and 'improved the shining hour' by giving a show in one of the waiting-rooms. The father played a brass whistle, and the lad performed one of his expert clog dances. It was my duty to stop them, but 'a fellow feeling makes the world kin.' I was an amateur entertainer myself, and I let the affair go on; but, as the dance was finished and the usual collection was being made, the stationmaster appeared on the scene, and promptly fined me 5s. for neglect of duty.

"'That's rough on you,' said Dan, as I wished him good luck at the carriage door.

"'Never mind,' I answered, 'perhaps he may forget it.'

"And he most certainly did forget it, for I never had to pay.

"My next meeting with him was in the November of the same year. He had then made some progress, being engaged at Pullan's Theatre of Varieties, Bradford, and I spent several hours in his company while he was there. Many years elapsed before I met him again, during which he had made rapid strides in his profession, and had risen to be a 'star' of the very first magnitude.

"I had business in London with a variety agent, and he took me on the Good Friday evening to a hotel on the Surrey side, much frequented by the music-hall profession. Dan Leno was present, and I made myself known to him. When the genial little man grasped the fact as to who I was, his delight was most flattering. He introduced me to every one in the room, and then, in his inimitable manner, gave a description of our first meeting. His narrative evoked a continuous ripple of laughter, but there was a vein of pathos running through the whole of it, which was noted and appreciated by those who heard it.

"I met him frequently after that, and enjoyed the honour of his friendship until his lamentable affliction overtook him. I can add my testimony to that of many others by saying that no truer friend, or more kind-hearted man, ever trod the boards of the variety stage."

MR. EDITOR,—Sir,—In your most eulogistic notice of the Empire, Holborn, of 'Appy 'Ampstead, you say Mr. Joe Elvin played Tommy Flipper. "Palmam qui meruit ferat"; the part was played by yours faithfully, MAITLAND MARLER.

THE ELLIOTTS and SAVONAS.

A FEW OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

THE ERA, Dec. 2, 1905.

"THE PALACE OF ORPHEUS."

Mr. J. B. Elliott's latest "creation," entitled "The Palace of Orpheus," was produced at the Lyric Theatre, Liverpool, on Monday, and was accorded by a crowded audience a reception which testified to its entire success. It is recorded that Orpheus was able to charm beasts and make rocks and woods move to his melody. That Mr. Elliott will attempt to emulate the achievements of the mythical musician of Greece is not to be expected, but, at all events, he is in a position to present a satisfying feast of harmony which is entirely distinct from what the public are accustomed to receive.

When the curtain rises a scene depicting the interior of a gorgeous palace is revealed. An immense star forms a pretty centre-piece on the stage, and at the back are three large organs, which display innumerable brass trumpets in front; while the side scenery is designed to represent harps, lyres, and other musical instruments. The scene in itself is exceedingly beautiful with merely the aid of the ordinary stage illumination, but when scores of coloured electric effects arranged tastefully in all directions are turned on, the claim of its being a "veritable Arabian Night's realisation of beauty, colour, and effect," is justified. Then commences an entertainment by the Eight Savonas, four ladies and four gentlemen, which is certainly unique. The performers are dressed in Georgian costume, with the customary white wigs and patches, the skirts of the ladies being of rich white satin, with music and musical instruments worked upon the front and sides in coloured silks. Space will not permit a detailed description of the various instruments used to produce delightful harmonious effects. Beyond the well-known brass there are the miramba, commonly used in South America to produce dance music; aluminium lyres, consisting of upright rods, from which sounds are produced; American organ chimes, the shaking of which produces mellow tones; ocarinas, metal discs spun on a slab table, &c. Three of the performers preside at the organs, and a volume of sound floods the whole of the auditorium. The rendering of the overture to "William Tell" (Rossini), was accompanied by very impressive stage effects. As the selection progressed the blaze of dazzling light gradually disappeared, the whistling of the wind, with peals of thunder, and vivid flashes of lightning, were introduced, and eventually these gave place to the twittering of birds as the darkness disappeared and the morning broke.

The second part of the entertainment consisted of a new comic Negro fantasia, entitled "A Moonlight Trip on a Mississippi Steamer," where we are treated to some charming dancing by the four lady Savonas, who wear large straw hats. This little turn earned a hearty encore. The half-hour's entertainment terminated with the playing of a hunting piece, which was full of life and action. The artists running to the footlights, which, by the way, consisted of electric-lighted transparent lyres, drew forth long, white streamers attached thereto. From these were suspended small bells, which raised a merry tinkling as the ribbons were jerked.

This fine show has cost Mr. J. B. Elliott, who invented it, the sum of £2,000, out of which £900 went for the three organs; and the weight of the scenery is about six tons. The modelling and painting, which are extremely clever, are the work of Mr. Charles Wood. These gentlemen have certainly succeeded in producing an attraction which cannot fail to satisfy wherever it is shown.

THE PORCUPINE,
Liverpool, Saturday, Dec. 2, 1905.

LYRIC—THE SEVEN SAVONAS.

Monday was an especial occasion, and a red letter one for the habitués of the pretty Lyric. This was in the first production of a glorified musical show by the Seven Savonas. Musical grotesques are to be counted by the scores in the variety world, but such a gorgeous display as this has not before been seen as that invented and produced by J. B. Elliott, and the refined and high-class musical performance given by the Seven Savonas amid a perfect dazzling and almost blinding glory of electric lighting. At first sight this seems an almost chaotic mass of colour without form, but shapes of graceful design and contour soon emerge from this, and become a gleaming habitation fittingly called "The Palace of Orpheus" In this abode of brilliant colour and electrical splendour the gifted Savonas show their incomparable qualities as musical experts, and their wonderful command over the most extraordinary instruments. Perfect in the manipulation of these, they show marvellous skill in the execution of the most intricate classical music, and with equal facility handle such diverse instruments as organs, sleigh bells, metal discs, aluminium lyres, American organ chimes, ocarinas, South African marembas, zylophones, and silver tubes. I am looking forward, with all the other elect, to playing a harp, but I shall never attain to the accomplishments of the Savonas, either terrestrially or celestially. It is altogether a wonderfully great show. Well done, Papa Elliott. I take off my hat to you as the Greatest Musical Entertainer of the Age. You are a Genius in inventions, and he must be a bold man who would try to follow in your footsteps.

THE ENCORE, Nov. 30, 1905.

First Production of Mr. J. B. Elliott's Great Creation "THE PALACE OF ORPHEUS" at the Lyric, Liverpool.

THE ELLIOTTS AND SAVONAS.

On Monday evening, November 27th, was produced for the first time at the Lyric Theatre of Varieties, Liverpool, Mr. J. B. Elliott's great creation, "The Palace of Orpheus," and we must at once confess that our most sanguine expectations were more than realised. The dazzling beauty, magnificent colouring, and elaborate design, are perfect and unique, and the manner it was received by a crowded house must have given great satisfaction to the artist and inventor.

It is a fascinating pleasure to witness such a gorgeous spectacular scene, the like of which has never before been put on in Liverpool. It is a veritable triumph, of artistic art, and beyond description; however I will try and give your readers some idea of this charming dream of fairyland.

When the curtain rises it displays "The Palace of Orpheus," in a subdued tone of light, which instantly changes to the most brilliant display of electric effects imaginable; a veritable feast for the eyes and mind to dwell upon and wonder how such effects can be created. In the background we see massive organs, towering up at least twenty feet high surrounded by terraces and golden staircases for the artists to reach them; also fantastic designs of every description illuminated by thousands of electrical coloured lights When the scene was fully developed the whole audience rose to a pitch of excitement, and was unbounded in its applause, and called vociferously for the artist, Mr. Charles Wood, who came forward to receive their greeting., which he richly deserved. Mr. J. B. Elliott also had to respond, and it must have been a source of gratification to him to know that his great and costly efforts were so fully appreciated. In this scene the famous Savonas appear and give their unequalled performances arrayed in superb dresses, to harmonise with the colour of their surroundings. After giving their unparalled perfotmance of the overture to "William Tell," they play for the first time on any stage their negro fantasia, entitled "A Moonlight Trip on a Mississippi Steamer," written by Mr. J. B. Elliott. It is a pleasing and melodious sketch, and went with a dash and swing which the Savonas so well know how to infuse into their productions. It was received by the whole house with a perfect storm of delighted applause, and was voted a musical treat of the highest order. It will always be a welcome addition to their extensive repertoire.

We are pleased to say the whole performance went without the slightest hitch, which speaks volumes for all concerned in this great production.

THE MUSIC HALL AND THEATRE REVIEW,
Dec. 1, 1905.

It would be difficult, writes our Liverpool correspondent, to imagine anything more gorgeous or more pleasing to the eye than Mr. J. B. Elliott's new creation The Palace of Orpheus, which was successfully produced on Monday evening at the Lyric Theatre of Varieties, Liverpool.

In fact, it is a moot point, indeed, whether the Ancients, in their Eleusinian mysteries, could conjure up such a handsome palace in which to enshrine their musical divinity, of whom Shakespeare wrote:—

> "Orpheus, with his lute, made trees
> And the mountain tops, that freeze,
> Bow themselves, when he did sing:
> To his music, plants, and flowers,
> Ever spring, as sun and showers,
> There had been a lasting spring.
> Every thing that heard him play,
> Even the billows of the sea,
> Hung their heads, and then lay by.
> In sweet music is such art:
> Killing care, and grief of heart."

Pleasurable anticipation ran high on Monday evening as to the merits of the new production, the fulfilment of which was realised in every particular. Much, of course, was expected from Mr. Elliott, having regard of the fact that his last creation, which was produced at the London Hippodrome, for the celebrated musical marvels, the Seven Savonas, caused something of a sensation in the metropolis

On his new venture Mr. Elliott has spared neither time nor money. Consequently, he has ably succeeded in making it a veritable triumph in stagecraft. The prevailing hues of the rich scheme of colouring are blue, gold, and amber, and when illuminated with the numerous variegated coloured electric lights the scene presented is fairy-like in the extreme.

In this the Seven Savonas (beautifully garbed in picturesque Georgian Costumes) give a capital show. At the initial performance they gave a clever rendering of a new Negro fantasia entitled "A Moonlight Trip on a Mississipi Steamer.' They also performed the overture and the famous Storm Scene from Rossini's opera of "William Tell," which was executed in a brilliant manner by these clever exponents of mirth and music. The natural effects of thunder, lightning, rain, wind, the howling of wild beasts escaping from the storm, the return of calm, and the singing of the birds, lent additional effect to a most enjoyable performance, which no one should miss.

THE STAGE, Nov. 30, 1905.

Lyric.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Henry C. Arnold; Acting-Manager, Mr. Fred Coles.—Musical eccentricities, from the harmonious coffee-pot to the electric orchestra, have long been familiar to music hall habitués, but it has been left to Mr. J. B. Elliott to prove that there is still novelty to be displayed in this line of entertainment. Under the title of "The Palace of Orpheus," he has presented through the famous Savonas a marvellous and altogether remarkable creation. From a merely spectacular standpoint the performance is quite unique. Amid a dazzling blaze of electric lights, which is to be taken as suggesting the gorgeous palace of some god of harmonies, there is set up a bewildering mass of musical instruments of a strange and weird character. Even the footlights have been invaded, for along them runs a line of lyres, all beautifully illuminated, and all of which add to the musical pleasures of the turn. From these on the stage are silver tubes, South African marambas, saxaphones, grand organs, sleigh bells, chimes, ocarinas, aluminium lyres. American organ chimes, and musical metal discs. These, in the hands of the seven highly-gifted and talented Savonas, are made to produce a rich flood of both solo, concerted, and orchestral music of the highest order. This singularly fascinating turn is not only rich in these wonderful instruments and electrical effects, but in the infinite charm of the performers and their varied and comprehensive musical accomplishments.

Money, ingenuity, resource, and special attainments are visible in every phase and feature of the show, and it may be said to be one of the most perfect and astonishing entertainments which the music halls, with all their modern enterprise, have yet furnished. In this blaze of splendour Mr. J. B. Elliott and Mr. Charles Wood appeared to receive the plaudits of the delighted audience.

MR. TOM GREEN, the well-known stage-director and comedian of cinématograph fame, having completed some fine pictures for Messrs. Cricks and Sharp, of Kingsway, is now engaged in producing some of his startling and original pictures for that well-known London firm the Walturdaw Company, of Dean-street, Holborn. Showmen will do well to watch the coming events, as they are something out of the common.

OUR news from Yorkshire is that Halifax Spring Fair was well maintained by Mrs. H. Waddington's motor-car set, J. W. Waddington's Kaffir-circus machine, Alf Morley's steam swings, and Joe Corrigan's ships in the air; gem motors, gem horses, and swings by Messrs. Hutchinson, Gavin Brook, J. T. Cooper, and Mrs. Thomas; Frank Gess with school of boxers and athletes; Sam Towers' novelties of nature—the three-legged calf, the tiniest pony in the world, and other freaks; rifle saloons, bottle batteries, and egg-smashers by Messrs. Thompson, Ratcliffe, and Mrs. Jameson. The olla podrida of the fairground was furnished in all its variety by Messrs. Hughes, Illingworth, Rhodes, Cooper, Cookshaw, Brook, Turner, Joy, Corrigan, Jameson, and a host of others.

A CARNIVAL under the direction of Messrs. H. Thurston and Sons commenced on the Circus Field, St. Albans, on the 30th inst., and will close to-night (Saturday). The chief attractions have been Messrs. Thurston's latest novelty, "The Racing Motor-cars," which have been well patronised, and their Royal Hippodrome of Living Pictures, in which have been shown many of the latest films from the best firms. On the outside of the Hippodrome the Dawsons (Joe and Lil), comedy duo and cake-walkers, have been appearing. Another feature which has attracted considerable attention is Messrs. Thurston's electric juvenile motor-cars, which have been crowded. Other amusements on the ground included H. Barnard's royal park swings, striker, and throwing games; Moore's fish globes; E. Shaw's Wild West shooting saloon, dart board, and cup-breakers; "Kettering Willie's" dart board; and John Harris's cokernut alleys. On Thursday, April 5, Messrs. Thurston and Sons generously gave the entire takings to the St. Albans Hospital, when a large sum was realised.

A FORESTERS' fête will be held at Inkberrow, Worcester, on July 2, on which date the Inkberrow Wakes also take place. There will be flower shows in August at Elmley Castle, near Pershore, and at New End, near Astwood Bank.

IN our notice of the Shepherd's Bush Empire last week the name of a very attractive vocalist—namely, Miss Madge Carlyle—was omitted. Miss Carlyle's singing was a delightful feature of the programme, and her efforts were extremely well received by the audience.

MR. TOM LEO, the success of whose song "Too lazy to live" was instantaneous and complete, opens at two well-known suburban halls on Monday. He has acquired a new comic song from the same pens as supplied the "lazy" ditty. It is entitled "The fellow who falls in love."

THE following plays have been performed at Jennings's Alexandra Theatre, Redditch:—The Streets of London, The Shaughraun, A Mother's Love, Oliver Twist, Linda the Pearl of Savoy, The Scarlet Mark, and The Bottle Imp.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD.

IT is very gratifying to notice the splendid rally of the London showmen to the support of the Showmen's Guild. This was not only clearly shown at the annual meeting in London and the two important gatherings of showmen since, but it is also evidenced in the eagerness with which individual showmen constitute themselves active intelligence officers and supply important information to the Guild executive. This, of course, is understandable when we remember that only within the last two years—that is, since the settlement of the Rev. T. Horne in London—has any particular personal touch existed between the executive and the London members of the Guild.

LAST Easter a meeting was attempted at Wanstead Flats, but owing to the unfortunate incidents of a storm and behind that considerable apathy with regard to the work of the society, the meeting was but poorly attended. This of course was very discouraging, and the Rev. T. Horne did not feel justified in running the risk of another failure.

AT the close of the largely-attending meeting of showmen at the Islington headquarters of the Guild last week, Mr. Horne received a warmly-pressed invitation to essay a meeting at Wanstead Flats on Easter Sunday. To this he consented readily, and particulars of the time and place of meeting will be found in our advertising columns.

SUBSCRIPTIONS to the Showmen's Guild: J. W. Chipperfield, 5s.; J. Hastings, 5s.; C. Biddall, 5s.; H. J. Birch, 5s.; C. Hill, 5s.; H. Peters, 5s.; J. Wilson, 5s.; T. Manning, 5s.

THE fairs ahead for next week are: Stanhope, Worksop, Norwich, Bacup, Doncaster, Haslingden, Ordsall Lane (Salford), Padiham, Queen's Road (Manchester), Seaforth Sands (Liverpool), Todmorden, Trafford Road (Manchester), Trinity Market (Salford), Bilston, Blackburn, Darlington, Deptford, Derby, Glossop, Godmanchester, North Shields, and Wanstead Flats. In Scotland there are Dundee and Levan, and in Wales Holyhead and Neath.

THE principal agricultural shows and cattle fairs for April are: Oakham on the 9th; Howden (Yorks), Hull, Lynn, and Melton Mowbray on the 10th; Worksop on the 11th; Horncastle, Nottingham, Norwich, and Weyhill on the 12th; Grantham and Preston on the 14th; Darlington, Driffield, Dublin, Luton, Kirkby Stephen, Sleaford, Stamford, Strood (Kent), Godmanchester, and Romsey on the 16th; Barnard Castle, East Ilsley, Gainsborough, Leek, Ripley, and Royston on the 18th; Chester on the 19th; Derby on the 20th; Leicester on the 21st; Downton, Penrith, and Lincoln on the 23rd; Holt and Loughborough on the 25th; Clones on the 26th; Chatteris on the 27th; Alton on the 28th; Market Harborough and Rugby on the 30th.

WHEN the busy toilers of the United Kingdom go out in their thousands to enjoy themselves during the short respite of the Easter holidays they will find their ready servants, the showmen of the Empire, prepared to give them amusement and recreation.

BUSY Londoners will crowd out to the great open spaces so admirably preserved for their use by the London County Council, the verderers of the forest, and the Commissioners of Crown Lands. At more than a dozen centres within the outer ring of greater London open-air amusement will be provided for the people by the travelling showmen.

NOTABLY there will be great fairs at Hampstead Heath, Wormwood Scrubbs, Blackheath, Wanstead Flats, the Welsh Harp (Hendon), Hounslow Heath, Alexandra Palace, Crystal Palace, Deptford, and in many an East-End and busy Southside thoroughfare amusements will be provided for the crowding people.

MANCHESTER and the many great cotton towns within a radius of ten miles from it will keep Easter fair. Old Knott Mill Fair will be kept on J. Collins's celebrated ground, the Queen's Road, Manchester; John Whiting and William Holmes will both hold their well-known fairs at Ordsall Lane and Trafford Road, Manchester; and the Salford ground (Trinity Market) will as usual keep its Easter fair.

ALL the towns in the immediate neighbourhood will keep holiday, and good business will be done by showmen at Oldham, Ashton, Bacup, Haslingden, Todmorden, Blackburn, and Glossop. Liverpool will have many pleasure centres, H. J. Wallis's famous fair on Seaforth Sands, P. Collins's Birkenhead fair, and of course good business will be done at New Brighton.

IN the Midland and Western counties, fairs at Bilston, Derby, Cheltenham, Halesowen, Malvern, Northampton, Exeter, Bristol, Portsmouth, and Torquay. All the great Welsh towns—Cardiff, Merthyr Tydfil, Newport, Pontypridd, Aberdare, and Neath will keep Easter holiday, and in the far North, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Darlington, and North Shields will have their Easter fairs.

THE places we have indicated above suffice to demonstrate the important part travelling showmen play in the national life.

THE old Chooter Fair of Grantham Town was held in grand style, the entertainers and novelty providers being G. H. Kemp, with coliseum of varieties and the latest pictures; Enoch Farrars, similar show, animated photography; John Proctor's cinematograph theatre; Harry Hughes's assault-at-arms and military display; Westray's freak exhibition, and Aspland's novelty booth; Twigdon's three sets—the gondolas, the switchback, and the highflyers; Aspland's three machines—the motor-cars, the bicycles, and the steam-gallopers; Smith and Warren's flying ostriches; P. Collins's switchback; George Holmes's steam-horses; and Waddington's two sets—the ships in the air and steam-swings. The minor novelties were rifle saloons by Shaw and Bloomfield, and throwing games and varieties by Westrop and Hearn.

WREXHAM is always a capital spring fixture, and deservedly attracts some of the best shows on the road. The chief show attraction was Mrs. Flora Collins's superb theatre of living pictures and varieties, closely followed by similar exhibitions by Charles Farrell and Patrick Collins, jun. Other capital shows were Gal. Hague's black and white boxers, and Wright's fine art academy. The machine list was a big one, and included Patrick Collins's motor-switchback and the flying ostriches, and Charles Farrell's three sets, the steam-gallopers and the big boats.

WINCHESTER ranges and rifle saloons were by Messrs. Farrell, Turner, Wright, and Fossett. The other novelties—throwing games, variety stalls, &c., were by Messrs. Cordwell, Fletcher, Chadwick, Greatorex, Wright, Dobson, Cordwell, and Turner.

SIR ROBERT FOSSETT AND SONS' grand circus and hippodrome have given some excellent performances at Broadway and Evesham.

AT Woodford are Tiller's mechanical mannikins, bioscope, and variety entertainment, giving excellent performances.

WE regret to announce the death of Henry Hammersley, professionally know as Prof. Wall, of Wall's Phantoscope. He retired some nine or ten years ago from the road full of honours and with an ample competence, and has lived the last ten years of his life in his own house, Sussex-street, Lower Broughton, Manchester. He passed peacefully away early on Monday morning last. Few men of his day were better known on all the great fairgrounds of the country. Lancashire, Yorkshire, and his native county Cheshire regarded him with the highest honour and affection.

WALL'S Phantoscope was quite an institution for many years at all our great fairs. Birmingham, Nottingham, York, Hull, Leeds, Halifax, the Lancashire and Cheshire Wakes and fairs, all welcomed the advent of Wall's ghost illusion. Hammersley was a man of strong character, strong opinions, fearless in the advocacy of what he held to be right and just. He made his show the model concern on the road, and wisely decided to retire at the zenith of his fame and prosperity, and enjoy the well-earned sweets of old age. He was buried at Macclesfield Cemetery in the family grave amid profound expressions of respect and public esteem.

THE RAILWAYS AND THE FAIRGROUNDS.

LONDON AND NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY REPRESENTATIVE.—MR. WM. KEMP.

When we remember that the London and North-Western Railway runs right through the great industrial belt of England, from London to Liverpool, and penetrates by its connections into the heart of Yorkshire and the Welsh Principality, with at the same time joint powers with the Lancashire and Yorkshire in covering Lancashire, it will be seen how very great are the mutual interests of this trunk line and the showmen of England.

A conspicuous and ever-welcome figure on the fairgrounds of the country is the representative of the London and North-Western Company, the ubiquitous and courteous William Kemp.

For several years past Mr. Kemp has been the show business canvasser of this great railway company, and in that capacity he has handled the biggest shows and roundabout concerns on the road—notably, the huge roundabouts, shows, and fairground enterpises of Collins Bros., Green Bros., Studt Bros., Mitchell and Sons, Relph and Pedley, Monte Bros., Colonel Clarke, the Thurstons, Captain Payne, George Kempe, C. Farrell, Enoch Farrer, Wm. Holmes, John Whiting, and scores of others.

Mr. Kemp has made hosts of friends, and is universally esteemed in showland. He is a warm friend and supporter of the Showmen's Guild, and has been for many years past an hon. member and a liberal subscriber to its funds.

In the development of railway enterprise the fairground has been an important factor, and we have already dwelt upon the important relation of the fairs of England to the holidays of the people, and the growth of the pleasure resort and seaside traffic.

We venture to point out that the business of the fairground is also an important feeder for the great railway lines. Most of our large shows and roundabouts are especially constructed for railway transit, and it is no unusual thing for these large concerns to go right away by rail from one end of the country to the other.

It is no matter for surprise, therefore, that the railway companies have been quick to see the possibilities of this thriving industry, and that they send their agents and canvassers to all the fairs, not only within their own territory, but also wherever they have running powers.

We have therefore great pleasure in giving Mr. Kemp a place in the gallery of our fairground celebrities, and readily accord the great company he represents every good wish for their enterprise in developing this important side of their multiform business.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office.

Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns.

Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follows :—

MANCHESTER, LIVERPOOL, AND DISTRICT.
MR. ALAN W. YOUNG,
Empire Theatre, Liverpool.

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT.
MR. S. GETHING,
Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, AND DISTRICT.
MR. T. GERALD MORTON,
Empire Palace, Leeds.

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. HATTON WHARTON,
Empire Theatre, Nottingham.

SOUTH WALES DISTRICT.
MR. W. LEA,
Empire Theatre, Cardiff.

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

FRENCH MINE DISASTER.

A splendid Film, ready almost immediately, showing the survivors and other incidents of this awful catastrophe. About 300ft. Write early.

AMERICAN CONVICTS' ESCAPE FROM PRISON.
A thrilling subject, interesting and exciting from start to finish. Planning the escape. The doomed warder. The first convict succeeds in escaping from his cell, and hurriedly releases all the others in his division. They flee through a window. Alarm sounded by the dying warder. A hot chase then ensues, the convicts making desperate efforts to get away, rushing through fields, over rocks, and through woods, pluckily followed very closely by the warders. The ambush. Murder of another warder. Two of the convicts are now armed with weapons taken from their dead pursuers. The picnic-party. The convicts threaten with death the person disclosing their whereabouts, and afterwards they again take up their desperate race on bicycles they discover in the wood. The warders are at fault for a moment, but again take up the chase on a passing motor-car. The convict party, now reduced to three, abandon the cycles, and, doubling back over the country, reaches the home of one of their number. The siege—a warm time. Both besieged and besiegers take big risks, and two of the remaining convicts are killed. The sole survivor is making a last stand when a bullet enters the window and mortally wounds his little daughter. The warders now rush the place, and drag him from the side of his dying child back to the dreary cell from which he made such bold efforts to escape. About 508ft. The Subject, £12 14s. 0d.

LIVING FLOWERS.
A splendid array of choicest blooms transformed into brilliant scenes, with living figures. Magnificently coloured throughout. About 345ft.
The Subject, £8 12s. 6d.
Colouring extra, nett, £4 6s. 3d.

SPONTANEOUS GENERATION.
The childless young couple. Visit to the man of mystery. A son and daughter arrive to order. In a large bowl a mixture is made of a nurse's uniform, which after a vigorous stirring is transformed into a nurse, very much alive. The nurse takes the children, and the happy family depart with great joy. About 164ft.
The Subject, £4 2s. 0d.

A CARNIVAL NIGHT.
A lady is ready to depart for the carnival. Her husband objects, but is persuaded to go by some friends. Pretty scenes in the streets. Confetti throwing. Arrival at the ball. The wife's lover. A stolen kiss. Caught by the husband. The quarrel and duel. The husband disarmed. The second onslaught. The husband is just about to be run through when his wife rushes between the duellists and receives the weapon in her own body. The callous lover walks away without troubling to see what he has done, while the husband is overcome at the thought of his wife's injuries. About 278ft. The Subject, £6 19s. 0d.

SCHOOLBOY PRANKS.
A really good film of schoolboy life. The cautious housekeeper. The spoilt dinner. The mystery of the silent bell. The cause discovered. The culprit is chased by the porter through the streets, followed by a crowd of bare-footed boys in their nightshirts. The porter and the policeman. Rough usage. About 260ft.
The Subject, £6 10s. 0d.

MOST IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

We have just completed, and will publish on Monday Next, April 9th, a new series of pictures on New Testament History, entitled Gospel Stories.

Christ Among Men.

Dealing with the most sacred subject of our Saviour's work on earth.

Space will not permit our giving full details in these columns, and we will therefore but briefly summarise some important facts in connection with the picture.
It is NOT an ordinary PASSION PLAY interpreted in an "AMATEURISH" WAY.
It is R CK STEADY.
The PHOTOGRAPHIC TECHNIQUE IS SUPERB.
The PRINCIPALS ARE ALL ACTORS OF REPUTE, and the acting is worthy of the theme portrayed.
The Staging and Mounting are Magnificent.

Christ Among Men

is the Greatest Achievement in Cinematography. Every scene, every detail, is true to Scripture, the arrangements being in the hands of the most Prominent Living Authorities on Bible History; consequently there are no "jarring" notes and NO HIDEOUS ANACHRONISMS, so offensive to good taste, and so prominent in previously published so-called Passion Plays.

We have during the last three days shown the picture to a few prominent exhibitors, all of whom agree that it is the "FINEST FILM THEY HAVE EVER SEEN."

We need not enlarge upon its value at the present time, but we would emphasise that it is NOT A ONE-DAY PICTURE. It bids fair to become a CLASSIC, and will be famous throughout the world.

If you want the Film for Good Friday you must order immediately. But you must see it first.

Length, 2,150ft. Price 6d. per foot.

IMPORTANT.—20% DISCOUNT OFF LIST PRICES ON ALL OUR FILMS.

Special Booklet, beautifully illustrated, printed on art paper, is now in the Press.

No. 1014. CUPID AND THE WIDOW.

A young widow is turning over a number of old letters and lamenting her early widowhood when Cupid breaks in upon her sorrow, takes away her late husband's letters, and carries to her, from a private drawer, some other letters and a photograph. He chides her for continuing to lament the death of a man whom she married only for his money, and reminds her, by a vision, how her true lover had been thrown over for the wealthy suitor. The vision shows a pair of scales, with Cupid on one side and a pile of money on the other, and as the money is showered in by the rich man Cupid's side rises and the girl's choice falls upon her wealthy admirer. As the vision fades the true lover, still faithful to his early choice, enters the room, but the young widow orders him away. Cupid, however, runs and pulls him back, and pushes the girl towards him till she throws aside her mask of woe and welcomes the man she has always loved.

Length 150ft. Price, £3 18s. 0d.

No. 1009. THE PEASANT-GIRL'S REVENGE.

Along a lonely wind-swept country road in Eastern Russia three Cossacks are riding wearily, searching for some signs of human habitation where a meal may be obtained. Presently they spy a miserable little cottage some distance off the roadway, within which a frugal but sufficient meal is in progress. A peasant, his wife and daughter are sitting around the table eating food, and washing it down with a bottle of wine. Suddenly the tramp of horses in heard, and rushing to the door the peasant breathes the fatal word "Cossacks!" In a moment, fear and consternation put all happiness to flight, the peasant barricades the door, while his wife and daughter hide the remains of the food in a trap in the floor. Meanwhile the Cossacks, having in vain demanded admission, burst the door down and stride into the room demanding food. The peasant refuses to give it to them, and the officer runs him through with his sword and repeats his demands to the horrified wife. Maddened at the brutal murder of her husband, the peasant woman proudly refuses the food until they seize her daughter and threaten to flog her to death. Then she yields, and points to the hole in the ground where the food is hidden. When the Cossacks settle to their meal they find that the wine flagon is empty and they demand its replenishment. This is the peasant woman's opportunity to avenge the death of her husband. She fetches a new bottle and drops a terrible poison into it and carries it back to the intruders, but the officer refuses to drink until the woman has herself taken a cupful. Thirsting for revenge she is ready to take even this step to ensure that the murderers shall drink also, but they have thought of a better plan and they insist instead that the child shall drink the wine as a proof that it is "undoctored." Just at this moment the sentry outside calls the Cossacks' attention, and while their backs are turned the mother flings the poisoned wine out of the cup and presses the empty vessel to her daughter's lips. The Cossacks returning, are satisfied at last that the wine is safe, and all but the officer drink the poisoned liquid. Quickly the poison does its work, and two of the men are seized with their death agonies. Then the officer rises in wrath to slay the mother and child, but the little girl has seized a dagger from one of the men, and she deftly plunges it into the villain's back just in time to save her mother's life.

SCENE I. (Tinted Gas Light).—Frank Colbern, a widower, playing his last hand at poker. Luck dead out. Friends depart. Pretty, fair-haired Connie, his only child, comes down in her nightdress, asking daddy to come to bed. Colbern falls asleep, dreams, and falls into——

SCENE II. (Tinted Night Color).—Where he is found lying in the road. He is robbed by two masked men. A policeman appearing is shot by the thieves, who leave the smoking revolver in the senseless hands of Colbern. He is arrested.

SCENE III. (Daylight.)—Colbern still on the floor writhing in his horrible nightmare. Connie creeps down once more seeking daddy. He awakes, and finding his child by his side, realises it is nothing but a terrible dream. Reform is vowed. The cards are scattered right and left. The cursed drink is flung from him, and he lifts his child in his arms, with the tender ress of a father, and carries her from the room.

A NEW DEPARTURE—

WAL PINK'S WORKMEN
— IN —
REPAIRS.
A brilliant example of "how NOT to do it."

Music by TOM KENT.

The scene—which represents Muddleton Villa in the hands of the well-known decorators, Messrs. Spoiler and Messitt—has been specially built by T. Wood and painted by Syd Cook.

REPAIRS
Was produced at the Hippodrome, Southampton, March 19th. The Southampton Observer, March 24th, said:—

"THE BEST THING OF ITS KIND
Seen at this hall is the extravaganza given by
entitled
REPAIRS,
A brilliant example of 'how not to do it.'

The special scenery represents the interior of Muddleton Villa in the hands of those eminent house decorators, Spoiler and Messitt, and their operations,

BRIMFUL OF AMAZING LUDICRITIES
And side-splitting absurdities, culminating in pandemonium, cause the hall to ROCK WITH INCESSANT LAUGHTER."

That is what the PRESS said.

This is what the MANAGEMENT did. They immediately exercised their option to play the act through the whole of their circuit—Boscombe, Belfast, Manchester, Wolverhampton, Liverpool, Portsmouth, &c.

This is what the PUBLIC did. They flooded to see it in droves—and the hall rocked with "incessant laughter"—vide Observer.

REPAIRS
Is topping the bill at the
DUCHESS, BALHAM,
Playing to splendid business, and is, as a natural sequence, booked by Mr. Walter Gibbons for all his establishments.

It was seen on April 5th by Mr. Oswald Stoll's representative—Result, it opens Monday next, April 9th (4 days later) at ZOO HIPPODROME, GLASGOW.
Booked on top of the company already engaged.

Like the poor little mouse, those who see it, Jump at it.

The average British workmen are artful. Wal Pink's workmen are artistes.

The average British workmen in executing repairs put the windows in. Wal Pink's workmen put them out.

The average British workmen can whiten a ceiling without bringing it all down. Wal Pink's workmen can't—and won't.

Some British workmen draw big barrows. Wal Pink's workmen draw big audiences.

Some British workmen paper houses. With Wal Pink's workmen on the bill, there is no need to "paper" the house—It fills with money.

Some British workmen smoke pipes. Wal Pink's workmen burst them—and flood the stage and scenery—But we carry our own stage and scenery.

REPAIRS
Is not a dumb show—It is an acrobatic, knockabout, dancing interlude, plentifully besprinkled with funny dialogue and odd quips and cranks. Moreover,

It hath no plot,
It is NOT a stage play.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER, BY ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B.
Mr. A. A. Strong has published a book on "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer," which should be in the hands of everyone who is obliged to know about this perplexing subject. Dramatic copyright in England is in a particularly unsatisfactory state, and it is much to be hoped that ere long some more rational method of securing protection for a play may be devised than the slovenly and sometimes costly "production for copyright purposes," which is at present required.—St. James's Gazette.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1906.
"The Era" Annual (1s.) is, of course, issued by our premier theatrical journal, which, under the literary supervision of Mr. T. P. O'Connor, has recently improved an already strong position. The Annual is better than ever, and includes, besides details of all plays produced in London, the provinces, Paris, and Berlin, lists of all theatres and music halls in the United Kingdom, &c., many stories and sketches by and portraits of actors and actresses. It is a remarkable shillingsworth; useful and interesting to all playgoers and members of the profession alike.—Sunday Sun, Jan. 21, '06.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1906.
"The Era" Annual for 1906, 1s. 5, Tavistock-street, W.C. This useful little work, which brings nearly up to date the calendar of dramatic events which is so excellent a feature, is, as usual, full of stories over the signature of prominent stage lights. To those interested in the business of the theatre the work has become a necessity by reason of its valuable record of the progress of the drama.—Financial Times, Jan. 22, '06.

"THE LADY IN RED," Miniature Comedy
by Frank Dix.
Mr. TOM CRAVEN as WILLIAM.
MR. STEPHEN ADESON as JOHNSON.

Unexpectedly Vacant,
April 9, April 23.

The Daily Chronicle, in its Lyceum Theatre, London, notice, says of "The Lady in Red":—Far above the average music-hall sketch.
The Bristol Mirror says:—There are many things which commend the sketch to an audience. There is an entire lack of vulgarity and suggestiveness. There is no element of shouting or knock-about business, and there is no attempt to get a laugh with the aid of a "chestnut"; in fact, there is a delightful freshness and originality about the whole piece.
Lloyd's, Lyceum, London, notice says:—"The Lady in Red" is just the bright kind of little piece that has always appealed to us so sympathetically in the long war waged by the sketch for a place on the variety stage. It is all fun, a perfect study in the expression of comic terror.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1906.
The thirty-ninth issue of "The Era" Annual has just appeared, and once more it supplies a useful record of the theatrical year. An editorial note reminds us that among the contributors to the first number, that of 1868, were E. L. Blanchard (its editor), Charles Mathews, T. W. Robertson, Andrew Halliday, H. J. Byron, Watts Phillips, and Dion Boucicault—a brilliant band indeed. The contributors to the present issue are almost exclusively actors rather than literary men, but upon the whole they make a very fair show; while the lists of plays produced in London and the provinces, and in Paris and Berlin during the twelve months under review are distinctly useful. There are a number of photographs including an exceedingly fine one of the late Sir Henry Irving.—Pall Mall Gazette, Jan. 22.

The besetting weakness of the play adapted from a novel is too much talk and too little action; and the dramatisation by Messrs. Freeman Wills and Frederick Langbridge of Mr. Stanley Weyman's story exhibits this serious fault, more particularly in the earlier part of the drama. The Court intrigues which lead to the massacre of St. Bartholomew no doubt form an interesting portion of Mr. Weyman's historical tale, but the vacillating King of France and the gambling Duc de Rochefoucauld have so little to do with the plot of the piece that their presence is superfluous, and only delays the action. In the relations of the Count Hannibal de Tavannes to Clotilde de Vrillac, the heroine of the play, there is a suggestion of the story of The Taming of the Shrew, only the lady is not by any means a shrew. But recently arrived in Paris from her country home, the Castle of Vrillac, she attracts the notice of Count Hannibal de Tavannes, a nobleman who stands high in the King's favour. The country girl repels his advances, being already betrothed to M. de Tignonville, a young man of her own age, who finds the French Court far more attractive than his sweetheart does. It is but natural that he and the Count should quarrel, and that the older man should call his youthful rival "a puppy." The young couple are Huguenots, and they are only saved from the fury of the mob by the intervention of the all-powerful Count. The scene of the second act is a room in Clotilde's house in Paris; and hither have come, under the protection of de Tavannes, the young girl and her lover. Through the open window we catch glimpses of the howling mob who have converted the streets of Paris into a pandemonium, and even now are seeking more victims to be sacrificed to their lust for blood. The Count announces that he will save the lives of all in the house on one condition: that Clotilde consents to become his wife. Otherwise they will be left to be dealt with by the murderous mob whose fierce cries are ringing in their ears. After considerable hesitation Clotilde consents, but gives her future husband to understand that she still loves de Tignonville, whom the Count finds little difficulty in defeating when they engage in a duel with swords. The marriage ceremony is duly performed by a Huguenot minister; and the act concludes with a strong scene between the newly-wedded couple, the Count bringing matters to a climax by striking his wife with his glove, exclaiming, "I will be your lover or your master—it is either a kiss or a blow, and by this token, madam, I would have you remember it." By command of the King, de Tavannes sets out for Angers, where the massacre of St. Bartholomew is to be repeated. To show his confidence in Clotilde he entrusts her with the Royal commission, and she proves true to the trust reposed in her, refusing to give the document up to the Huguenot minister by whom the marriage service was solemnised. She also declines to be a party to the slaying of her husband by de Tignonville, and that young gentleman resolves to bring about the death of his hated rival in another way. De Tavannes tears up the King's commission, declaring to carry out what he terms "butcher's work," and as he has also placed himself in a position of danger through striking Father Pezeley, a fanatic monk, he resolves to make for the Castle of Vrillac, his wife's home. But de Tignonville, having learnt of this intention, places himself at the head of a body of men and attacks the Count and his few followers. Overpowered by numbers, de Tavannes is wounded, but with the help of two of his faithful retainers he reaches the castle. After a time Father Pezeley arrives with a message to the effect that de Tignonville has fallen into the hands of the Catholics, and will be hanged unless by sunset Count Hannibal gives himself up for execution in the young man's place. Believing that to win the love of his wife is a hopeless task, the Count expresses his intention of delivering himself up; but, falling asleep, he does not wake until past sunset. Information arrives that Father Pezeley's story of the capture of de Tignonville is a false one, and the play concludes with the confession of Clotilde that her husband has after all won her love and esteem.

Mr. Norman V. Norman throughout the piece bore himself gallantly as Count Hannibal, a rough wooer, but ever inspired by generous instincts. He was somewhat hampered by the responsibilities of a first production, but it was on the whole a thoroughly sound performance. Miss Beatrice Wilson played with natural feeling the part of the heroine, Clotilde de Vrillac, whose gradual change of attitude towards her husband was admirably shown. Mr. Dennis Cleugh acted with a considerable degree of vigour and spirit the rather unsatisfactory part of de Tignonville, whose conduct quickly deprives him of the sympathy of the audience. Mr. Francis Chamier forcibly embodied the fanatical Father Pezeley, and Mr. Francis Hope was impressive as the Count's devoted follower Carlat. Mr. Brember Wills presented a clever sketch of Charles IX., afterwards doing good work as the Huguenot minister, M. La Tribe. Mr. Alexandra Cassy was excellent as the Duc de Rochefoucauld, and able assistance was rendered by Mr. Hilton Vernon as the Abbé St. Lo, and Mr. Norman Leslie, who doubled the parts of M. de Montsereau and Bigot. Madame St. Lo and Madame Carlat were well embodied by Miss Sybil Ruskin and Miss Hilda Gregory, minor rôles being entrusted to Miss Betty Stannard, Miss Shiela Duff, Messrs. Sam Wilkinson, jun., Chris Curtis, Chas. C. Freer, and others. The massacring mob that were making the Paris gutters run red with blood were very realistically represented, so much so indeed that in the second act their clamour was rather embarrassing to the actors engaged in the scene. The staging and dresses were satisfactory, and the new play met with a good reception.

AT the Hippodrome, Scarborough, this week, a very excellent programme is submitted, the leading speciality being D'Arc's Fantoches and Liliputian Theatre. The De Breans give a good exhibition of Japanese conjuring, finishing with the "mysterious head" and comic sciographs, which are cleverly done. Merton and Rydon are droll comedians. The animated pictures contribute very largely to an attractive programme.

PRESENTATION.—Miss Jessica Ford, the charming Virginia of The Swiss Express company, has presented Mrs. Renad with a handsome gold and topaz thistle as a souvenir of their tour through Scotland.

PROVINCIAL THEATRICALS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

ABERAVON.—Grand Theatre.—Sole Proprietor, Mr. D. Jones.—Mr. George Dance's Orchid company appeared here the first three nights of the week. The company includes Miss Maude Jay, Miss Constance Hamilton, Miss Hilda Vining (a very effective Caroline Vokins), and Miss Beck as the charming lady secretary. Mr. Colin Campbell as Meakin kept the house convulsed with laughter while he was on the stage; Mr. Ion Maxwell was good as the nonchalant nephew of Mr. Chesterton (Mr. R. Corray); and the sprightly dancing of Mr. Berwick, who represented Zaccary, was well appreciated. Miss Edith Isabelle's company appeared on Thursday in The Girl from the Halls, a musical comedy with plenty of dancing and varieties.

ABERDEEN.—Her Majesty's Theatre.—Managing-Director, Mr. Robert Arthur; Acting-Manager, Mr. H. C. Cavanah, C.A.—The charming comedy Dr. Wake's Patient is admirably presented this week by Mr. Louis Calvert's company. Miss Olive Terry plays the part of Lady Geranja with much sweetness, grace, and humour, and Duff Wynterden finds a delightful representative in Mr. Herbert Ross. Mr. Douglas Vigors is exceedingly effective as Dr. Wake; and another excellent character, that of Andrew Wake, the farmer, receives full justice at the hands of Mr. Alfred Wellesley. Miss Amy Fauchette is equally successful as Mrs. Wake; and other most capable portraitures are given by Mr. Arthur Willoughby and Miss Ina Pelly as Lord and Lady St. Olbyn, Mr. Cecil Yapp as the Bishop of Selby, Mr. H. P. Owen and Miss Lucy Beaumont as Mr. and Mrs. Murdoch, and Miss Beatrice Webb as Harriet Bronson.

Palace Theatre. — Lessees, Messrs. Rosen and Bliss; Manager, Mr. Walter Gilbert.—Miss Florrie Forde is most enthusiastically welcomed this week, and so popular is she that encores altogether out of reason are insisted on by her admirers. Miss Rossetti is equally talented and versatile as an instrumentalist; Mr. W. H. Downes, the Australian vocalist, is even more popular than on his previous visits; the Olive Trio are appreciated as comediennes and dancers; Johnny Alexander and company appear in an amusing sketch The Troubles of a Tourist; and among the other artists who make a successful appearance are Nelson and Thomas, Mr. Frank Boyce, Miss Jeannie Evans, Miss Laura Wyllie, and Mr. George Foyle. Mr. Gilbert, the universally popular and respected manager, took his annual benefit on Wednesday. The house was crowded in every part. Among the chief of the many special attractions for the evening was a singing competition for girls, with Miss Florrie Forde as adjudicator.

ALDERSHOT.—Theatre Royal.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Clarence Sounes; Resident-Manager, Mr. Geo. E. Williams.—Messrs. H. Armitage and Arthur Leigh's company is giving a clever interpretation of East Lynne. Miss Julie Kennard, a talented actress, is an excellent Lady Isobel; Mr. Eric Mayne gives a powerful portrayal of Levison; Mr. Alfred Beaumont's is a capable impersonation of Carlyle; Miss Ethel Hardacre is capital as Cornelia; and Miss Violet Thorold is good as Barbara. Fun is introduced by Mr. A. Tate as Bullock; and Messrs. S. Goodwin, C. Grattan, G. Jervis, and C. Hayward, Misses A. Byron, Dorothy Townrow, and Ethel Rae do well in smaller parts.

ASHTON-UNDER-LYNE.—Theatre Royal.—Sole Owner and Manager, Mr. Chas. Revill; Acting-Manager, Mr. Armstrong Fairbairn. — Mr. Chas. Harrington is here this week with his company in the naval drama The Sailors of the King. In the part of Admiral Drake, a retired English naval hero, Mr. Harrington presents an impersonation of undoubted skill. Throughout he is the English gentleman, brave and true, the soul of honour and honesty. Dick, his son, a lieutenant in the Navy, finds in Mr. Harry Douglas a courageous and manly exponent; the rascally curate, Orrel Drake, is vindictive and cruel as personated by Mr. T. Vernon; Captain Concordine is the tender father of the erring daughter as portrayed by Mr. C. Trevlayne; Mr. Fred Owen makes up well as the stage Jew money-lender; and Mr. Kenneth Black, jun., relieves the tension by his humorous impersonation of a wooden-legged ship's steward. The ladies are deserving of special mention for able studies of female character. Miss Maud Digby has feminine traits of a reprehensible character to depict, which she does successfully; Miss Sylvia Stella makes a courageous heroine; Miss Gertrude Sterroll plays admirably as the betrayed girl; and Miss Hero Hathaway is the precise Quakeress to the life. The piece is well mounted.

The Empire Hippodrome.—Proprietors, Messrs. W. H. Broadhead and Sons; Manager, Mr. W. B. Broadhead; Acting-Manager, Mr. Percy B. Broadhead; Resident Acting-Manager, Mr. W. Leech.—The big item at the Hippodrome this week is the production of Mr. Bob King's famous Casey's Court, of which the dumb acting of Scottie is a feature. Mr. Bob King as Bridget Casey is rich in humour, and the collection of juvenile talent is the means of laughter. Ben Harris's Nippers are a good turn, the dancing of the boy and girl being much appreciated; Lily Gaston, male impersonator, is a talented dancer, and is loudly applauded; Bert Kemp is an expert cartoonist and impersonator; Grapho and Jackson give a sketch, The Café Riche, which is full of humour, and they are clever quick-change artists; Bert Weston is a capable comedian, with a good voice and smart style; the Three Clarions in an absurdity, The Would-be Tenor, are exceedingly funny, and add to the effect of their absurd antics by some very smart dancing; the Three Rolands are fine specimens of manhood, and give exhibitions of strength and skill which would be difficult to surpass; the Three Emonds, a lady and two gents, give a military burlesque entitled As You Were, which is very novel; the Three Clements do some clever trapeze work, one performer doing some of the most daring and finished somersaults and twirling feats seen in the town for many years; and the Bioscope Pictures conclude.

ATTERCLIFFE.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. F. Macnaghten; Resident-Manager, Mr. G. H. Beagle. — Messrs. Alfred Paumier and Walter Howard's excellent company occupies the boards here this week with the romantic drama, The Midnight Wedding. Mr. Alfred Paumier as Paul Valmar has many opportunities of showing his capabilities, of which he takes full advantage; Mr. Clinton Baddeley plays the part of Captain Rudolph Von Sarsbruck with all the force and finesse of a capable actor; Mr. Fred Constable gives a breezy yet dignified portrayal of Sergeant Max; Mr. Frederick W. Freeman is seen to advantage as the Crown Prince Leopold; Mr. Reginald Payne is good as Corporal Otto; Miss Annie Saker as Princess Astrea plays with charming grace and distinction; Miss Florence Hunt is good as Rozel; so also is Miss Prudence Lawrence as Marie. Valuable service is rendered by Mr. Sydney Lynn as Lieut. Eugene Von Streisburg, Mr. Arthur Radford as Sub-Lieut. Kulmann, and Mr. W. S. Hardy as Father Gerrard. Comedy is judiciously interspersed throughout the piece, and is well looked after by Mr. Algie Spalding as Private Bobo and Miss Ada Champion as Kathie.

Palace Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietor, Mr. T. Allan Edwardes; Acting-Manager, Mr. J. Lacy Lyne; Assistant-Manager, Mr. J. Gibbons.—This week's programme here is contributed to by Mr. W. L. Lee and company in a dramatic sketch, The Coward's Revenge; Phillips and Merritt, the whistling lady and dancing Bowery boy; Mr. Harry Luck, eccentric comedian; Miss Elsie Clare, soprano vocalist; Yorkshire Tom, animal mimic; the Four Rosaires, bar performers; the Sisters Lytton, duettists; and Mr. E. C. Clayton's pictures on the Attergraph.

BACUP.—New Court Theatre. — Lessee and Manager, Mr. Frank Denman-Wood; Acting-Manager, Mr. Richard Nightingale.—Edward Rainer's No. 1 vaudeville company of concert and variety artists is here this week in the detective episode, The Bank Robbery, and The Blinding Light. Miss Kitty Rhodes contributed some good songs; Mr. Preston Holmes's playing is greeted with applause; the Two Wiltons, duettists and dancers, meet with a good reception; Maynard and France are eminently successful in their dialogue A Perfect Lady; and other attractions on the bill are the Two Sages and Walter Payne's Biograph.

BARNSLEY.—Theatre Royal.—Manager, Mr. A. C. Mitchell.—Mr. Alfred B. Cross and company, in The Manxman, are here this week. Pete is impersonated with great skill by Mr. Cross, who plays a somewhat difficult and arduous part with much finish; Miss Minnie Watersford in the character of Kate Cregeen displays fine emotional power; Cæsar Cregreen has a clever exponent in Mr. David Phillips; Mr. Sydney C. Kearns is successful as Philip Christian; and Mr. George Marriott, jun., as Ross Christian, Miss Nancy Mitchell as Nancy, and Miss Mona Spearing as Miss Christian do ample justice to their respective parts.

BARROW-IN-FURNESS.—Royalty Theatre and Opera House.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. Hugh Robertson; Resident-Manager, Mr. George Stone. —Mr. Carlton Wallace's company, in The Love that Women Desire, is here. He distinguishes himself as Richard Abingdon, and Mr. J. O. Stewart plays with sterling dignity the part of Squire Abingdon; while Mr. David G. Noble is a spirited and admirable Philip Carnaby. Miss Lalla Stanhope is winning and graceful as Sybil Thornburn; and in the exacting part of Madge Abingdon Miss Alice N. Livesey is excellent. Much fun is created by Mr. J. W. Wilkinson as P.C. Sowerberry, Mr. John Hignett as Dennis O'Rourke, and Miss Maud Stuart as Rattie Swift.

Tivoli.—Sole Lessee and Manager, Signor Pepi; Stage-Manager, Mr. Tom Whiting.—The principal turn here this week is the Pichel troupe of acrobats. Mlle. Sylvia's singing tableaux vivants are enthusiastically received; Francis and Clown give a clever juggling act; Dave McNeil is successful in well-rendered songs; Rose Tilley has a good voice and pleasing style; and an excellent musical entertainment is given by Dixon.

BATH.—Palace Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. Frank Macnaghten; Manager, Mr. Chas. Schubert.—A varied programme this week includes a great novelty—the appearance of Smaun Sing Hpoo, the Burmah dwarf; Carlton continues to retain his firm position as the comedy card trickster par excellence; Ben Albert, the droll comedian, secures instant success; Francisco, juggler and equilibrist, does marvels in balancing swords and lighted lamps; Leah Kloet finds many admirers in her classical speciality, Les Poses; May Moodie's talents as a piccolo soloist are justly acclaimed; Hettie Lee, comedienne, with her trim figure and agile dancing, wins much favour; Adeline Yohle, soprano vocalist, is well received; and Raymond's Bio-Tableaux also deserves mention.

BATLEY.—Theatre Royal.—Proprietors, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Whitty.—The Two Hussars is an interesting and well-knit play, and Messrs. F. J. Webb and Wilson Benge have a company which give a sound rendering of it. Mr. Benge plays with considerable power and judgment; Mr. Webb is cool, calculating, and callous as Villiers; Mr. Louis Nanson is a particularly smart comedian, and an adept at dancing; Mr. G. Paradise is successful as the bluff, fiery Irish sergeant; and Mr. J. Stuart does good service. Miss Sadie Smith gives a neat, piquant study of Marie; Miss M. Danvers Smith is successful in a dual rôle; and Miss Lallah Price, as well as being in evidence in comedy work, is a particularly good dancer.

BEDFORD.—Royal County Theatre.—Lessee and Manager, Mr. E. Graham-Falcon; Acting-Manager, Mr. Walter R. Wilson.—This week the boards are occupied by Clyo and Rochelle's vaudeville company. Napier and Pattingson, American sketch artists, appear in their latest skit, Professor Muddlehead; Mr. Charles Danton's character-sketch songs are highly appreciated; and Miss Bessie Travis gives a unique ventriloquial turn. Mr. Frank Zara is a clever comedian. The humour of the programme is also well sustained by the Hulines (eccentric clowns), Charles Burwell, Bernhard, and Bath, and Katie Eplett (chic comedienne and dancer), Messrs. Clyo and Rochelle's comedy act Watch for the Kiss, and Tom Brentford's speciality The Human Band are both successful.

BELFAST.—Palace Theatre of Varieties.—Proprietors, Messrs. Warden, Ltd.; Managing-Director, Mr. Fred W. Warden; General-Manager, Mr. J. De Freece; Resident-Manager, Mr. Edwin Leslie.—Clark and Hamilton, who head the list here, have been most successful with their Japanese operetta; the Creo Brothers, smart comedy acrobats, take well; and a hit has been made by Ross and Lewis, musical comedy artists. Mr. V. L. Granville presents characters from famous plays with much realism and decided effect, and Bayne and Hope appear to advantage in their Napoleonic episode, An Emperor's Divorce. Also in the bill are Little Ray McLean, Miss Daisy Martell (comedienne and dancer), Mr. Will Johnson (comedian), the Two Dartos (Russian dancers), and the Palace pictures.

Empire Theatre of Varieties, Ltd.—General-Manager, Mr. Frank Allen; Acting-Manager, Mr. John A. Walker.—The chief attraction here this week is the production of an original musical comedy, Missing; or, the Light of Day, by the popular comedians Mr. Johnnie Schofield and Mr. J. C. Piddock and company, with every element of success. Terley, the Continental mimic, furnishes a decidedly novel turn; and the feats of head-and-hand balancing by the Rinaldos are simply marvellous. La Tostia's clever mandoline solos have been deservedly applauded, and Miss Florence Deighton's charming vocalism merits the applause bestowed nightly. Mr. Albert Whelan, Australian entertainer, who made a big hit on Monday; Mr. Fred Lincoln and Mr. Fred E. Terry (comedians), and the Howards complete the bill.

New Alhambra Theatre of Varieties.—General-Manager, Mr. Henry T. Downs.—Mr. Henry Carlton and company top the bill, and this clever comedian appears to the utmost advantage as Billy Shine in his latest sketch, The Window Cleaner. Lady Julia, "the ape with the human brain," is certainly a wonderful animal; and the Arundels (Will and Harry) create much laughter with their act, The New Office Boy. The mimicry of Mr. Harry Thurston is clever, and the Two Neros are undoubtedly smart tumblers. The new pictures exhibited by the Alhambra bioscope have proved a great draw; and also appearing are Miss Rosa Gilbert (comedienne), Mr. Will McIvor (comedian), and Onda and Leon (comedy bar performers).

BIRKENHEAD.—New Theatre Royal.—Lessee, Mr. W. W. Kelly; Acting-Manager, Mr. Charles Pell.—On Monday evening the Clifton Amateur Operatic Society commenced a series of six performances of Merrie England. These entertainments are an annual event, and are in aid of the Mersey Railway Staffs' Benevolent Fund.

Argyle Theatre of Varieties. — Manager, Mr. D. J. Clarke.—Derenda and Green, entertaining juggling comedians, are an attractive feature here, as also is Mr. Malcom Scott, the popular patter comedian, who is fulfilling a highly-successful return engagement. Prominent turns are also contributed by Mr. Larry Lewis, comedian; Collins and Hawley, dancing experts; Dusty Rhodes, comedian; the Two St. Johns, instrumentalists; Harry Coates, the singing navvy; Miss Mamie Iris, comedienne; Maynard Dakin, comedienne and dancer; and an excellent display by the bioscope.

BIRMINGHAM.—Theatre Royal.—Managing-Director, Mr. Tom B. Davis; Acting-Manager, Mr. Philip Rodway.—The Whirlwind, produced here last Monday by Mrs. Patrick Campbell, is described in another column.

Prince of Wales's Theatre. — Lessees, Messrs. Rodgers, Ltd.; Manager, Mr. J. F. Graham; Acting-Manager, Mr. Henry Johnston.—Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush, which made a powerful and withal a tender impression on its initial visit last year, has returned, to the manifest delight of all. Mr. William Mollinson repeats his superb performance of the dour Scot; Miss Evelyn McNay realises the sweet nature of the heroine; Mr. Durward Lely represents the Free Kirk Minister in a fine, manly fashion; Mr. A. Chappell acts fervently and naturally as the lover; and Mr. Kendal Chalmers as Tammas, Mr. Allen Thomas as the doctor, Mr. Alec F. Thompson as the "wee Posty," Miss Josephine Woodward as Margaret, Miss Alice Francis as Kate Carnegie, and others vouchsafe excellent studies. On Wednesday Mr. Lewis Waller appeared at a flying matinée, when his assumption of the brave and dashing Brigadier Gerard won the enthusiastic plaudits of a full house. Miss Evelyn Millard played the Comtesse with exquisite grace and charm.

Grand Theatre.—Proprietor, Mr. J. W. Turner; Manager, Mr. Victor Turner.—The J. W. On Monday our old friend, The Lady of Lyons, served to show of what material the company is composed, and a creditable ensemble was the result. Mr. Allan Wilkie proved himself well up in all the traditions of Claude Melnotte, looking the part well, acting with what may be described as vigorous restraint, and declaiming his lines with distinctness; Miss Ine Cameron is hardly endowed with the physical power to carry out her very intelligent intentions as Pauline; nevertheless, her picture of the proud beauty of Lyons was carefully limned. As Beauseant Mr. Clifford Rean was pronouncedly melodramatic; and Mr. J. Greig made a respectable Glavis. The good-hearted, outspoken Colonel Damas had a fine representative in Mr. George Lambton. Iden Payne did well as Touchstone; and Mr. Aubrey Mather, Mr. Gordon Phillott, Mr. P. Vavassour, and Mr. Sidney Fairbrother were all good in their respective parts. "THE MIRROR OF TIME."

An Episode, in One Act, by Cyril Wentworth Hogg,

Produced for the First Time on Any Stage at the Theatre Royal, Manchester, on Monday, April 9.

Terence Marsbrook ..... MR. FLORIAN RAYMOND
Mrs. Desborough ..... MISS DARBISHIRE

The scene of this little piece, which plays about fifteen minutes, is the boudoir adjoining Mrs. Desborough's dining-room, St. James's-street, London. The lady and Marsbrook, her admirer, are together, and the topic of conversation is the relationship between them and its probable issues. Mrs. Desborough is apparently a woman with a past, but Marsbrook does not mind this, and from the first is disposed to regard her with a refined and honourable sentiment. Discovering, however, that her character has been impugned by a third person in Marsbrook's presence (on which account he is averse from mentioning even her name to his mother, a rather saintly person), Mrs. Desborough resolves to clear herself in his eyes by telling him her story. This she does in a rather lengthy and narrative style, which somewhat stifles the dramatic interest of the situation; but her story of a wretched marriage, which seemed her only way of escape from the rigours of a Belgian convent, satisfies him that she has been a suffering and misunderstood woman, who must still suffer in the fact that her husband is alive. Marsbrook's confession of love in these circumstances is so extremely honourable that he proposes to take the lady to his mother's roof and wait patiently for his reward until her husband dies; and this satisfies Mrs. Desborough that his love for her is really what he has professed it to be. Thereupon she corrects her story by the addition of a very important confession, which is that her husband is not alive, her assertion to the contrary having been made as a test; and on this she yields herself to his outstretched arms, with an appeal that he should "deal with her tenderly." The general tone of the piece is bookish rather than dramatic, and the subtleties of the dialogue require to be sharpened and modified a little nearer to average requirements; but when this is done, and some condensation brought to bear upon the narrative portions, it ought to prove quite successful as a serious and sentimental little playlet. The characters were very well portrayed, Miss Darbishire giving the impression of a resourceful actress as Mrs. Desborough, and Mr. Florian Raymond depicting the restrained and honourable Marsbrook with skill and good taste.

AN ACTOR IN PORTUGAL.

Mr. Mark Kinghorne, who has been on a trip through Spain and Portugal, sends the following amusing account of an incident which occurred in Lisbon during his stay:—

A glorious Sunday in mid-Lent. Not a cloud in the rich blue sky. Lisbon is en fête. The women in thin mantillas; the men in capotes and sombreros. The children rushing about like so many animated rainbows. It is Sunday! But the shops and stores are open; and the wine lodges, restaurants, and lottery ticket sellers are doing a roaring trade. Everything is at fever heat. Everybody is excited. But—nobody is intoxicated! They have a saying here which I blush to record: "As drunk as an Englishman." What is the reason of all this gaiety? For the last ten days the walls have been placarded with enormous posters announcing that on Sunday the celebrated Matador, Senhor Machiquita would fight seven bulls specially trained and brought from Spain. Since then nothing has been talked, dreamed, or thought about but "Toros." The noisy "Murillo" children play "Toros" as ours play horses. Mass has been finished some hours. Lunch is over, and as four o'clock approaches everybody in Lisbon turns in the direction of the Campa. The Carris Ferro or electric—the mule cars—run on the same set of rails. Two, three, and four horse carriages; horse, mule, and donkey back. Everybody rides. Riding is so cheap. You can go the round of the city on the cars for something like 150 reis. Outside the Bull Ring are grouped the cognoscenti, eagerly awaiting the arrival of their favourite Matador. His reception makes that of the King and Royal Family fade into nothingness. The King regards his salvoes of applause as divine right. Machiquita, as a matter of course. What a sight! And what sounds! Tier upon tier of stone benches; gaudily decorated private boxes; on the sunny side and on the shady side. A magnificent band is playing various national melodies. The Royal party have settled down into their places—Senhor the President into his. Rockets and explosive bombs are going off in the air. A babel of badinage. Shrill cries and cat-calls. The huge gates are flung open. Two splendidly mounted and attired officials in the costume of the sixteenth century dash into the arena, and, after being brought up by flourish of trumpet before the Royal box, boldly avow their intention of killing the bull, or perishing in the attempt. This, of course, means that they will perform the feat by deputy—just as our Sheriffs engage Jack Ketch for hanging by proxy. At their exit, which is gladly welcomed (for their formal speeches have been long drawn out), a perfect thunder of applause ascends, as the Matadors, Chulos, Banderillos, and Picadores enter, salute the Royal box, salute the audience, salute the den where the bulls are caged; and, just when we begin to think they will never stop saluting, a strange thing happens. A tiny cloud, no bigger than a man's hand, sheds a few welcome drops of rain. The star of the day looks up at the sky, shrugs his shoulders, shakes his head, and disappears, followed by the crowd who came to fight the bull. A brief conference between the officials takes place, and it is announced that there will be no bull-fight. A dead, ominous hush for some seconds, and then—well, I tremble to think what would have happened had it been a Rugby match. As it was, the enormous audience refused to disperse. Hissing, hooting, and whistling—reminding one of a "Barrie" first night, and the author declining to acknowledge his imperative call. I remained with the rest to take some snap-shots. On looking at my exposure book I noticed the date. It was the "First of April"! I had never been so "spoofed" before. Travelling 1,500 miles to see a bull-fight, and — ! ! ! ! All's well that ends well. Silence was restored, and an official announcement was made to the effect that, "weather permitting," the fight would be held on Easter Sunday; or that the prices of admission would be refunded next day at the office in the "Rua" something or other. I may here briefly state that bull-fighting in Portugal is not the brutal, bloody sport (?) so beloved of the Spaniards. The bulls are never killed, but brought up time after time, while the horses are worth from three to five hundred guineas a-piece. Bred and trained to the business, they, as a rule, do not sustain as much injury as a pony at a polo match; while, if a man gets killed or injured, it is due to his own carelessness or rashness. And they are both careless and rash, I do assure you.

MR. BROMHEAD, the manager of Messrs. L. Gaumont and Co., the cinématographers, was in Naples a few days ago, and made the ascent of Mount Vesuvius. He had with him a cinématograph camera and obtained pictures of the volcano, which was then in violent eruption. Amongst the scenes photographed were streams of molten lava running down the mountain side, and a view looking into the crater, from which clouds of smoke, stone, and lava were belching forth with great fury. Immediately after the pictures were taken the eruption became so violent as to cause widespread damage, and the result has been the loss of several hundreds of lives, and great destruction of property. Many of the places photographed have now been wiped out of existence, and the edge of the crater on which Mr. Bromhead stood has now dropped 850ft.; that is to say, the top of the mountain has been practically blown off by the violent eruption. The picture is grand and awe-inspiring, and must be seen to be believed. It is now being offered by Messrs. L. Gaumont and Co., who must be congratulated upon their good fortune.

KING'S THEATRE, HAMMERSMITH.

On Monday, April 9, the Play, entitled
"EAST LYNNE."

The sentimentality of Mrs. Henry Wood's story, as displayed in the popular Heath-Wilson Barrett version of East Lynne will always have an attraction for the average playgoer, and although Passion week is not looked upon as profitable theatrically, yet it must be admitted that audiences have been up to expectation at this favourite house. Of all the dramatisations—and they are many—of "East Lynne" the "Bullock" version stands out as the one most interestingly told, and having the advantage of much "comic relief" in the shape of the quips of P.C. Bullock. For the present production Mr. J. B. Mulholland has, with infinite judgment, engaged for the rôle of Lady Isabel an actress of exceptional merit, Miss Gertrude Scott, whose intense and emotional acting has earned her vociferous applause. In the part of Archibald Carlyle, Mr. William Calvert has gained fresh laurels for a painstaking and very capable performance. Mr. Edward Sorley gives an accomplished rendering of the villainous and hypocritical Francis Levison. As Justice Hare, Mr. George Delaforce is excellent; and Mr. Herbert Young makes an adequate Richard Hare. Mr. Walter Russell is a dignified Lord Mountsevern, and he subsequently acts Lawyer Dill in a praiseworthy manner. P.C. Bullock is allotted to that favourite comedian, Mr. Lloyd Townrow, who plays the character for all it is worth, with the pleasing result that when he is on the stage, the audience is in roars of laughter—a fitting tribute to his powers. Miss Vera Kingsford renders Barbara Hare in approved fashion; and a very satisfactory Cornelia Carlyle is Miss Emma Averne. Miss Susie Nainby is a pleasant Joyce, and Miss Eveleen Hartford is good as Wilson. Miss L. Hartford acts with spirit as Suzanne, the French maid. The two children, Little Isabel and Willie, are satisfactorily played by Miss Minnie Ray and Miss Dolly Swift.

THE MARLBOROUGH.

On Monday, April 9, the Drama, by W. G. Wills, entitled
"A ROYAL DIVORCE."

The patrons of this theatre are enjoying the return visit of Miss Edith Cole and company in A Royal Divorce, under the management of Mr. W. W. Kelly, ably assisted by Mr. Walner Gregory. This historic play, originally produced at the New Olympic Theatre in 1891, is still popular with the play-going public, and to all appearances will attract crowds for years to come. Miss Edith Cole successfully repeats her fine impersonation of the Empress Josephine, which has lost not one whit of its engrossing quality. Mr. Frank Lister, who has also proved himself in the past such a capable and versatile exponent of the histrionic art, adds materially to his reputation by his interpretation of Napoleon, speaking his lines with such sound judgment that the proper effect is never missed. A favourable impression is also made by Miss Elizabeth Watson with her impersonation of Marie Louise, the part being one that admits of some brilliant acting; Miss Watson rises to each occasion. Miss Helena Meadows is suitably cast for the part of Mother Lomas; and the Misses Clara Earle and Irma Foldi are able exponents of the parts of Stephanie de Beauharnais and Blanche d'Hervas. The acting of Master Herbert Hollom as the little King of Rome is highly praiseworthy; and Miss Loyale Frere gives an excellent reading of the Gouvernante. Mr. Joynsen-Powell submits a very careful portrayal of Talleyrand; and an excellent interpretation of the Marquis de Beaumont is given by Mr. G. W. Cockburn. Very ably enacted are the parts of General Augereau and Marshal Murat by Messrs. George Howard and St. George-Frere. Dr. Corvisart has an able representative in Mr. Frederick Powell; and Mr. T. P. Haynes also successfully enacts the Genappes innkeeper. Mr. Percy H. Vernon finely sustains the part of Lord Keith, and the remaining small parts are all well played. "The Story of Waterloo" is splendidly presented, the scenery, appointments, and costumes being exceptionally good.

THE CAMDEN.

On Monday, April 9, the Military Play, entitled
"ONE OF THE BEST."

Despite the fact that this is the week before the holidays and theatrical business is at a low ebb, a large and enthusiastic audience was present at this theatre when Miss Elsie Roberts and company appeared in that favourite military drama One of the Best. It has been played here before; but the present company is as good as any we have seen, and the great scene in the play depicting the degradation of the falsely-accused Dudley Keppel was capitally acted and well staged. The drama has been produced and is under the direction of Mr. Frank Fenton, who is well known here, and he undertakes the rôle of Dudley Keppel, giving a very manly and soldierly portrayal of the character, and playing throughout with earnestness and in the most finished manner. Miss Elsie Roberts makes a charming Mary Penrose, her acting in the scene where her lover Keppel is stripped of his decorations being especially good. Philip Ellsworth, the villain of the piece, is carefully played by Mr. Escott Robson, who is careful not to overdo the part. Lieut.-General Coventry is played in a distinguished manner by Mr. Cyril Melton, while Mr. Edward S. Earle is particularly good as Sir Archibald McGregor. Mr. George Child acts the part of the old vicar, Dr. Penrose, in a quiet but effective manner. The humorous element is chiefly provided by Mr. Harry E. Ray, in the character of Private Jupp. Mr. Ray is a very amusing comedian, causing endless amusement, and yet always in the picture. Miss Dorrie Roberts, too, is bright and lively as Kitty Spencer, and she ably assists Mr. Ray in the various light comedy scenes. Miss Ethel Royale plays Esther Coventry in a dramatic manner, and Miss Ethel Serjient makes an acceptable Mrs. Spencer. Mr. Lionel West is good as the foreign spy M. de Crushy, and Jason Jupp, the old sexton, is amusingly presented by Mr. Bertram Yardi; while the various other minor characters are all creditably acted. The play is well mounted, and the two military bands are an attractive feature.

CRYSTAL PALACE THEATRE.

On Monday, April 9, the Play, in Four Acts, by C. Haddon Chambers, entitled
"THE IDLER."

Miss Elma Baring's company gave a most satisfactory rendering of this powerful play here this week. The interest and sympathy of the audience were enlisted from beginning to end. Mr. Percy Carlton earnestly portrayed the changing moods of Mark Cross, whose wrong-doing is more than atoned for by his self-sacrifice in the end, and Mr. David Sellar was natural, yet forcible, as Sir John Harding, M.P., whose early misdeeds form the raison d'être of the piece. As Simeon Strong, the American, Mr. James Martin was excellent, acting with skilfully reserved strength in the dramatic situations with which the play abounds. The General Merryweather of Mr. C. St. J. Wallace was most amusing, though never farcical, and he had the great advantage of looking the part to the life. Mr. Arthur Bond took the rôle of Bennett, Cross's man, and gave due point to his lines. Lady Harding is a difficult part, but Miss Elma Baring, who had a good reception, was quite equal to all its demands. Miss Ada Gordon as General Merryweather's daughter, Kate, was a pleasing influence, and much relieved the production by her infectious merriment. As Mrs. Cross Miss Gwendoline Williams was motherly and sympathetic, and Miss Tamela Hope sustained the part of Mrs. Glynn Stanmore, the widow who would willingly change her condition. Mr. J. Bannister Howard's Florodora company is announced for to-day and next week.

THE BRIXTON.

On Monday, April 9, the Farcical Comedy, in Three Acts, by Mrs. Musgrave, entitled "OUR FLAT."

Laughter on easy terms is to be obtained this week at the elegant Brixton Theatre, where large audiences have been kept in the throes of mirth throughout the evening. Our Flat, which began its successful career at the Opera Comique nearly a score of years ago, has since proved a source of amusement in all parts of the kingdom. It is done full justice to by Mr. Charles Steuart's company, Mr. Steuart himself assuming the rôle of the much-dunned Reginald Sylvester, whose embarrassments seem to set so lightly upon him. Mr. Steuart acts in admirable light comedy style and with a verve and bonhomie which intensifies the droll situations in which he is placed. A bright and ingenuous Margery is found in Miss Daisy Atherton, a daughter of the famous comedian, Mr. Willie Edouin, who created a principal part in the original production of the piece. Miss Atherton's exposition is varied by many touches of humour, and her animation and buoyancy add in no small measure to the pleasure afforded by the impersonation. Mr. Percy Foster gives an admirable embodiment of the impecunious young artist Clarence Vane, and his fiancée, Lucy, is made sweet and winsome in the hands of Miss Empsie Bowman, who combines with the vivacity of youth excellent attainments as an actress. A weirdly comic make-up and unbounded droll resource render Miss Pollie Emery's Bella irresistible. The humble "slavey" has been presented in many forms and in various disguises, but Miss Emery seems to get as near realism as could be conceived, and the result is heard in screams of merriment from all parts of the house. Mr. Wilfred E. Shine draws a broadly comic picture of the theatrical manager, Nathaniel Glover, his appearance and delivery being very striking; and Mr. Frank Emery, who acts in a more subdued style as Stout, the hall-porter, is no less effective. Another clever character impersonation is that supplied by Miss Mary Stuart of the stately Madame Volant, the pretended Parisienne, whose indignation at the non-payment of her bill leads her to forget her French accent and to express her feelings in the vernacular. Mr. J. B. Gordon assumes the stern parent with great effect as Mr. McCullum, speaking his lines remarkably well. Miss Nellie Bowman, as Clara Pryout, plays with restless energy, and is the mischievous romp to the life; and Mr. Fred Conyers as the Milkman and Mr. Kaye Brudell as a foreman furniture shifter complete a cast in which no flaw could be discovered. The piece of the evening was preceded by a comedietta in one act, by F. A. Besant Rice, played for the first time, entitled

"FORTY SHILLINGS."

Fabian Cassilis .....Mr. Percy Foster
Mabel Cassilis .....Miss Daisy Atherton
Geoffrey Fordham .....Mr. Fred. Conyers
Ingram .....Miss Empsie Bowman

A nice sense of humour is revealed in the little piece, not sufficiently strong, however, to atone for the lack of novelty in the story. The basis of the farce has done duty often before, and the argument at the end moreover is too subtle to be easily perceived. The young husband, who has a "night out" during his wife's temporary absence, is a familiar figure enough, and in this instance his name is Fabian Cassilis, who has gone "on the spree" with a bachelor friend. They are taken in charge for obstructing the police, and spend the night in a prison cell, eventually getting off under the assumed names of Smith and Brown with a fine of 40s. and 20s. respectively. Fabian is at considerable pains—more, indeed, than seems needful—to conceal his escapade from his wife, going so far as to buy up from the local newsagent all the copies of the morning paper containing the account of the case. All might be well but for the arrival of Fabian's boon companion, whose apologies open the young wife's eyes to her husband's duplicity. He pleads for forgiveness, but she constitutes herself a justice of the peace, and allows Brown, the bachelor, to plead the cause of Smith, the husband. Counsel argues that Smith is now non-existent, and eventually the defendant's wife relents, but reserves the right to re-convict should the said Smith ever be resuscitated. The favour with which the comedietta was received was mainly due to Mr. Percy Foster, whose embarrassment as the remorse-stricken Fabian was skilfully portrayed. Miss Daisy Atherton was graceful and intelligent as the young wife, Mr. Fred Conyers did well as the bachelor friend, and Miss Empsie Bowman was an engaging maid-servant.

GRAND, WOOLWICH.

On Monday, April 9,
the Drama, in Four Acts, by W. P. Sheen, entitled
"THE TEMPTRESS."

A good drama is always sure of a welcome at Woolwich, and it is therefore quite in accordance with precedent that the fortunes of The Temptress and her companions, as presented by Mr. W. H. Hallatt's powerful company, have been closely followed by keenly-interested audiences. In the title-rôle Miss Blanche Steele is provided with a strong part, to which she does full justice, rightly insisting on the utterly infamous character of this remarkable woman who is perfectly ready to commit murder or any other crime to gain her own unholy ends. Miss Mabel Scudamore submits a sympathetic and touching rendering of Marion Fordyce, and fully enlists the sympathies of the audience for the much-wronged but throughout high-spirited and sweet-tempered girl. Miss Florence Palmer contributes a pathetically convincing portrayal of Madge, Denbigh's mad wife. As Lucas Denbigh Mr. Frederick Ross gives a life-like rendering of this thorough-paced scoundrel, and soon earns recognition for his efforts in the shape of the heartiest disapproval of the "gods." Mr. W. H. Hallatt is very successful as Pedro Gonzales, and manages to avoid the exaggeration to which the part is particularly liable. Mr. George D. Daiper plays in manly, straightforward style as Philip Welford; Mr. Claude Ashworth is a dignified Sir Oswald; and Mr. Robert Wilton is good as Austin Dale. The low-comedy element in the play is well looked after, and the flirting and amusing "carryings-on" of Miss Lizie Chambers as Rhoda Brown, with the whimsicalities of Mr. Tom E. Sinclair as Bob Tanner, and the clever nonsense of Mr. Allen Carruthers as Francis Fitz-Fluke, keep the audience in continual good humour. The smaller parts are ably handled by a capable cast.

THE TERRISS.

On Monday April 9, a New Edition of Alexander Dumas'
"MONTE CRISTO."

Dumas' wonderful novel has long been one of the delights of our boyhood hours. At Terriss's this week we have an adequate adaptation of the immortal story. There is perhaps in the play rather less of comic relief than the good folks of Rotherhithe are accustomed to, but they follow the adventures of Edmond Dantès with the utmost excitement, and are deeply interested in his escape in a sack from the Château d'If, and in his subsequent vengeance upon his enemies. The talented stock company, as usual, gives an excellent rendering. Mr. Ashley Page, in the prologue, is the light-hearted, breezy sailor lad to the life, and in the drama he makes a most dignified figure as the calm, inexorable Monte Cristo, "the man with the dead heart," who hunts down his foes one by one and brings them to justice. Miss Marion Denvil gives a picturesque rendering of the peasant girl Mercedes, and afterwards plays with quiet impressiveness and grace as the silver-haired Countess de Morcerf. Mr. Edwin Williams is sympathetic as the youthful Albert de Morcerf; Mr. C. A. Chandler, usually cast for lighter rôles, shows his versatility by playing capitally as the vindictive Fernand Mondego. Mr. John Sargent gives a good study of unscrupulous ambition as M. Villefort; and Noirtier is well presented by Mr. S. Major Jones. Mr. Richard Norton is earnest and convincing as the scoundrel Danglars; Miss Mattie Everett makes the most of her small chances as Marie; Mr. Johnny Chippendale extracts all the fun possible out of the part of the bibulous innkeeper Caderousse, whose wife is effectively enacted by Miss Maggie Lindsay. Mr. E. J. Collins acts with much realism as the unhappy Abbé Faria. The scenery and effects are adequate, the Salon de Morcerf in the third act being very well realised.

THE SHAKESPEARE.

On Monday, April 9, the Drama, in Four Acts, by James Willard, entitled
"A WOMAN OF PLEASURE."

This interesting drama, presented here on Monday by Mr. Morice Prendergast's company, met with a cordial reception. The book is exceedingly well written, and the series of thrilling scenes holds the attention of the audience throughout. The acting all round is worthy of praise, and the scenery and general effects are all that can be desired. Mr. Jerrold Ord makes a dignified Lord Carlingforth, the sincerity of his acting provoking general applause. The part of the villainous Major Burrows is in the safe hands of Mr. Arthur Gilroy, who contributes a sterling performance; Mr. H. T. Wood gives a refined and manly impersonation of the Rev. Luke Goddard; Mr. Fred Norman's portrayal of the Boer Commandant Dench is eminently satisfactory; and Mr. Ern Carlton as Joe Plougham scores a decided hit, his clever presentation of the Devonshire yeoman evoking much merriment. Another notable performance is that of Mr. Deane Cliffe in the rôle of the American tourist Bobby Bumpwell. Mr. Fred Laws as the shady financier Michael Issilt, Mr. Sid Vincent as Captain Zoratoff, and Mr. Jack Bradbury as the butler Dawson are highly capable exponents of their respective parts. As the Countess of Carlingforth Miss Theo Henries is seen to great advantage, and Miss Grace Chesterfield is to be congratulated on her excellent performance in the part of Mrs. Josiah Bumpwell. Miss Dolly Gilroy, who makes a pleasing appearance as Dolly Dimple, acts with a charm and grace that are very refreshing; and little Violet Leal, a very young girl, plays the part of Lord Arthur Selwood with remarkable self-possession. Mr. Arthur Gilroy is general-manager, and Mr. Fred Norburn stage-manager, for Mr. Morice Prendergast.

THE STANDARD.

On Monday, April 9, the Operetta, in Four Acts, entitled
"BLIMELE."

By arrangement with Mr. W. Schaffer Mr. M. D. Waxman's Hebrew operatic and dramatic company is this week appearing at the Standard Theatre in a series of popular Yiddish plays. On Monday a highly satisfactory performance of Blimele was given, and great appreciation was exhibited by the audience present. Sound judgment has been shown in the staging of the play, and the mounting was everything that could be desired. Mr. M. D. Waxman proved his histrionic ability beyond all doubt in his impersonation of Doctor Daniel. His delineation was marked by great power and feeling, and was decidedly successful. As Zeligel Mr. M. Streng made full use of his talents, and was greatly appreciated. The King August of Mr. D. Raitz showed the result of careful study, and Mr. S. Bergman took advantage of every opportunity offered in the part of Papa Maxim. The rôle of Count Sablouowitz was capitally sustained by Mr. N. Isaacowitz, and great praise is due to Mr. Joseph Fineberg for his extremely powerful portrayal of Berele. Madame F Waxman played with pathos and feeling as Miriam, and Madame R. Waxman supplied a careful and natural picture of Blimele. The minor characters received adequate support from other members of the company, and substantial assistance was rendered by a capable troupe of singers and dancers. Other pieces in this week's bill are Gabriel, The Seider Night, The Broken Hearts, The Son of the Star, and The Rubinical Student.

THE ELEPHANT AND CASTLE.

On Monday, April 9, the Drama, in Four Acts, by Tom Taylor, entitled
"THE TICKET-OF-LEAVE MAN."

Mr. John M. East, the new manager at this theatre, is to be congratulated on his first production, The Ticket-of-Leave Man, Tom Taylor's famous drama. Mr. East has secured the services of a strong company, including Mr. Ernest Leicester, who on Monday night was accorded a very warm welcome on his return to this side of the river. As Robert Brierley he gives a thorough representation of the much-wronged Lancashire lad. Mr. Alfred Harding, well known here as an able exponent of villainy, is at his best as James Dalton, his many disguises being cleverly carried out. His partner in crime, Melter Moss, is excellently impersonated by Mr. Teddy Colman. In the important rôle of Hawkshaw, the detective, Mr. Horace Hunter, with his crisp delivery and impressive acting, fully realises the character. The audience is convulsed with laughter whenever Mr. Willie Garvey, as Green Jones, is on the stage, while as the adoring wife Emily St. Evremond Miss Jessica Black is very successful. Miss Kenneth Black is effective as Mr. Gibson, a bill broker; Mr. Harry Bristowe as Maltby and Mr. H. Gibbs as Brunton ably sustain their parts. As the incorrigible and cheeky Sam Willoughby Miss Agnes Paulton is an inimitable boy, and thoroughly identifies herself with the part. Mrs. Willoughby, his garrulous and much-worried mother, is cleverly depicted by Miss Mary Smith. As the heroine, May Edwards, Miss Lily Hammersley gives a pathetic rendering of the part, scoring heavily in her many dramatic scenes. The piece is carefully staged. Mr. J. Dobson continues here as the courteous acting-manager.

GRAND THEATRE, FULHAM.

On Monday, April 9, the Play, in Four Acts, by Walter Melville, entitled
"THE WORST WOMAN IN LONDON."

The play this week at the Fulham Theatre is that well-known Adelphi success The Worst Woman in London, played by a good all-round company organised by Mr. Tom H. Taylor. The members of the company put plenty of life into their work, and several of them display considerable dramatic power. The title-rôle is played by Miss Florence Dalton, who certainly came through the ordeal of a very exacting part with flying colours, and well earned the applause she received. Miss Florence Lovell displayed rich gifts of humour as Matilda Parker, and Miss Effie Bartlett was charming as Ruth Milford. Mr. Wallace Campbell played with great earnestness as Jack Felton, and Mr. Percy Dawsone was very amusing as Bob Goldfinch. The same may be said of Mr. H. W. Monte as Hugh Drayton. Mr. P. B. Lewers as Vincent Lyle was a persuasive villain, and Mr. Leonard Booker played powerfully as Philip Armstrong. The work of Mr. H. H. Barrington as James Milford was quietly effective; and amusing character-sketches were contributed by Mr. G. Thomas as a sweep and by Miss Katie Lawrence as a lady of the Jane Cakebread stamp. Mr. Walter Clarke as a detective and Mr. A. Rushen as a policeman on duty in Hyde Park filled minor parts most effectively. There were some good sets of scenery, notably those of the Marble Arch and a part of Rotten Row in Hyde Park.

CORONET THEATRE.

On Monday, April 9, the Farce, in Three Acts, from the German,
by Cosmo Hamilton, entitled
"THE MOUNTAIN CLIMBER."

Mr. Huntley Wright and company, in The Mountain Climber and The Little Father of the Wilderness, provide the attraction at the Coronet Theatre this week. The merry mixture concocted by Mr. Cosmo Hamilton from the German of Curt Kraakz, is very much to the taste of laughter-loving audiences, and the absurd antics of the make-believe mountain-climber Mr. Montague Sibsey, as enacted by Mr. Huntley Wright, keep the audience in one continuous roar of laughter. One almost feels sorry for the little man when his laboriously built-up edifice of deception totters, and is likely to fall to the ground, and quite a sense of relief comes over us when his reputation is saved in the eyes of his wife and daughters. The whole piece revolves around the intensely comic personality of Mr. Huntley Wright, who is admirably suited. Miss Kate Mills cleverly hits off the mock-heroic vein of bustling farce as the infatuated Mrs. Montague Sibsey, and Miss Dora Barton as the ingenuous Betty is very pretty and winsome; whilst Miss Christine McGill as the more strong-minded sister Alice plays commendably. As the budding medico, Dr. Charles Midgham, and as the real mountain-climbing enthusiast, Mr. Arthur Lydbrook, the girls' lovers, Mr. Montague Elphinstone and Mr. Eric Maturin are well in the picture. Mr. Algernon Newark as Oscar Rheinthaler, and Mr. Scott Craven as the sturdy Sepp of that ilk, the pair of Swiss guides who aid and abet Sibsey in his deception, do admirable service; and Miss Ivy Hertzog as the masculine-minded Lena is amusing and attractive. Mr. W. R. Staveley enters thoroughly into the fun of the piece as Samuel Midgham. Messrs. L. Victor, R. O. Rich, and Geo. Paulton, as the deputation, Miss Amy Thomas as the volatile maid-servant Mary, and Mr. J. Sebastian Smith as the journalist Watson-Frimley, all do good service. The pièce de résistance is preceded by The Little Father of the Wilderness, an episode in one act, by Lloyd Osbourne and Austin Strong, in which Mr. Huntley Wright gives us a taste of his quality, and comes out strong, in a pathetic part as Père Marlotte of the title-rôle, assisted by Mr. Eric Maturin as Louis XV., Miss McGill as Henrietta, and others.

PRINCE'S THEATRE, POPLAR.

On Monday, April 9,
The Drama, in Four Acts, by Charles Darrell and George Testo Sante, entitled
"THE LIFE OF A SHOWMAN."

The Life of a Showman is being presented in a capable manner this week to the delight of large audiences. Mr. Logan Darra imparts great earnestness and conviction to the part of Hendrick Marais. Miss Enid Trench's assumption of the distraught Lena is a fine piece of work, and the actress makes a decidedly good impression. Mr. Edward Warden contributes a carefully-conceived impersonation of the fighting parson, Cyril Arliss, meeting with due recognition. Mr. George Testo Santé appears as Brien Leader, a circus proprietor, and successfully undertakes various feats of strength. Mr. Charles Osborne gives good support as Stickers, whilst Mr. Frank Santé contributes an amusing portrayal of Tommy Allthere. Mr. Fred Vaughan portrays Chuckers in a skilful manner, and as Ben Tic Tac Mr. E. Turner is well placed. Miss Amy McNeill's clever performance as Agatha is much admired; Miss May Neilson appears successfully as Angelina, and Miss May Warden as Lynette. Other parts are capably undertaken. Mr. Sounes' fine orchestra, under Mr. Stephen E. Blythe's direction, contributes greatly to the pleasure of the performance.

COUNTY THEATRE, KINGSTON.

On Monday, the Drama, founded on Mrs. Henry Wood's Novel, entitled
"EAST LYNNE."

This old favourite, which has been produced several times at Kingston since the theatre was opened, found a sympathetic audience awaiting it when it was reproduced there on Monday evening, and the reception accorded to it showed that it has lost none of its old charm. Mr. Orlando Daly fills the part of Archibald Carlyle with acceptance, and an intelligent reading of that of Richard Hare is given by Mr. J. Edgar Stevenson. Miss Marion Lind, a lady with undoubted histrionic abilities, appears in the rôle of the unfortunate Lady Isabel, which she succeeds in investing with much pathos; Miss Molly Wynne appears as the chambermaid Suzanne, in which she scores a success; and valuable assistance is also rendered by Mr. Leslie Tyler as Lord Mountsevern, Mr. C. B. Vaughan as Francis Levison, Mr. C. R. Stone as Justice Hare, Mr. Bruce Lindley as the lawyer Dill; Miss Merrie Omar as Willie Carlyle, Miss Ida Phillips as Barbara Hare, Miss Blanche Stanley as Cornelia Carlyle, Miss Priddle as Joyce, and Miss Murray as Wilson. Mr. Davey, the managing-director, has secured a strong company in The Colleen Bawn for the holidays, a matinée of which will be given on Easter Monday.

THE PAVILION.

On Tuesday, April 10, the Historical Operetta, in Four Acts, by S. Feinmar, with Music by Fredzel, entitled
"THE VICEROY."

The feature at the Pavilion for a lengthened period is the special engagement of the Jewish Operatic and Dramatic Company, which will give all their performances in Yiddish. This company has spared no trouble or expense in obtaining the best artists possible from all parts of the Continent, and their stage-management is excellent, their dressing and mounting being also in the best of taste. Special mention must be made of the well-drilled and large chorus, which renders with admirable effect the music entrusted to its care, and also of the augmented orchestra under the capable direction of Mr. F. Staub. On Tuesday was given the historical operetta The Viceroy. The scene and action of this production are in Spain during the year 1528. Congratulations must be given to Mme. Zwiebel for her fine exposition of Miriam, and Miss Gespass was an able Alonzo. Mr. Shapira was well suited as Don Sebastian, and Mr. Goldsmid was undoubtedly successful as Don Antonio. Leonora stands out prominently by the splendid acting of Mme. Kayzer; while a convincing portrayal of the lover Angelo is given by Mr. Gusofsky. The Grand Inquisitor is emphasised impressively by Mr. Katz, and King Charles V. is capitally impersonated by Mr. Chizick. Mr. Shilling and Miss Bruch work hard as Pedrillo and Seraphina, and Mr. Landau does well as Fernando.

DALSTON THEATRE.

On Monday, April 9,
the Comedy,
"A PAIR OF SPECTACLES."

The comedy, by Sydney Grundy, entitled A Pair of Spectacles being one of those pieces which audiences do not mind seeing over and over again, the Dalston Theatre is nightly crowded with enthusiastic playgoers to witness certainly a most efficient rendering by an admirable company, of which Mr. David James is the head. Mr. James appears as Benjamin Goldfinch, and the way in which he represents the varying phases of the character is quite an interesting study. Mr. Groves Watson as Uncle Gregory gives a fine representation of what is known as a blunt provincial man. The character of Mrs. Goldfinch is one which affords many opportunities for quiet effect, and Miss Muriel Godfray-Turner does not miss any of them. A charming presence has much to do with her general success. Mr. Lionel Gadsden as Percy is a typical free-and-easy young man; Mr. Robert Minster makes a manly Dick; and Mr. Walter Machan is a homely Mr. Lorimer. The shoemaker, Bartholomew, finds a quaint representative in Mr. Charles R. Hann; and Mr. Clarence Pelham does well. Miss Edna Godfrey-Turner is fascinating as Lucy Lorimer; and Miss Marion Lewis is effective as Charlotte. The comedy is preceded by a romantic episode, entitled The Setting of the Sun, by Charles Hannan, the characters in which are represented by Mr. Charles R. Hann, Mr. Robert Minster, Miss Mabel Durrant, and Miss Helena Millais. Mr. M. Russell Rosse is responsible for the entire production.

THE CROWN, PECKHAM.

On Monday, April 9, the Play, founded on Mrs. Henry Wood's ever-popular Novel, entitled
"EAST LYNNE."

East Lynne is one of those evergreen dramatic favourites which never seem to go out of favour. At Peckham this week we have the adaptation of Mrs. Wood's famous novel known as "the Bullock version." Peckham audiences have laughed uproariously over the comicalities of the bucolic officer of the law Bullock, and have been beguiled of their tears by the misfortunes of the unhappy Lady Isabel, a part played with much tenderness and pathos by Miss Katharine Clarke. Miss Clarke invests the rôle with great emotional power, and had a very favourable reception. Mr. Albert Ward is a manly and handsome Archibald Carlyle, and quite gains the sympathy of the house. Mr. Harry Barford causes roars of laughter as the stolid Bullock; Mr. Alfred Hollis presents an artistic and amusing character-sketch as Lawyer Dill; and Mr. H. W. Brame is a duly dignified Lord Mountsevern. Mr. Frank Harding gives a clear-cut and striking portrait of the callous and cold-hearted villain Francis Levison, and evokes the execrations of the occupants of the cheaper portions of the house. Miss Julia Warden contributes to the fun of the piece as the old maid Cornelia Carlyle, and Miss Kitty Cardigan makes a pert French maid as Suzanne. Miss Cissy Farrell does all that is possible with the somewhat colourless rôle of Barbara Hare, Mr. Charles Langley is appropriately pompous as Justice Hare, whose unfortunate son Richard is well played by Mr. Fred Boustead. Miss Jessie Bayes is a pathetic little Willie, and Miss Dora Vere, Miss Milly Murray, and Miss Clarice Shirley complete a good all-round cast.

OPERA HOUSE, CROUCH END.

a Play, in Four Acts,
by R. C. Carton, entitled
"LIBERTY HALL."

Legitimate drama once more reigns supreme at the Crouch End Opera House, and in Liberty Hall Mr. Samuel James has chosen a fine play to present to his patrons. Miss Florence Creagh as Blanche Chilworth ably portrayed the proud and aristocratic daughter of the Chilworths, and her acting was beyond reproach. She showed marked ability in her performance. As Amy Chilworth Miss Sylvio Morris was winsome and dainty; she gained much favour by the sympathetic rendering of her part. Mr. C. F. Collings gave a masterly performance of Mr. Owen, the unknown cousin; his acting was characterised by great vigour and earnestness. Mr. Geo. Ellis as the Hon. Gerald Harringay could scarcely be bettered; as William Todman Mr. Maurice Drew presented an excellent picture of the kindly old uncle, who, though broken in fortune himself, offers a home to the penniless girls his nieces. Mr. F. Waller gave a very satisfactory impersonation of the blustering Briginshaw, the purse-proud linen draper and owner of the emporium; as Mr. Pedrick, the solicitor, Mr. H. May was excellent; Mr. R. Holden was well placed as Mr. Hickson; and Miss Enid Barwell gave an interesting sketch of a lisping old maid as Miss Hickson. Mr. Eric Vayne was good as Robert Binks, an amorous shop boy; and Miss May Seton was a veritable Gorgon as Crafer, the domestic, who rules the Todman ménage with a grip of iron. Mr. W. Harrison, as Luscombe, the footman, completed what was in all respects a satisfactory cast.

KENNINGTON THEATRE.

On Monday, April 9, the Play, by Hall Caine, entitled
"THE PRODIGAL SON."

Mr. Arthur Collins' company, travelling with the entire reproduction of The Prodigal Son, halted this week at Kennington, and the patrons of that handsome theatre took their opportunity and turned up in good round numbers. It is unnecessary to discourse on the quality of the play; that has already been proved at Drury-lane and elsewhere in the suburbs, but a word must be said for the excellent company. Mr. Henry Renouf as Magnus Stephensson submitted an excellent and powerful piece of work, as also did Mr. Norman Partreige as Oscar Stephensson, the prodigal; their father, Stephen Magnusson, Governor-General of Iceland, had an able exponent in Mr. Henry George, and Anna, his wife, was unobtrusively and charmingly undertaken by Miss Alma Murray. Mr. Frank Collins was natural and effective as Oscar Neilson, the factor; Helga Neilson was played in becoming manner by Miss Cecil Cromwell. Miss Lily Hall Caine as Thora was in a word charming, although perhaps a little wanting in emotion; while her impersonation of Elin, Thora's daughter, was highly successful. Miss Mima Renouf went straight to the point, and caused not a little amusement with the quaint sayings of Margret Neilson. Mr. Howard Russell made the most of Doctor Olsen, and Mr. Bryan Daly was characteristic as the manager of the Casino. Eric Arnasson was successfully entrusted to Mr. P. Gromer, and Miss Kathleen Kellie was bright and jolly as Gudrun. The Pastor was made the most of by Mr. Fred Grove, and the Sheriff of Mr. Phillips was decidedly good. Mr. Harpin deserves mention as Jon Vidalin. The piece was played to a good audience, and some entertaining music was provided.

The virtues of Pasta Mack, that wonderful preparation which exercises a softening influence on the hardest water and gives it a fragrant perfume, have long been celebrated. They are now applied to a new soap, brought out by the same firm, which gives to the bath the very refinement of luxury. Pasta Mack Soap is at once the most delightfully perfumed and the most hygienically perfect of high-class soaps. It satisfies the most refined and fastidious taste, and is so refreshing and comforting, whether used for the bath or toilet, that it will once and for all become a favourite with those who appreciate beautiful perfumes combined with hygienic excellence and soothing and refreshing qualities. This latest creation may be obtained of all perfumers and chemists at 10d. per tablet, or in dainty boxes of three tablets for 2s. 6d.

The Chancery-lane Safe Deposit Company have made special arrangements for the temporary custody of plate, jewellery, and other valuables during the Easter Holidays.

The management of the Hastings Gaiety Theatre arranged on Tuesday last a special matinée concert, given by Mme. Ella Russell and party, which was a complete success.

"EVERYMAN" AT THE GARRICK.

The representation of Everyman at the Garrick on Monday afternoon left us in doubt whether the old "morality" should be looked upon from the standpoint of a play, or as an exposition of the Catholic doctrines of Confession and Penance. To the ceremonial introduced some objection might be taken by sincerely religious persons, while others might recognise in the introduction of ritual a sincere, even a reverent desire, to give the production the right atmosphere. It is questionable whether the voice of an unseen priest and the ringing of a bell, implying the consecration of the "elements," which was followed by the administration to Everyman of the Sacraments of Communion and Extreme Unction, would not give offence to devout Catholics. The moral, too, given at the end of the action by the Doctor, should, we think, be recited by the actor without tracing any sign of blessing to the audience. Were the piece produced in a Roman Catholic place of worship, with the part of the Doctor taken by a priest, no religious susceptibilities would be shocked, either by the "consecration," the implied blessing, or the use of incense. About the reverential spirit of the representation there could, however, be no two opinions; and if we ourselves may entertain some doubts as to the taste of producing a religious play with "ritual" on a theatre stage, we must admit that our opinions were not shared by those seated in the stalls, many of whom were quite devout in their bearing. Miss Edith Wynne-Matthison no longer impersonates the title-rôle—a beautiful performance, that haunts the memory of those who witnessed the first revival of the old Morality; nor is Miss Tita Brand playing the part of Knowledge. The parts, however, do not suffer in the keeping of their present exponents. Indeed, the young lady who plays Everyman gives a rendering that is marked by sincerity and pathos; and the representative of Knowledge, though a little monotonous at times, possesses a beautiful voice, and is responsible for a most interesting exposition of the part. Good Deeds also has a representative who never fails to bring out the quaint beauty of the lines. Praise may also be given to the gentlemen playing the parts of Death, Goods, and Confession. During the representation on Monday the theatre was kept in darkness during the whole of the representation, and the auditorium was pervaded by a reverential hush.

In speaking of Everyman, Dr. Adolphus William Ward, in his "History of Dramatic Literature," tells us that its immediate sources are not ascertainable. Very probably the author may have taken the story of his Morality from the Legenda Aurea of Jacobus Voragine, who died in the year 1298, to which it was appended as a later addition in a brief form derived from the Speculum Historiale, a compilation of the thirteenth century by Vincentius of Beauvais. But there can be no doubt that the story itself is a parable narrated in the religious romance of Balaam and Jehoshaphat, which has been ascribed to the John of Damascus, who died in 780, but is now held to be more probably the work of his younger namesake, afterwards Patriarch of Antioch, who died in 1090. It has been supposed that the morality of Everyman, of which the first impression is traceable to about the year 1529, was written at a considerably earlier date; but Collier has not substantiated his conjecture that this date should be placed as far back as the reign of Edward IV. A Dutch poet, Peter van Diest (Petrus Diesthemius), soon after the appearance of Everyman, composed a version of the play in Dutch, which was performed before a civitatum brabanticarum conventus, probably to be interpreted as a representative meeting of the rederyk-chambers of these towns. This Dutch version again was reproduced in Latin, with what measure of fidelity we do not know, under the title of Homulus, by "Christian Ischyrius," who dates his preface, Mæstricht, 1536. This Latin version again became the basis of a German, and the latter was in its turn translated into Dutch. Without pursuing the history of the theme further, I merely note that the publisher of the Latin Homulus sought to add to its attraction by prefixing to it a series of scenes, taken in part from the contemporary Latin comedy of Hekastus by Macropedius, which was independently derived from the same sources as Everyman, and which was itself followed by a long series of reproductions and imitations in Germany.

The writer of an introduction to the carefully-printed edition of the play, published by A. H. Bullen, of 47, Great Russell-street, in considering the history of Everyman, says that we must take into account the parallel and contemporary Dutch play Elckerlijk (i.e., every man); for a comparison of the two leaves no doubt that either the one was translated from the other, or else both were derived from a common original. Three other plays of the same period bear a close resemblance to these two; firstly, a Latin play called Homulus, and, secondly, two translations therefrom, one into Low German and the other into Dutch. These, however, need not detain us long, though they are interesting in themselves. The Latin Homulus is undoubtedly a translation of Elckerlijk, and is the indirect original (through the Low German play) of the Dutch version.

We are thus left with Everyman and Elckerlijk, but the question of priority is difficult to answer. Internal evidence points strongly to the supposition that Everyman (with the exception of the prologue) was translated from Elckerlijk, and not vice versâ; because, in more than one passage, the English text is not easily intelligible without reference to the Dutch, and certain points are inexplicable, except upon the theory that Elckerlijk was the parent play. Had the Dutch play been derived from Everyman, why should the English prologue (ll. 1-21) have been omitted by the Dutch translator? It may be noticed that the rhythmic form of the prologue differs from that of the rest of the play.

Granting for the moment that Elckerlijk is the original, we may pursue an inquiry into its authorship. The Latin translation of 1536, mentioned above, has for its title Homullus Petri Diesthemii. This implies that a certain Peter, of the town of Diest, was either the translator, or the author, of Elckerlijk; but the translator has left his name, Christianus Ischyrius, upon his work, and we may therefore assume that Peter, of Diest, was the author of Elckerlijk. In treating of this question not long ago, Dr. Henri Logeman, of Ghent, put forward the credible theory that this Peter of Diest was Peter Dorland, a historian and theologian of a speculative and mystic turn of mind, who lived at Diest during the latter half of the fifteenth century. His acknowledged works (many of which are extant only in MS.) do not disqualify him from consideration as the possible author of Elckerlijk; and in a posthumous edition of one of his books his name is given as Petrus Diestensis, or Peter of Diest, which proves him to have been sufficiently well known to be recognised under that title. Moreover, as Ulrici pointed out, Everyman shows the hand of a priest in its construction, e.g., from the eulogy of the power of the Church; and if it is a translation from Elckerlijk, the theologian of Diest may very well have been the author of the Dutch play.

"YE PLAYHOUSE PLOT," a comedy, in one act, by Maude Thompson, was produced for copyright purposes at St. Leonards Pier on the 5th inst.

MR. ERNEST CH. GITTINS has been re-engaged by the directors of the Carl Rosa Opera Company for their 1906-7 seasons, this making his fourth consecutive season as acting-manager and secretary with the company.

"AN ABANDONED WOMAN."

A Drama, in Five Acts,

Eleanor Dean .....MRS. HARRY FOXWELL

The title of this drama, which was produced at the Palace Theatre, Newcastle-on-Tyne, on March 6, 1905, gives the experienced playgoer something more than an "inkling" of what he is to expect. He can make a pretty safe guess that the most important female character will be that of a woman who is lost to all sense of shame, and whose career is one black record of evil and crime. And his surmise will prove correct. Ninon Malvoisin, who gives the title to the play, is a "bad lot" indeed. In the first place she outrages the natural instincts of her sex by cruelly treating her own child; and, though the wife of Phillipe Malvoisin, the chief of a gang of French thieves, she does not hesitate to go through the marriage ceremony with Sir Marmaduke Seaton, a feeble old man, her sole object being to induce him to make a will in her favour. His son, Captain Herbert Seaton, has offended Sir Marmaduke, and the French adventuress achieves her purpose quite easily. When the Captain returns to Seaton Castle, bent upon introducing to his father his newly-wedded wife Eleanor, he recognises and denounces Ninon as an impostor, whereupon Phillipe Malvoisin, from his place of concealment, fires at and kills the old man. The villainous couple of course accuse Herbert Seaton of the murder of his father, and call in the police; but Paddy Boyle, a true-hearted Irishman, absolutely refuses to arrest the young man. The latter also has a staunch friend in Sammy Sharp, who was a street waif until he was fortunate enough to obtain a situation as page at the Castle. Herbert takes the lad's advice and resolves to make his way to Paris, his double purpose being to avoid arrest and to obtain if possible information concerning the antecedents of the Frenchman and woman who are his accusers. But as he has reason to fear being taken into custody as an escaped murderer he disguises himself as a tramp, and eventually succeeds in escaping to France. In the meantime Ninon, with the help of her accomplice, has abducted Eleanor's little girl Mona, who, however, having been conveyed by the Frenchwoman to a wharf opposite Greenwich Hospital, is rescued by Sammy Sharp, assisted by Robert Saunders, an artist, who is another of the victims of Ninon's treachery. The scene of the fourth act is the Café Noir, Paris. Here assemble, attired in fancy costume, the members of the Frenchman's gang. Writing under an assumed name, Ninon has invited Herbert Seaton to meet her at this spot, promising to impart to him certain valuable information. He falls into the trap, and suddenly finds himself in the power of Phillipe and the members of his murderous gang. The Frenchman, acting somewhat inconsistently, offers to give his prisoner one chance. He proposes to fight a duel with knives, promising his opponent that if he conquers he shall be granted his liberty, but giving secret instructions to his men to kill the Englishman. They fight, and after a prolonged and fierce struggle Phillipe receives a mortal wound; but it would go hard with Seaton but for the intervention of Paddy Boyle and Sammy Sharp, who, revolvers in hand, keep the ruffians at bay. In the last act there is the usual righting of the wrongs, and a happy future apparently awaits the hero and heroine.

The drama is very well acted all round, Mr. Harry Foxwell being specially prominent in the part of Paddy Boyle. With his flow of high spirits, his genial humour, and his loyalty to his friends, the Irishman soon becomes on the best of terms with his audience. Paddy is seldom serious, and has on hand a stock of jokes both new and old which tend to greatly enliven the play. Mr. Foxwell's sketch of the Irish constable is extremely clever and entertaining. Equally good in an entirely different type of character is Miss Doris Gilham as Ninon Malvoisin, her portrayal of the wicked woman being clearly marked by all those repellent features which quickly bring the shameless adventuress under the freely-expressed condemnation of gallery and pit. The broken English and the sneering, unfeeling manner are both admirably assumed. Mr. Wolston Foster is a handsome representative of the hero, and plays the part with spirit and earnestness. Mr. W. J. Butler as Phillipe Malvoisin is a villain of the sardonic type whose appearance is decidedly against him, being suggestive of a frock-coated Mephistopheles. Mrs. Harry Foxwell is an attractive and graceful heroine. Mr. Fred Park as Sammy Sharp, who turns out to be the son of Ninon, has a large share in the comedy scenes, in which he is associated with Miss Ruby Roma, a bright exponent of Sally Sloper, housemaid at the Castle, who later becomes the wife of Paddy Boyle. Mr. John Gormley as Robert Saunders gives in the third act a realistic representation of a man suffering from an attack of delirium tremens. Mr. Pat Quinn scores in the part of Sergeant Stubbles, another Irishman; and other minor parts are safely entrusted to Mr. Harrison Tate, Mr. Norman Norbury, Mr. Harrison Forbes, Miss Lily Addison, and little Frances Maddocks as the abducted child. The new play lacked nothing in the way of scenery and dresses.

THEATRICAL FINANCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ERA.

SIR,—Is it not time that somebody said something in favour of theatrical finance and its market possibilities? Why does everybody—many of whom ought to know better—argue on the black side, and frighten financiers who would otherwise be prepared to invest money in a commercial pursuit which, I maintain, is as stable, lucrative, solid, and firm as any other?

We are periodically informed of the insolvency of this or that "manager," and when the cat comes out of the bag the record invariably points to inexperience. It is argued that no ship can successfully undertake a passage minus a captain, but a captain, a pilot, a grocer, a butcher, a baker, or any other person, feels himself qualified to run a theatre or a tour without any elementary knowledge, and without engaging—even for a short term—a practical manager to teach him the business and put him on the right road.

Let the sceptical financier seek information from the representative theatrical managers, let them search the records of limited companies which have been alive for years past, and the fact will be established that the respective heads of affairs not only know their business, but have acquired that most necessary qualification of every responsible man, videlicit, the art of economy, or securing twenty shillings or more value for every sovereign disbursed.—Yours faithfully,

London, April 2, '05. OPTIMIST.

"THE ERA" can be obtained at the principal bookstalls throughout the provinces.

When Roger Dautran, the impressionable deputy in Mauricette, first meets with the young lady, all that he can do is to murmur, "aside" to his wife, the commonplace word, "Charming!" One is almost reduced to a similar extremity in dealing with the new musical play at the Vaudeville. The Belle of Mayfair belongs to the least objectionable and most delightful department of musical comedy. It does not aim at being raspingly ironic in dialogue or thrillingly dramatic in plot; but it is clean, bright, and pretty all through—just the kind of "show," indeed, to which ordinary people resort to look upon tasteful costumes, to listen to lively and agreeable airs, and to enjoy the "efforts" of favourite artists.

A pre-Raphaelite depiction of the piece in print would not do it justice. Its success at the Vaudeville will be created by its general, and not by its particular, virtues. The plot is charmingly naïf. There are two hostile fathers, Sir John Chaldicott, a new baronet who has made his money by the manufacture of a patent boot-protector, and the Earl of Mount Highgate, a haughty aristocrat. There are two loving children—that is to say, they love each other—Julia, Chaldicott's daughter, and Raymond Finchley, Lord Highgate's son. At first the parents object; finally, after further objections, they relent. That is all. But who asks for such a thing as a plot when, for the three hours' traffic of the stage, we are blandished and beatified by a succession of sweetmeats? The popularity of Miss Edna May, so inexplicable to cynics, can easily be accounted for, and speaks volumes in favour of the patrons of the Vaudeville. Miss May's appearance is angelic, and her style is calm and virginal. Young people who never heard of Blanche Amory in "Pendennis" adore Miss May à outrance. She has that invaluable stage asset, a distinct individuality. Even her method of singing is original; and the combination of a West End manner and an Eastern American accent is all that can be of bewitchery. To give the titles of Miss May's songs would not convey any of the effect produced by her triumphant rendering of them. It must be heard to be enjoyed. Mr. Sam Walsh is the ideal of up-to-date hauteur as the Earl of Mount Highgate, and his "Military Man" song, which he renders with great fun and spirit, is one of the most telling things in the score. Miss Camille Clifford is a fair and fashionable Duchess. Miss Louie Pounds, who plays the German Princess, an amicable and expressive artist whose sincere smile is irresistibly winning, has two neat lyrics, and delivers them like the clever artist that she is. Miss Pounds has a real sense of humour—that excellent thing in a comedienne!—and it comes out in her dainty treatment of her droll little ditty, "Said I to Myself," and in her smart soulignement of the satire in "The weeping willow wept." The willow, un-Jove-like, was deploring the "tara-diddles" of two lovers. Charming, charming! And who could be more "chippy"—we take the word from the programme—than Miss Ruby Ray as Lady Rosaline Rockesly? "Always agreeable and amusing, and ready for anything," as Disraeli wrote of the Three Graces in "Ixion." Charming, charming!" as Dautran says in Mauricette.

And the male artists in the cast are equally irreproachable. Mr. Arthur Williams is especially happy in the part of Sir John Chaldicott, which can give this consummate comedian very little trouble. His ease and repose create a conviction of reality in the spectator. The humour of the embodiment is unconscious, natural, and deliberate. The errors in pronunciation are not emphasised. The whole man, unconscious and uncaricatured, is before us. Could one require a more immaculate aristocrat than Mr. Farren Soutar makes as the Honourable Raymond Finchley? We fancied that, in the second act, his trousers were a quarter of an inch too short; but that may be a new fashion, the report of which has not yet reached us. Mr. Soutar is an artist and a comedian, and when he has to deliver outbursts of uncompromising sentiment he does it with just a suspicion of quaint slyness. He is active, energetic, and artistic; and he makes the most of the business with a dressmaker's dummy in the first act in connection with the song, "What makes the woman?" As for Mr. Courtice Pounds, he reminds us in this comedy that he is not only a sweet singer, but a capital elocutionist. He has a really well-written tirade—a comparison of marriage with a ride in a motor—which takes "a great deal of doing." Mr. Pounds does it splendidly, and he sings a gay bachelor song with a zest and airiness which are full of "the joy of living." Mr. Chas. Angelo, as a pinchbeck, foreign Count who is engaged by the Chaldicotts to pose as their daughter's fiancé in order to keep off young Highgate, is the acme of elaborate politeness and superficial gentility; and Mr. Charles Troode is every inch a sweet, suave, diplomatic Bishop. Miss Lillian Digges is as pert and piquant a soubrette as could be wished, and the two mothers, the Countess of Mount Highgate and Lady Chaldicott, are represented by Miss Irene Desmond and Miss Maud Boyd with just the necessary amount of "swelling port." Even the men-servants, Mr. W. Pringle, Mr. Norman Ridley, and Mr. C. A. Cameron, conduct their little quarrel scene in the first act with dramatic spirit and distinct delivery.

The music is a quite "charming" part of the production. It seems to have been, as Mickey Free used to say in "Charles O'Malley," "thrown off as aisy as a game at football." And it is this very spontaneousness, this absence of care and strain, which win one in Mr. Stuart's score. It lilts, it lifts and falls, it plays coquettishly with an idea, it enlivens, and it amuses—all in the same elegant, artless, irresponsible way. It is exactly the music to "go with" Jay's exquisitely tasteful dresses, with Mr. W. Harford's pretty sets, and the seductive strains of the excellent orchestra, so admirably conducted by Mr. Edward Jones. The Dautran verdict was effusively pronounced on The Belle of Mayfair by the "house" at the Vaudeville on Wednesday, and will certainly be repeated by many others, both in London and the provinces. It is indeed a bountiful and beauteous bouquet.

CONCERT ARTISTES AT DINNER.

The ladies and gentlemen who invariably embellish the festive board were themselves bidden to the banquet on Sunday, when the eighth annual dinner of the Concert Artistes' Benevolent Association took place in the Victoria Hall of the Criterion Restaurant, and was numerously attended. The Association, of which Mr. Arthur C. Roberts is secretary, has for the past ten years been doing excellent and unassuming work, the proceeds of periodical "at homes" and other entertainments being devoted entirely to the relief of the more necessitous members of their profession. Mr. Charles Bertram, the renowned conjurer, occupied the chair on Sunday, and, after loyal toasts had been honoured, called upon Mr. Tom Clair to propose that of "The Concert Artistes' Association."

MR. CLAIR said he was quite unprepared to give this toast, as it had been originally assigned to the president, while the speaker had been set down for that of "The Visitors." The only reason for the change he thought was that they had more visitors than professional members, and the president wished him to take the quantity and reserve to himself the quality. He expressed regret that members had not gathered round so numerously as they ought to have done, but he could only put it down to professional engagements. The Association had been in existence ten years, and during that time it had made a wonderful advance, being able to help many poorer brethren who had fallen by the way. When they came to consider that the professional life was often so short that for two years a man might be a star, but in the following year might have to hunt round for engagements, they would agree that the Concert Artistes' Association, in helping these men, was performing one of the greatest deeds that any benefit society could perform. The life of an artist was not in reality a bright one. After finishing his professional career he had nothing to depend upon. A business man at the end of his work still had a certain amount of profit arising from his establishment, which might go on flourishing; but an artist had only himself to rely upon. The Association was worthy of support because it could help them when they were unable to help themselves. The honorary members of the Association did a great deal for them, but they wanted professional members. He had read that there were no less than 6,000 concert artists in the City of London, and to them he appealed to join that great Association. Among the advantages to be gained by membership were those of the services of honorary physicians, honorary solicitors, and other benefits; while it was admitted that the artists who appeared at their "at-homes" found their professional status had increased. Unless they got greater support, they could not do much more for the professional members. He would like to see them get the same concessions in fares as the railway companies gave to the theatrical and music hall professions. If they had an increased membership, he felt certain they could go to the Clearing House and get similar benefits. He wished success and prosperity to the Concert Artistes' Association, and coupled with the toast the name of the president and one of the founders of the society, Mr. George Robins.

MR. ROBINS, who was received with cheers, said that the Association had often been alluded to as his pet child. The child had now grown up, and had become short-frocked or short-coated, whichever it might be. It could now run by itself, and he thought it had run very well. Mr. Robins referred to a lecture recently delivered at the Playgoers' Club, which advocated the abolition of the agent system, and a column was next morning devoted to the speech in the daily Press. It so got upon his nerves that he immediately had letters sent round to every agent, informing them that the Association had nothing whatever to do with any such object as that mentioned at the Playgoers' Club. Their great idea was to run with, and not contrary to, agents, whose power they all recognised. He was pleased to see at least two of them in that room that evening, and he took it as a compliment to the Association that they should be there. He thanked Mr. Clair from the bottom of his heart for proposing the toast, and the company generally for the manner in which it had been accepted.

THE CHAIRMAN proposed "The Visitors and the Press," coupling with it the names of Mr. Sparks, the president of the Playgoers' Club, and Mr. J. C. Griffiths, who responded very felicitously.

The toast of "The Ladies" fell to MR. WALTER WALTERS, who did it adequate justice, and it was acknowledged in becoming terms by Miss Ada Wheeler and by Mr. Wilson James.

MR. GEORGE ROBINS proposed the health of the chairman, than whom he said no one could preside in a more sympathetic spirit or more able manner. Mr. Robins wished to embody in his speech a vote of thanks to the committee. They had no place on that evening's programme, but their hard and unremitting work entitled them to the heartiest appreciation. He also included in his toast the name of Mrs. Bertram.

THE CHAIRMAN thanked them very much indeed for the way in which the toast of his health and that of his dear wife had been proposed and accepted. He had not had the opportunity of attending so many committee meetings as he should have liked, but he looked forward to appearing at them more frequently in the future.

A feature of the evening was the presentation of prizes, won under novel conditions at one of the "at homes" given periodically by the society, when awards were made to the artists who gave the best performance outside his or her own line of business. The prizes fell to Miss Alice Craven, a soprano vocalist, who selected "Mrs. Kelly" as a subject; to Mr. Alfred Thomas, a humorous entertainer, who gave a comic complexion to Tosti's "Good-bye"; to Mr. George Lakeman, who sang a comic lay pathetically; and to Mr. James Godden, a humorist, who sang a sentimental song.

A wide selection of talent was naturally at the disposal of Mr. H. Crozleigh, the musical director, and the programme for the evening was a varied and entertaining one, the accompaniments being shared by Mr. W. E. Manaton and Mr. Tom Clair. Encores were frequent, and began with Mr. Paul Mill, who sang "Mo!" and "Isn't it wonderful" in his drollest style; and Miss Ada Wheeler won a hearty encore for "The little lady said Amen!'" and responded with "She didn't know.' Mrs. Bertram, who was similarly honoured, supplemented a tasteful rendering of a ballad with "The black nurse's song to a black baby"; Mr. James Godden caused the utmost merriment with a well-rendered lyric which dealt with an assortment of pins, and, being heartily recalled, gave the popular song, "If love be kind," with rare comic emphasis. Miss Minnie Hentridge submitted a stirring ballad of "Men of Cambria"; and Mr. Harrison Brockbank, who was warmly welcomed, aroused enthusiasm by his rendering of "Love, could I only tell thee" and "Son of Mine." Mr. Tom Clair, who gave a clever "financial love ballad," added, on demand, a coon song of a sort quite apart from the ordinary; and others who contributed to the programme were Mr. A. Thorogood, Mr. Harry Briden, Mr. Lorne Wallett, Mr. Fred Wilden, who played solos on the one-stringed fiddle, and Mr. Sidney Buck, who gave an effective musical monologue.

MR. EDITOR,—Sir,—Owing to a mistake in the programme here, another lady is credited with playing Dandini in Mr. Clayton's Cinderella pantomime. The part is played by yours faithfully, MABEL BEAUFORT.—Theatre Royal, Gloucester. April 8, 1906.

THE DRAMA IN PARIS.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, THURSDAY, APRIL 12. — By way of a change we have not had any premières at our regular theatres, and the Cercle des Escoliers promptly took advantage of this to launch their annual novelties at the Théâtre des Bouffes. The proceedings opened with a small pantomime by M. Georges Briquet. Pierrot is starving, and for want of anything better serenades a lady, who throws down a rose and a purse. But instead of buying food Pierrot spends all the money in flowers, and when he knocks at the door to offer them to the lady nobody answers. Everybody is in bed, and the bouquet drops from poor Pierrot's hand.

THE next play, Les Ingénus, is by M. Marcel Gerbidon, and the scene is laid in a small village in the Landes. Suzanne Turpault is engaged to Adolphe Lodru. Two more innocent and unsophisticated beings cannot well be imagined. They have known each other since they were children, and Suzanne's uncle, Albert Turpault, a shrewd man of the world, notices, not without dismay, that the young people have not the remotest idea of what love means; and he trembles for the consequences of such a union. But the automobile, which has assisted already so many playwrights out of their difficulties, also comes here to the rescue. A motor-car comes to grief in the village, and the two persons inside are brought to Suzanne's father's house. They are the Marquis Hector de Montecherret and his mistress, Yvonne de Losange, whom the Marquis introduces as his wife. What we expect happens. The fiancé falls in love with Yvonne, and Suzanne loses her heart to Hector, without either the Marquis or his fair companion having any idea of the passions they have aroused. Then follows the terrible day when the two guests, having recovered from their accident, drive off in their car, leaving the engaged couple disconsolate. They cry first in secret, then in each other's arms, and, finally, leave off weeping, for they now know what love is, and have discovered that they madly love each other. These two clever acts were capitally interpreted by Mlle. Dora Gregg, Mlle. Eveline Janney, M. Acahard, and M. Henri Bauer.

ANASTASIE has departed this life, and nobody mourns her death. She was so grotesque and stupid that it was no longer considered good sport to play practical jokes on her; and the very name of Anastasie, bestowed upon that institution, proves that it was not held in respect by the Parisians. Why our Censor should ever have been christened like that is a mystery. The gentlemen supposed to look after our morals, but who never attended to their work, are possibly in the secret. During the last years, however, this institution had become the laughing-stock of the theatrical world, and our Fine Art Ministry did well to suppress it. The public themselves are the best judges in these matters, and the censorship should be left in their hands There are States in America where this principle has been adopted, and has been found to answer.

IT is a pity that our Fine Art Ministry cannot at the same time sweep away another institution more harmful than poor Anastasie—i.e., our Société des Auteurs, whose ideas of justice are of a very peculiar nature. You will remember that not so very long ago MM. Deval and Richemond were excommunicated because they dared to own two theatres. "There shall be no such thing as a trust," said the Authors' Society, "and as long as we are in existence we will never allow any man or woman to run more than one house at a time." Besides excommunicating the beforementioned managers, the Society also expelled M. Tristan Bernard for having produced a play at one of the tabooed theatres. To-day I see that the Society has renewed their treaty with M Ruez, despite the fact that this gentleman runs no less than three houses—the Folies-Bergère, Olympia, and Parisiana Personally I do not see any reason why M. Ruez should not own a dozen houses if he thinks fit to do so, but it is the extraordinary action of the Society that is causing much surprise. Possibly the Society starts from the principle that the same rules do not apply to theatres and to music-halls. If so, they are much mistaken, inasmuch as it has been proved that our music-halls employ many more artists than the playhouses.

M. GAILHARD, manager of our Opera, can be congratulated on the wise step he has taken in no longer allowing ballet-masters, chefs d'orchestre, chorus-masters, &c., to recruit pupils among those engaged at the Opera. The truth is that this practice had degenerated into a perfect scandal. In fact, it was nothing less than an organised system of blackmailing No girl in the ballet had the remotest chance of ever coming out in the smallest pas-seul unless she was well in with the authorities. And to be "well in" was an expensive affair, and under the name of "private lessons" cost a few thousand francs. M. Gailhard has introduced many healthy changes in the house, but none that has been received with so much joy by the staff than the suppression of this crying abuse.

AMONG the pieces to be produced on the celebration of the third centenary of Corneille's birth is La Mort de Pompée. The work was revived in 1809 and in 1860. The first Napoleon, who admired the play hugely, wanted the cast to be submitted to him, and he had no cause for complaint, for the names include those of Mlle. Georges, Mme. Raucourt, Talma, St. Prix. This time the principal rôles will be undertaken by Mme. Segond-Weber, Mlle. Delvair, M. Silvain, M. Paul Mounet, and M. Leitner.

THE Théâtre Royal, the little pill-box in the Rue Royale, will disappear to-day, because the building is to be pulled down. In September next the Théâtre Royal will reopen again, but on the Boulevards.

M. LAROCHELLE, the popular manager of the Porte-Saint-Martin, has become the husband of Mlle. Flore Mignet, the charming young actress who played the rôle of Jeanne Morin in Sous l'Epaulette.

"ABD-UL-AZIZ" is the title of a play by M. Georges Maldague, which plays in Turkey. One of the tableaux is said to be of a rather sensational nature, and is based on a dramatic incident that took place in a harem in Smyrna a few years ago.

DURING the Easter week most of our theatres are changing their programmes. Thus at Antoine's we will have L'Assomption de Hannele Mattern, and the Gaîté has gone back to Cyrano de Bergerac. The latter piece always attracts strangers and provincials, of which Paris is full during the holidays.

THE native choir from Jamaica, brought over by Sir Alfred L. Jones, K.C.M.G., after fulfilling numerous engagements in Liverpool and district with conspicuous success, left Liverpool on Thursday to commence their tour of the United Kingdom. The managers of the choir, Messrs. H. E. Jones and Albert Douglass, have made all the necessary arrangements, and the choir was to appear on Good Friday and following days at the Victoria Pavilion, Ilfracombe.

"THE ARMS OF APHRODITE," a play in one act, by Laurence Grant, was produced for copyright purposes at the St. James's Theatre, by kind permission of Mr. George Alexander, on the 6th inst.

MR. EDITOR,—Sir,—I should be much obliged if you would kindly mention that the Miss Violet Crossley in the Houghton theatrical fraud case, is not—Yours faithfully, VIOLET CROSSLEY. Wyndham's Theatre, April 10, 1906.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Mr. Beerbohm Tree is busily preparing for the production of Colonel Newcome, the new adaptation from Thackeray which he intends for early production at His Majesty's. In company with the adapter, Mr. Michael Morton, Mr. Tree on Wednesday paid a visit to Charterhouse-square, in order to get local colour from the last refuge of the amiable Colonel.

The farewell benefit to Miss Fanny Coleman to which we alluded in a recent issue has been postponed, and will not now take place till the autumn. Time, which is essential in all such projects, will thus be given for the organising of a performance worthy of an actress of such merit and popularity.

A letter signed by influential actors and managers has been sent to the Press calling attention to the fact that on April 28 next Miss Ellen Terry will have been fifty years upon the stage. "We believe," the letter goes on to say, "that there are very many thousands who will not willingly allow so interesting an occasion to pass without manifesting in a marked manner the true affection with which Miss Terry is regarded by them. We propose to invite all the readers of your paper to whom the name of Miss Ellen Terry brings happy memories of delightful evenings at the theatre to join in a national testimonial to her on her jubilee. Without making any impertinent intrusion upon Miss Terry's privacy, we may be permitted to say that it is our desire, if possible, to use the funds subscribed for the purpose of placing Miss Terry beyond any future anxiety regarding her comfort, as a tribute to her beloved personality and a homage to her art."

The letter contains the signatures, among others, of Messrs. George Alexander, H. Granville Barker, Arthur Bourchier, Arthur Chudleigh, Arthur Collins, E. Distin Maddick, J. Forbes Robertson, Chas. Frohman, Frederick Harrison, Carl Hentschel, Martin Harvey, William Hill, H. J. Loveday, Cyril Maude, Arthur W. Pinero, Otho Stuart, Fred Terry, H. Beerbohm Tree, J. E. Vedrenne, James Welch, Lewis Waller, Sir Charles Wyndham, and Stephen Coleridge, the hon. treasurer of the Shilling Fund, to whom subscriptions should be sent at 7, Egerton-mansions, S.W.

Mrs. Langtry, it is understood, has abandoned for the present her intention of producing a play in London, and contemplates a visit to Paris with her own company during the coming season. The popular actress is credited with the desire to present at a French theatre Shakespeare's comedy, As You Like It, with Mr. William Mollison as the melancholy Jaques—the part which he so successfully represented at the St. James's recently. The play will be given in English.

"Markheim," the one-act adaptation of Robert Louis Stevenson's short story, will be produced by Mr. H. B. Irving at the Lyric Theatre this afternoon. In the performance of the little piece Mr. Irving will be associated with Mr. Daniel McCarthy, Miss Eileen Munro, and Mr. Leslie Faber.

The actor is admitted to Royal functions and into the best society, but appears to be an outcast in London so far as the environs of St. James's Park are concerned. Last week an actor of some celebrity found a convenient suite of rooms in that locality, and asked for the agreement to be sent on to him for signature. Next morning the agreement arrived, and was found to contain a clause to the effect that members of the theatrical profession were not admissible as tenants to the flats. The reason alleged is that theatrical people have so many visitors on Sunday, and that necessarily their habits are late.

Miss Gertie Millar aired a real grievance in the Court of Chancery on the 6th inst., when counsel appeared on her behalf, and asked for an injunction to restrain Messrs. R. Dunn and Co. from publishing postcards on the back of which appeared photographs representing her in a nightdress, and in other different costumes none too abundant. As a matter of fact, she had never been taken in such costumes, and they amounted to a serious libel. He understood that the photographs complained of were produced in this way: The photograph of the head of the plaintiff was attached to the body of another person who had been taken in the various costumes depicted. It was admitted on behalf of the defendants that the photographs were produced as described, but that they were not libellous. Although the lady had not at present donned such garments, it was quite possible that in the course of her professional career she might have occasion to do so. Now that the attention of the defendants, who had acted perfectly innocently, had been drawn to the matter, they were willing to give an undertaking not to publish, &c., any of the photographs complained of until trial or further order. His Lordship, on that undertaking being given, said he would make no order on the motion.

Miss Edna May was the recipient of many beautiful bouquets on her reappearance in London on Wednesday night in The Belle of Mayfair at the Vaudeville. With becoming kindliness, she sent them all to the Children's Hospital in Great Ormond-street.

Mrs. Kendal, Miss Marie Hall, and Mr. George Grossmith will be among the artists to give their services at a concert in aid of Sunshine Home, Hurstpierpoint, to be held at Stafford House on May 3. H.R.H. Princess Christian has graciously promised her patronage.

Mr. Seymour Hicks has earned the approbation of the Tailor and Cutter, which is of opinion that, in his play, The Beauty of Bath, Mr. Hicks has succeeded in idealising evening dress. Mr. William Lugg, who takes the part of Viscount Bellingham, also comes in for eulogy. His dress coat, it is said, is the very latest West-end style, the bone buttons and velvet cuffs being an innovation and an improvement. With the white vest and whole-fall trousers, with gold seals hanging from the fob, his fine figure and splendid head of white hair (which is supplied by nature, not by Clarkson), Mr. Lugg makes an ideal picture of an English gentleman in an English gentleman's dress.

There are several other examples of evening dress—modern style—but decided novelties are to be noted in each, the watered silk lapels on the coats going better with the velvet collars than might be supposed, one reason for this being that the "watering" is specially designed to run with the shape of the revers. There are several interesting departures from the orthodox in the cut of the vests and the materials used for buttons; but all seem to be in harmony and good taste.

Miss Dorothy Edwardes, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Edwardes, is engaged to be married. The bridegroom-elect is Mr. Cuthbert Arthur Sherbrooke, third son of the Rev. Nevile Sherbrooke, of Clifton, Bristol, and the late Lady Lilias Sherbrooke.

Mr. Matthew Brodie is forty-two to-day, but looks no more than thirty. Last Saturday his eldest son, William, came out at the top of the fifth form at the Maidenhead College, taking two first prizes. He has also passed the Cambridge University (Local Junior) Examination with honours.

Miss Lena Ashwell, who embarks upon managerial enterprise on Thursday, will carry with her the best wishes of all in her new venture. She is looking forward with mingled feelings of anxiety and delight to the first performance of Miss Clo Graves's play, The Bond of Ninon, at the Savoy. "All the members of the company," she confided to an interviewer, "have worked so loyally together that they have made my position as manageress very easy and pleasant for me. So far, it has been a delightful experience, and we have all of us greatly enjoyed the rehearsals. When once that dreadful first night is over—you can't think how nervous I am on the first night—I feel as though I should have a good time as the manageress of such a beautiful theatre as the Savoy, to say nothing of taking the character of Ninon—as long, that is to say, as the audiences will encourage me to play both parts! I like the rôle immensely, and after having endured on the stage so many tragedies I simply revel in a comedy part. For the first time for some years I shall disport myself in beautiful clothes, and you will be relieved to hear that I do not commit murder this time. Neither do I burgle, nor become intoxicated as I did in Resurrection, nor seriously misbehave myself in any way as it has been my fate to do in many plays of late. In The Bond of Ninon the criminal side of my character, you see, remains for once undeveloped."

Miss Graves, the authoress, desires to contradict the rumour that The Bond of Ninon has been suggested or inspired by any other play, or by any character existing in any other play. "The idea of the story," said Miss Graves, "occurred to me when I happened to come across a quaint little brown volume of snuff-stained pages, 'Lettres de Ninon'—I can assure you there was a separate sneeze in every page—once the property of the Earl of Eglinton, of tournamnt fame, for his bookplate adorned the cover. Out of these letters I have built up the character of Ninon, and surrounded her with those famous folk with whom she must have come in contact in the middle of the seventeenth century. We have taken great pains to make the costumes historically correct, and I have ransacked the British Museum for old prints of the period. Most of the portraits, however, stopped short at the knees, and we were afraid that Mr. Crafter, who has designed the dresses for us, might have to evolve the boots and shoes out of his inner consciousness. Fortunately, we obtained later on other assistance in the way of book illustrations, which set our minds at rest on that point, and I think the costumes will be an interesting feature of the production."

London managers are interesting themselves in the formation of a matinée performance to celebrate Miss Ellen Terry's fiftieth year as an actress. An important London theatre, selected chiefly for its holding capacity, will be chosen for the performance, and it is suggested that it shall include a play in which all the principal parts will be sustained by members of the Terry family. Miss Terry, by the way, has gone into the country to rest, but will return to London to appear at the Court production on Monday.

Among the latest names appended to the list of the General Committee for the Ellen Terry Testimonial is that of Mr. E. S. Willard, touring in America. Other names freshly added are those of Captain Robert Marshall, Mr. Walter Stephens, and Mme. Melba. The fund is essentially a national one, and all classes of the community are responding liberally.

Mr. Leonard Rayne's London Dramatic Company was due to arrive in Cape Town on March 20. The company was to be considerably augmented on its arrival at Johannesburg, and was to open at the Opera House on April 4 with Hall Caine's latest Drury-lane success The Prodigal Son. Our Cape Town correspondent, writing last month, states that the following theatres were then closed in South Africa, owing to a lack of companies: Wheeler's Opera House, Pretoria; Empress Theatre, Pretoria; Vaudeville Theatre, Bloemfontein; Theatre Royal, Kimberley; Theatre Royal, Pietermaritzburg; Theatre Royal, Durban; Opera House, Port Elizabeth; Good Hope Theatre, Cape Town; Empire Theatre, Buluwayo; while the Tivoli Theatre of Varieties, Cape Town, was also closed for extensive alterations and improvements.

Easter is to be ushered in by one of the hottest days which the theatrical thermometer has ever had to record. No less than three productions of first importance will be seen this evening, when Dorothy o' the Hall will make her début at the New, the première of The Dairymaid will be accomplished at the Apollo, and Mr. Cyril Maude will revive The Second in Command at the Waldorf. Mr. Arthur Bourchier's reproduction of The Merchant of Venice at the Garrick is fixed for this afternoon, on which occasion also, Mr. H. B. Irving has resolved to stage Mr. Courtney's adaptation in one act of Robert Louis Stevenson's Markheim at the Lyric.

The first-nighter is then faced by a busy week, which will be begun by the transference to the evening bill at the Court on Monday of Bernard Shaw's Captain Brassbound's Conversion. Wednesday will witness the erection of Castles in Spain at the Royalty, and on Thursday Miss Lena Ashwell will start her managerial career with The Bond of Ninon at the Savoy. Saturday is now claimed by The Girl Behind the Counter at Wyndham's, and the devoted playgoer will have only the Sunday to prepare for the Shakespeare Festival Week, which Mr. Beerbohm Tree begins at His Majesty's on the following Monday.

Mr. Fred Brown, the popular acting-manager of the Pavilion Theatre, has been the recipient of extended congratulations during the past week, on the recovery of his little daughter Ethel, who for the past seven months has been an inmate at the London Hospital. It says much for the skilful treatment given by the medical staff, combined with the unremitting attention of the ward nurses, that little Ethel Brown has been practically snatched from death and restored to her parents in good health.

A reading of Antony and Cleopatra will be given by the British Empire Shakespeare Society in the afternoon of Thursday, April 19, at the Passmore Edwards Settlement, Tavistock Place. Miss Edyth Olive will be the Cleopatra, Mr. Acton Bond the Antony, and the long cast will also include Miss Gertrude Scott, Mr. Norman McKinnel, Mr. Lawrence Grant, Miss Eily Malyon, and Messrs. Charles Doran, Clive Currie, Lawrence Leyton, Yates Southgate, J. Henry Twyford, Robert Atkins, Frank Royde, and Misses Margaret Parker and Victoria Addison.

Miss Ruby Verdi, who has resumed her original rôle of Nellie Wagner with Mr. George Musgrove's Prince of Pilsen company, made her first appearance on the stage as Cinderella at the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, in Mr. Michael Gunn's famous pantomime some few years ago, when a mere child. Since then Miss Verdi has been in much demand as a pantomime heroine, appearing last season as Morgiana in the Stoke Newington pantomime. In the interim, engagements with Mr. Arthur Roberts in H.M.S. Irresponsible, and principal lady with Mr. George Edwardes's Toreador company have been fulfilled. Miss Verdi is the youngest daughter of the late famous Dr. Verdi, and was tutored for the stage by her mother, a well-known society amateur actress. She is passionately attached to horses and dogs, and is accompanied always on tour by a favourite toy-terrier of priceless value, who rejoices in the name of Tatters.

After the close of the performance of The Merry Wives of Windsor (in which Miss Ellen Terry will take part), at His Majesty's Theatre, on the evening of Friday, April 27, an address from the Playgoers' Club will be presented to Miss Terry, enclosed in a silver casket, bearing a suitable inscription, commemorative of her jubilee on the stage. The address will be read and presented on behalf of the Club by Mr. Tree.

Mr. Samuel James has secured the entire rights of a new drama, entitled As Good as Gold, and will send the same on tour in the autumn, with every scene and property carried. The first production will take place at the Lyric Opera House, Hammersmith, on May 14, and the tour will start from the Grand Theatre, Islington. The bookings are in the hands of Mr. F. S. Jennings.

Mr. William Ravenscroft will, by arrangement with Mr. F. S. Jennings, tour that tried success Why Woman Sins from Whit week. The bookings and management will be in the hands of Mr. Charles Hermann.

Mr. Harold Payne has engaged Miss Zoe Gilfillan, Miss Marie Ault, Mr. Broughton Black, and Mr. Ivor Harvey for the forthcoming tour of Petronella; or, A Royal Romance, a new comic opera by Montague Turner, with music by W. T. Gliddon.

At the Queen's Theatre, Leeds, this week, Mr. Charles Carey's production of After the Ball has been meeting with an extraordinary reception. Mr. Victor Widdicombe, in his original part, scores perhaps even more heavily than he did as Sergeant Brue. Miss Florence Smithers, too, has been making a great hit in an exceptionally catchy new song with a large chorus. Mr. Carey is booking another company to go round the South Coast in the summer with the same piece.

The Opera House, Tunbridge Wells, reopens today after being "vacuum'd" and renovated. To-night's piece is The Lady of Ostend, which is to be followed by Kitty Grey, His House in Order, and Lady Madcap. We understand that the business at this beautiful theatre has more than doubled during the last twelve months.

At the annual general meeting of the Touring Managers' Association on Wednesday afternoon at the Tavistock Hotel, it was decided to proceed with the formation of the Managers' Club, which will have its premises in Savoy Mansions, and membership to which will be open to managers of public entertainments in London and the country, including business and acting-managers or gentlemen interested in or connected with the theatrical, concert, and music-hall professions, who may be deemed eligible by the committee. The Touring Managers' Association is about to be formed into a limited liability company, with a capital of £1000 in £1 shares. Applications for shares should be made to the secretary, Mr. William Martin, 3, Bedford-street, Strand, W.C.

Mr. R. W. Allum, of the Brixton Theatre, has sent the sum of £2 14s. 9d. to the secretary of the Actors' Benevolent Fund, having collected that amount at his theatre in the Fund's box.

The choice of As You Like It for the Shakespearean Festival Week at the Crystal Palace Theatre, beginning on April 23, was made by the audience, to whom three plays, of which A Midsummer Night's Dream and The Tempest were the other two, were submitted for ballot. Mr. Bannister Howard has therefore arranged with Mr. Norman V. Norman to present this comedy for six nights and a matinée during the week mentioned. Miss Beatrice Wilson will be the Rosalind, and Mr. Norman the Jaques.

Mr. and Mrs. William Calvert (Miss Clara Cowper) have been specially engaged by Mr. Samuel James for his production of The Merchant of Venice at Crouch End at Easter. Miss Cowper's last appearance was as Audrey in As You Like It at the St. James's, during Mr. William Mollison's season.

Mr. Herbert Leonard has been unanimously elected Worshipful Master of the Green Room Lodge, which shares the proud distinction of being representative of the theatrical profession with the Adolph Lodge and the Dramatic Mark Lodge, in both of which Mr. Leonard is a Past-Master.

Miss Stella Gastelle, supported by Messrs. Scott Russell and Broughton Black, opens on Monday at the Theatre Royal, Bradford, with Offenbach's opera comique, in one act, entitled The Rose of Auvergne. Miss Gastelle's engagement is only for a short tour of four weeks, but it is hoped that some manager may be found to give this little gem a more extended career.

A meeting of the Finance and General Purposes Committee of the Actors' Association was held on Saturday last, when there were present Messrs. Acton Bond (chairman), A. E. George, and Arthur Holmes-Gore, Mrs. Cecil Raleigh, and Chas. Cruikshanks (secretary). Several matters connected with the general working of the affairs of the association were under discussion, and the secretary received instructions.

The usual weekly meeting of the Council was held on Tuesday last, there being present Mr. C. Aubrey Smith (chairman), Mr. Henry W. Mote (hon. solicitor), Miss Carlotta Addison, and Messrs. Clarence Blakiston, Acton Bond, Burton Cooke, F. Cremlin, Lawrence Grant, Arthur Holmes-Gore, Fewlass Llewellyn, Quinton McPherson, Walter Russell, Fredk. Volpe, and Charles Cruikshanks (secretary).

The hon. solicitors reported that they had advised several members. A question having arisen as to the present method of voting for the election of members of the Council, Mr. Quinton McPherson brought forward the proposition that the Council should call a special meeting for the purpose of recommending to the members the resumption of the old system, and, after some discussion, it was agreed that the further consideration of the subject should be postponed until the next meeting of the Council, which will be held on Tuesday, the 24th inst. (there being no meeting on Easter Tuesday). The secretary was directed to issue a whip for the occasion. A question of holding an arbitration in a case referred to the Joint Arbitration Board was under discussion, and the Secretary was instructed to carry out the necessary arrangements. A matter affecting the condition of a provincial theatre was under consideration, and the secretary received instructions. The report of the Finance and General Purposes Committee was received. Leslie Carter and Stanley Roberts were nominated for election to the association. The suggestion book was considered, and an entry made.

Mr. Leonard Shepherd has been gaining unqualified praise from the American critics for what they refer to as his "wonderful and remarkable" creation of Trivulzio in Maeterlinck's Monna Vanna, which recently received its first production in the English-speaking language under Mr. Harrison Grey Fiske at the Manhattan Theatre in New York.

Professor Arthur Nikisch, the Director of the Leipzig Opera House, has resigned his position owing to a disagreement over pecuniary payments. Professor Nikisch demanded a salary equal to his aggregate possible earnings in Europe—£10,000 sterling—plus the purchase of a life insurance of £25,000 sterling.

Mr. Martin Harvey concludes to-night a brilliantly successful fortnight's visit to the King's Theatre, Glasgow. Hamlet and Eugene Aram; or After All have been received with especial favour, and in the chief part in each play the popular actor has won nothing short of personal triumphs. On Monday evening, Mr. Harvey, Miss N. de Silva, and company commence a week's visit at the Lyceum Theatre, Edinburgh, where Hamlet will be presented on Wednesday. The production of The Rapparee Trooper, at the Royal, Newcastle, has been postponed from the 25th inst. to the following evening.

It was noticeable that in the front ranks of the long queue at the pit and gallery doors of the Vaudeville Theatre on the first night of The Belle of Mayfair there were not only District Messenger boys reserving seats, but apparently two or three neat little girls engaged for the same purpose. They looked very happy during their long wait, and held their positions at the head of the line of people with cheerful self-possession.

"Under Two Flags," that particularly successful version of Ouida's novel, produced by Miss Ida Molesworth and Mr. Mark Blow four years ago, is this week paying its third return visit to the Prince's Theatre, Bristol. Though following the story of the novel very closely, this version has several original situations and effects, which have mainly contributed to its success. Under Two Flags, which last week paid its third return visit to the Camden Theatre, is booked well into 1907.

Mr. J. Bannister Howard's Florodora company will have a very busy day on Easter Monday at the Crystal Palace, as they have no less than three performances, viz., at 1, 4, and 6.45. Mr. Howard has arranged for Mr. James Welch and full company from Terry's Theatre to give a special matinée of The New Clown at the Crystal Palace Theatre, on Thursday, April 26.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Petley (Miss Gertrude Price) have been engaged by Mr. Frank Grans for his spring tour of The Other Man's Business.—Mr. Leslie Carter, who recently made a success in the parts of Satan and Constantine Schaube in Mr. Walter Maxwell's production of When It Was Dark, has been engaged by Mr. Chas. Frohman to support Mr. Huntley Wright in The Mountain Climber and The Little Father of the Wilderness, opening on Easter Monday at the King's Theatre, Glasgow.

In the Court of Chancery on Tuesday a motion was made in the action of "Saunders v. the Waldorf Theatre Company (Ltd.)," in which the defendant did not appear, to strike out a statement of claim in an action brought by the plaintiff against Messrs. Waring and Gillow, to restrain further payments to them in respect of work done at the theatre. The Court was asked to strike out the statement of claim on the ground that it disclosed no reasonable cause of action and was frivolous and vexatious, and on the further ground that the plaintiff was unable to prosecute the action on account of having been made bankrupt. Mr. Justice Kekewich on the second ground directed that the statement of claim should be struck out and the action dismissed.

Mr. J. Murray Herriot, who by his unflagging energy and unexcelled courtesy to all has brought the Brixton Theatre to the front among suburban playhouses, is about to leave South London to take up a similar position at another and more important house with which Mr. Ernest Stevens, the lessee of the Brixton Theatre, is associated During his connection with the theatre, Mr. Herriot, who is a native of Scotland, has had untold difficulties to contend with, but by the exercise of rare business ability and ripe judgment, has overcome them triumphantly. Mr. Herriot, who recently had to deplore the loss of his mother, sustained another bereavement on Monday, when his father passed away at Glasgow. The event occurred exactly two months to a day after that of his mother, and in each case the telegram containing the sad news reached Mr. Herriot just before his time of rising in the morning.

Mr. George Edwardes closed Daly's Theatre for Holy Week, to allow the artists, who have been performing continuously for a year, to take a needful rest. The theatre will re-open with The Little Michus and the full cast on Easter Monday, an extra matinée being given on Wednesday.

Shakespeare's Birthday will be marked by Mr. J. M. Chute at Bristol by the revival at the Prince's Theatre, for two weeks, of Romeo and Juliet. The production will be that given by Mr. Richard Flanagan some time ago at Manchester, and since played in several parts of London. The Romeo will be Mr. Milton Rosmer, Miss Haidee Gunn will play Juliet, and the cast will include Messrs. Eric Blind, Kenyon Musgrave, Arthur Chesney, James Taylor, John Burton, C. Brandon, Sydney Arnold, Ernest Griffin, Richard Fielding, Frank Roy, Harold Nuttall, Malcolm Strachan, and Misses Eddie Victor, Gertrude Verne, Lilian Revell, Alice Marjorie, and Barbara Fenn.

The Queen's Theatre, Liverpool, was offered for sale by auction on Tuesday, but no bid being made the property was withdrawn. This offer, it should be explained, does not in any wise concern the present occupiers of the theatre, who have a long lease.

Mr. T. Arthur Jones is at present making his fifth continuous tour of Life's Sweetest Sins, by W. Brabner. This piece, which reached its 500th performance some time since, is well booked up into next year.

We regret to announce the death of Mr. Joseph Ball, the joint-lessee and general-manager of the Colosseum Theatre, Oldham, who ruptured a blood-vessel on the Monday of last week, and died on the following Thursday. The funeral took place on Tuesday amidst general expressions of regret. Mr. Ball was well known as a steeplejack, and before becoming joint-lessee of the Colosseum was connected with the Gaiety Theatre. Always to the fore in acts of charity, the late manager will be greatly missed in Oldham and district.

At the Royal Academy of Music the Charles Mortimer prize for composition has been awarded to Susan Spain-Dunk (a native of Folkestone). The adjudicators were Messrs. Geo. Jacobi, Hamilton Robinson, and Lionel Jerkes. The Louisa Hopkins memorial prize for pianoforte was won by Hilda Rekas (a native of West Horsley, Surrey), Myra Hess being highly commended. The adjudicators were Messrs. Ernest Fowles, Harold Macpherson, and Miss Lily West, in the chair.

During the regrettable absence of Miss Cecilia Loftus for three nights from the cast of Peter Pan at the Edinburgh Theatre Royal last week, owing to a slight nervous breakdown, the title-part was played with much success by Miss Pauline Chase.

"The Knight of the Bath," a new farce in three acts, by Arthur Aplin, will be produced at Terry's Theatre (kindly lent by Mr. James Welch) at the annual matinée arranged by Mrs. St. Hill for the benefit of Our Dumb Friends' League, on Tuesday, May 1. Mr. Lennox Pawle will produce the farce, and the cast includes Mmes. Eily Malyon, Grace A. Noble, D. J. Williams; Malcolm Cherry, and Lennox Pawle.

Messrs. Gilbert Heron and Fraser Brunner have secured from Messrs. Shubert the entire rights for the United Kingdom (London included) of Sidney Bowkett's charming comedy The Superior Miss Pellender, recently produced by Mr. Cyril Maude at the Waldorf Theatre. A tour commencing at the Theatre Royal, Cardiff, on April 30, has been booked, and includes many of the chief watering-places on the West and South Coast, as well as other important towns. Mr. Maude's part will be played by Mr. Gilbert Heron; Miss Winifred Emery's part by Miss Jessie Danvers; and the company will include Misses Alice Bowes, Jessie Ramsey, Alice Esther Belmore, and Mr. George Belmore. The curtain-raiser is from the pen of Mr. Gilbert Heron, and Mr. Fraser Brunner is playing the principal part therein.

Mr. George Stone, resident-manager of the Royalty Theatre, Barrow, who was among those who offered entertainment to the Japanese sailors during their recent visit to this country, has received a letter from Captain Sakamoto, of which the following is a translation:—"H.I.J.M. Battleship Katori, April 10, 1906.—Dear Sir,—On behalf of the officers and three hundred seamen who have been ordered by the Imperial Government to navigate home his Imperial Japanese Majesty's battleship Katori, now lying at Barrow, I have to express our great appreciation and great honour accorded us both by individuals and by collective bodies, by their warm and enthusiastic welcome during our short stay in Barrow. I take this opportunity on leaving Barrow to tender, on behalf of the said officers and men, our most hearty thanks, and beg you to accept our cordial wishes for your prosperity and good health. —Flajime Sakamoto, Commanding H.I.J.M. Battleship Katori.

Theatrical cricket has begun thus early, the first report to hand being that of the veteran wielders of the willow, the Bristol X.L.C.R., whose ranks are mainly composed of orchestral musicians. For long seasons past they have taken part in many a hardly-contested fight with touring companies and with local teams, acquitting themselves with general excellence. The first match of the season took place on Clifton Downs on Saturday, when the second eleven met the St. Michael's Reserves C.C. and theatricals, to whom, however, they succumbed, losing by the spacious margin of three wickets and 39 runs, undeniably due to the excellent innings of Mr. George Warren, who "carried his bat" with a score of 58.

Mr. Milton Rosmer, who has been appearing with considerable success as Romeo in the Birmingham production of Romeo and Juliet, has been specially engaged by Mr. J. M. Chute to appear in that part at the Prince's Theatre, Bristol, on April 26. At the conclusion of the run there Mr. Rosmer goes again to Birmingham to play Pete in The Manxman and to create the leading part in a new play by Meredith Thorne, to be produced at the Grand Theatre.

Acting on the example set by Sherborne, in Dorset, the people of Warwick have resolved to hold a pageant setting forth the famous events in the history of their ancient town and its superb castle, under the direction of Mr. Louis N. Parker, the dramatist, who devised the Sherborne production. The pageant, which is fixed for July 2 to 7 inclusive, will represent in dramatic form nearly 1,700 years of the town's history, set forth in verse and text, and embellished with choruses, songs, dances, marches, and spectacle. The beautiful lawn in front of Warwick Castle conservatory will be the arena, and Shakespeare's Avon will be utilised for Queen Elizabeth's State barge.

The pageant will consist of eleven episodes in the history of Warwick Castle and town, for which Mr. James Rhoades has composed many narrative choruses, to be sung by fifty Druids. The first episode deals with the Roman invasion of Britain and the first introduction of Christianity to this land. Another scene will illustrate Queen Ethelfleda (Alfred the Great's daughter) founding Warwick Castle just a thousand years ago; and in the next episode, 1123 A.D., Roger de Newburgh returns from the Holy Land and raises the Parish Church of Warwick to collegiate rank. Another striking scene will be the "trial" and execution of Piers Gaveston, Edward II.'s favourite, by eight angry earls; and equal with this episode in interest will be the story of the quarrel between the "King-maker" and Edward IV., as told by Shakespeare. The proclamation of Lady Jane Grey as Queen at Warwick in 1553 will be followed by the introduction of Queen Elizabeth in her state coach. Nearly one thousand performers will be in the arena in this episode, in which Shakespeare himself will figure. The last episode, in which William III. restores Warwick after the great fire of 1694, will prepare the way for a magnificent final tableau, in which the whole of the performers will take part.

Miss Lena Ashwell has paid special attention to the incidental music in her forthcoming production of The Bond of Ninon at the Savoy Theatre. Mr. Percy Fletcher is the composer, and a song sung on the stage is the work of Mr. Stanley Hawley.

Miss Emily Sheridan will shortly tour the successful American play, by Elwyn Barron, entitled A Prince of the People. The tour starts June 4, and the bookings include Edinburgh, Glasgow, Birmingham, and other important towns. The work is a strong romantic play, dealing with the period immediately following the French Revolution, and the high tone of the piece is being maintained by the excellence of the company, scenery, dresses, and printing.

The Reading Corporation have approved the plans of a new theatre proposed to be erected in the Caversham-road. The plans were deposited by Messrs. Lamb and Dawkins, of Charing Cross, architects acting on behalf of Mr. R. D. Daniel, who represents a syndicate. These plans are in place of those (disapproved by the Buildings Committee) for a theatre at the corner of Cheapside and Friar-street, another site having been adopted. The building is designed to seat 1,250 persons, and embraces pit, circle, and gallery floors. The front of the theatre abuts on Caversham-road, and has a frontage of about 110ft. It was stated at the Corporation meeting that the committee were quite satisfied that the building would be absolutely safe, and in addition to that the syndicate which proposed to build were willing to do all that was required by the Borough Engineer.

Thomas Hardy's famous novel, "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," has been turned to the purposes of opera by Baron Frederic d'Erlanger, whose Inez Mendo was produced at Covent Garden eight or nine years ago. The libretto is by Signor Illico, and the pathos of the story, which is told in four acts, is relieved by some comedy.

An English translation of Maxim Gorky's play, The Bessemenovs, which has never yet been acted in England, will be produced by the Mermaid Society at Terry's Theatre on Monday afternoon, April 23. The cast will include Mr. Arthur Curtis, Mr. Bertram Forsyth, Mr. Herbert Grimwood, Mr. Matheson Lang, Mr. Caleb Porter, Mr. Michael Sherbrooke, Miss Alice Arden, Miss Edyth Olive, Miss Ada Potter, Miss Ina Royle, Miss Katherine Stuart, and Mrs. Theodore Wright. The play will be produced under the direction of Mr. Philip Carr. During May will also be presented Browning's Colombe's Birthday, and in July open-air performances will be given of George Peel's pastoral play, The Arraignment of Paris.

HEADS OF DEPARTMENTS' ASSOCIATION.

ANNUAL DINNER.

Mr. H. B. IRVING presided at the annual dinner of the Heads of Departments Association, held on Sunday evening last at the New Gaiety Restaurant. Mr. Irving was supported by Mr. T. P. O'Connor, M.P., Mr. Joseph Wilson, Mr. James Howell, Mr. Charles Cruikshanks, Mr. Charles I. Coltson, Mr. Horace Marriott, Mr. Lionel Belmore, Mr. Sidney Watson, Mr. Frank Desprez, Mr. E. Arnold, and Mr. F. Shorland. The stewards were Messrs. James Cullen (president), Mr. G. H. Dyball (Tivoli), Mr. G. Poynton Applebee (Gaiety), Mr. H. J. Powell (Prince of Wales's), Mr. Philip Sheridan (Crown), Mr. Robert Affleck (Opera House), Mr. T. Sheridan (Waldorf), Mr. A. Earnshaw (Paragon), and Mr. William Johnson (secretary). Among others present were Mr. W. Sheldon (master carpenter, Prince of Wales's Theatre), Mr. H. Elliott, Mr. G. Applebee (electricians' department, Gaiety Theatre), Mr. Watson (Savoy), Mr. W. Davies (property master, St. James's Theatre), Mr. W. Barbour (electrician, St. James's Theatre), Mr. W. Crawshaw (electrician, Opera House), Mr. A. Stanghton (stage-manager, New Cross Empire), Mr. C. T. Cory (master carpenter, Vaudeville Theatre), Mr. Walter W. Arter, Mr. John Walker, Mr. A. Richardson, (St. James's), Mr. Dawson, Mr. A. Grimmett, Mr. E. Jackson, Mr. Ralph, Mr. A. Smith, Mr. C. Hopwood, and Mr. Hewson (Tivoli).

After the toast of "The King" had been drunk with musical honours, the chairman mentioned that he had received letters regretting inability to attend, and wishing success to the meeting, from Mr. Edward Terry, Mr. George Alexander, Mr. Comyns Carr, Mr. Frederick Harrison, Mr. A. W. Pinero, Sir Charles Wyndham, Mr. F. H. Pedgrift, Mr. Aubrey Smith, Mr. Dion Boucicault, Mr. Cyril Maude, Mr. Lewis Waller, Mr. Fred Terry, and Mr. Herbert Blackmore.

THE CHAIRMAN, in proposing "Success to the Association," said:—Gentlemen, if I were not connected with you by the common bond of our association together in the theatre, there would always be one reason why the Heads of Departments' Association would have a peculiar interest for me personally—why I should feel towards your Association a very affectionate regard. I may perhaps remind you that the very last act of my father during his last season in Drury Lane was to receive from you on the stage when the curtain had fallen for the last time that beautiful token of affectionate remembrance which will ever be in my family a treasured possession. It is a proud and happy thing for those who come after a man—his children and grandchildren—to know that he was held in high esteem, and was beloved by those who had worked with him in the business of his life. The theatre is a peculiar place—the work of the theatre a peculiar thing. It tries a man's patience, his temper, his forbearance. The atmosphere is often highly charged. It is difficult for any of us not sometimes to be less amiable, less patient, than we could wish; so that if a man in the course of some fifty years of such a life can, at its close, take with him the affection and respect of those who have worked with him, it is surely something of which those who come after him may well be justly proud.

Gentlemen, nothing can be more auspicious for the peace and welfare of our theatre than the formation of an Association such as your own, and the annual gatherings, such as this one, which bring together employers and employed in friendly and convivial enjoyment. And it is right it should be so, for if there were friction or unfriendliness between those who control the working of our modern stages the result would be disastrous. You, gentlemen, as heads of departments, have become far more important to the theatre than you were a hundred years ago. For good or for ill, the mechanism of production in the staging of plays has advanced to a degree of elaboration that would astound our forefathers of the days of Garrick and Kean. And so your responsibility is much greater than it used to be. You have to keep pace with all the advances in electricity, and those branches of science which, in common with the sister arts of music and painting, are called into the service of our modern theatre. I think I am paying you no idle compliment in saying that England can hold its own in respect of the excellence of its stage productions with any other country in the world.

I am not here, however, to talk to you about your work. That speaks for itself, and I can only congratulate you that, in common with other callings, you have founded an Association that unites you and gives you that strength to uphold your interests which can only be acquired by combination. I am sure it is a cause of congratulation for us all that the formation of such a union has led to nothing but good results. Some people are naturally alarmed at the mere mention of a Trades Union, and they are more alarmed at the present moment when an amiable and an accommodating Government is ready—with the concurrence, I am sure, of my friend, Mr. T. P. O'Connor—to give them every assistance they are pleased to ask—even Home Rule, if they wanted it! I am sure, however, that in our profession we need have no fear that, if a lion's strength is conferred upon you, you will not use it like a lion, but with the gentleness of a sucking-dove and the diplomacy of a theatrical manager. I will not say of an actor-manager, because one is at the present moment almost afraid to use the term. One of those periodical attacks which are every now and then delivered against the unfortunate theatre has, as usual, attributed our shortcomings to the baneful influence of the actor-manager, who is represented as the old man of the sea clinging round the neck of our half-throttled British drama. I am, myself, not an actor-manager, though my father was one, and I number among my friends those who are our leading actor-managers to-day. They can hardly stand in need of defence, and a gathering such as this is the last I should think in which any defence of them would be a necessity. You know their work. You know what they have done for our English theatre. The history of the theatre shows us conclusively that, so far, it is to the actor-manager we owe all the most worthy achievements of our drama, the preservation from decay and disaster of all that is highest in theatrical art. In the eighteenth century it was Cibber, Garrick, and John Kemble, actor-managers, who rescued the theatre from the dishonesty, incompetence, or extravagance of the fine gentlemen who in those days gambled in theatrical enterprise. I am afraid there are not many knocking about at present. In the absence of a State theatre, it has fallen to the task of individual actors to do what they can to uphold the finer traditions of our stage, and history proves to us that, in face of difficulties which time increased rather than diminished, these actors have not failed in their duty. Whether it brought them profit or loss, prosperity or ruin, they have successively devoted themselves to an enterprise which, in every other country, has been deemed worthy of the assistance of the State!

But what are we told? Why, that our actor-managers to-day do not know a good play from a bad one, and will accept no play which will not give them opportunities of gratifying their own vanity. That is the sum and substance of the accusation brought against them. It is the usual cry that we always hear—the cry of the unacted masterpieces which owe their neglect to the fact that they do not minister to the so-called self-glorification of these evil geniuses of the drama. Now I frankly do not believe in the existence of the unacted masterpiece, and experiment, so far as we can ascertain, justifies such a belief. Plays are so few and so rare, the gift of playwriting so uncommon a gift in itself, the supply of plays so hopelessly inadequate to the demand, that from mere motives of self-preservation no manager could afford to neglect a play which offered any reasonable prospect of success. A little while ago the Playgoers' Club had a competition, and out of many hundreds of plays sent in, only one was found to be acceptable, and that by a committee not composed of actors. Again, the recent report of the Stage Society, whose committee is not composed of actors, tells us that they find a good play as rare as the great auk's egg. Amongst the numbers that passed through their hands, I think I am correct in saying that they only recorded three as presenting any likelihood of success. It is idle to pretend that actors do not make mistakes with plays, just as distinguished publishing firms have rejected novels which have turned out ultimately to be successful. No one's judgment is infallible; but if a play of merit does not get a hearing at once, if it wanders a little, it will, I am sure, ultimately find publication in the theatre, and, if it be a good play, success. Though judgment in these matters is difficult, and the public taste to a certain extent mysterious, I cannot help thinking that those who have spent their lives in the presence of the public, dealing directly with the public, endeavouring to please and satisfy the public, and, at the same time, make their living, are, on the whole, people who may be considered to be the most competent judges of the articles in which they are accustomed to deal. Good plays are as rare as good actors—or good stage-carpenters. If there were too many good actors, electricians, or carpenters, where, gentlemen, should many of us be? But I am sure we can none of us have any objection to plenty of good plays and long runs. But that is a condition of things which must be accepted and must be faced. Undoubtedly in England, as compared with other countries, we are more limited in the class of subjects with which we can deal on our stage, and I am not going to say that is not a wise or wholesome limitation. But it seems to me that there is little ground for serious complaint, and certainly little ground for that fierceness of attack which we are told should be our portion at the hands of our critics. Nor do our critics seem to me anxious to respond to such an invitation. I think most of them are well aware of the difficulties of theatrical management, and are far too sensible not to recognise how much we owe to those actors who have spent their energy, their art, and their capital in upholding the highest traditions of our English theatre. I am afraid I have kept you in talking too long about a subject which is only indirectly connected with stage-management and stage-production; but I think you who have worked for so many actor-managers would be the first to acknowledge how much the theatre owes to their labour; and your answer—you who know so much about the theatre—to a critic of this kind would be, as your and your President's friend, Mr. George Alexander, has suggested: "Well, come and manage a theatre for a week yourself, and see what you can make of it!" You know perfectly well what a difficult thing it is to manage a theatre—you who have done so much to lighten and overcome those difficulties by your energy and enthusiasm. And there is not one of us who has had anything to do with the production of plays who will not gladly and gratefully give his individual testimony to the sterling qualities of your work. For that reason, if for no other, we actors must all wish for the success and prosperity of your admirable Association You have taken as your motto Sir Charles Wyndham's advice to actors to make unity the guiding spirit and goal of your endeavours; and I can only wish that the same success may in the future attend your Association as has hitherto attended the efforts of actors to do for themselves what you are doing on your side. There is still much to be done so far as actors are concerned, and nobody knows that better than the Actors' Association, who are always working to further our best interests. The same spirit, I am sure, informs your Association, and that your present prosperity and success may be increased a hundredfold in the years to come is, I am confident, the sincere hope of actors and managers alike.

The CHAIRMAN, rising again, said: There is more to be done. In fact, I have a surprise for you. I have been asked to present to a very good friend of this Association a tribute from his fellow members expressing their appreciation of the work he has done as honorary secretary. That gentleman is Mr. William Barbour, who is, I am sure, most popular with everyone who has ever been connected with him in our business.

Mr. Barbour then received at the Chairman's hands a silver cigarette case bearing the following inscription: "Presented to William Barbour by the members of the Heads of Departments' Association, in appreciation of his services as honorary secretary, 1903-5. 4th Annual Dinner, April 8, 1906.—H. B. Irving, Esq., Chairman." Mr. Barbour suitably acknowledged the gift.

MR. JAMES CULLEN, the president of the Association, responded to the toast in the following speech:—Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen, my first duty—and it is a pleasant duty—is to thank you, Sir, for kindly consenting to honour us by presiding over this, our fourth annual gathering, and next, to thank you for proposing this toast, which has been so cordially received. In responding to this toast, you will naturally expect me to say a few words about our Association. Well, Sir, I am glad to be able to say that it deserves success, and that it is trying its hardest to deserve success in the fullest possible measure. It represents a body of men who, by their position, and the nature and extent of their duties, were isolated—an isolation which was by no means splendid, or meritorious to the individual or beneficial to the general body of our calling; they enjoyed, in fact, an obscurity in which I venture to say their duty to themselves was neglected and their misfortunes unheeded. This Association is striving to replace such isolation by a sense of fellowship and duty one to another, and to provide the means by which a worthy member of our body, or his dependants, may be assisted in times of adversity, so that unmerited suffering may not pass unheeded and neglected. It aims to encourage the individual member to take a pride in his craft, and to make the craft more worthy of the best men, and the worst man more worthy of his calling and his Association. I, for one, after nearly forty years' service, am proud to belong to my calling, and to be in the service of one who has always taken a friendly interest in this Association. My only regret is that every head of a department connected with the theatres and music halls of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland—you will excuse me mentioning Ireland, Mr. Chairman—is not a member of this Association. As is the case with other societies similar to ours, we have sometimes to help a man almost against his will; but, at any rate, some of our members have, in their hour of need, realised the advantages of the help afforded by this Association. Our sick and benevolent funds are flourishing. We have built them up, largely, by our own subscriptions, and we welcome non-members who are willing to help others in order that they, in their need, may have assistance. I am glad to be able to say that this Association received a substantial sum from the late Dramatic and Musical Sick Fund, and that sum was added to our benevolent fund. We look forward to the time, Sir, when our Association will exercise a commanding influence in all that concerns the efficiency and character of its members, and the fellowship which is the source of its benevolent objects. We prize these gatherings because they win us friends who bring us friendly words to cheer us in our efforts to raise and to benefit our craft and those who follow it. I thank you, Sir, and the gentlemen who have given this toast such a cordial reception. I thank you most heartily in the names of our members who are fortunately present, and in the names of those who are unfortunately absent.

MR. G. POYNTON-APPLESEE, who submitted the toast of "Our Guests and the Profession," said:—I have been asked to give this toast of the visitors and the profession. I feel, however, that the speech made by Mr. Cullen has left me nothing to say, so on behalf of the Heads of Departments' Association I will merely say that we are very glad to have you gentlemen here this evening, and I sincerely hope that you will be with us on many future occasions.

MR. T. P. O'CONNOR, M.P., in replying to the toast, said: Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen,—This is the second occasion on which I have had the honour and the privilege of addressing the annual dinner of the heads of departments. I am very glad and proud to be here again to add my small testimony to the testimony given by those more competent to do it than I, as to the large and honourable part which this Association plays in the life of the theatre. You will not expect a man of my opinions to be very much in favour of artificial inequalities between man and man. Perhaps the amiable and accommodating Government to which our friend in the chair has alluded may be disposed to manage in some way or other to remove some of these artificial inequalities. I do not know whether they will or not. But, gentlemen, there are natural inequalities which it is beyond the power of man or superman, or Ministries, or of the House of Commons, or even of a Labour Party, to entirely remove. One man has the genius to conceive and create, to organise and dominate, and to invent, and other men are privileged to be the humble instruments of carrying out the designs of greater minds than their own. I do not think it is wise or reasonable ever to fail to recognise these natural inequalities, and therefore, when I say that the Heads of Departments have no reason to complain because they are subordinate to the manager—even though it be an actor-manager—I am only exemplifying that great truth of the natural inequality of men in a particular way. They would not have come into existence, they would not have their function, they would not have their employment, they would not have that increase of remuneration which I hope is one of the results of their Association, they would have none of these things had there not been some great mind—a Garrick, a Kean, an Irving—to create the organisation of which they are part. And I am sure they are far too sensible men not to recognise the obligation they owe to the creative mind and genius which has brought them and many other people and things into existence. But, all the same, Mr. Chairman, in all spheres of life there is, beside the great figure that looms large before the public, an invisible figure behind. Very often I have been told that great Ministers would not be able to perform their very large part as legislators if they had not some private secretary behind them whose very name and existence were unknown to the public. In the same way the heads of departments behind the scene are often the invisible and unknown factors that largely contribute to the great success of the piece and of the theatre, and it is to merit of that kind, which often has little to reward it except the consciousness of duty done, which we ought to be proud to have an opportunity of recognising.

It would be very presumptuous on my part if I were to enter into the question of actor-managership, which the chairman has so ably discussed. A substitute is suggested in the shape of a pure man of business. After all, gentlemen, we do not live by bread alone in the theatre any more than in any place else. For myself, being a working man of letters, I cannot profess to have an entirely unmixed admiration for the gentleman without letters, and sometimes without education, who makes fortunes out of men of far larger intellects than his own. The middleman has not been looked on with favour by Irishmen—I do not know whether he is favoured by Englishmen. If I wanted any proof of the desirability of the combination of actor and manager I could point to no better example than that of the illustrious actor whose son is in the chair this evening. I have met a good many brilliant men in my time, public men, literary men, theatrical men, who were not pecuniarily as successful as others, and were not nearly as successful as the public expected and believed. Well, gentlemen, all kinds of reasons have been given in many cases of such a disproportion between success and pecuniary result—some of the reasons true, some of them false. Reasons have been suggested that were creditable, some that were discreditable; but the real reason is that the true artist is so absorbed in his art, just as the public man sometimes is so absorbed in his cause, that he really has not the time to think of his private interests or his private affairs. If Sir Henry Irving had cared less for the drama, less for dramatic art, he would perhaps have been pecuniarily a more successful man; but he would not have died the idol of a whole people. I do not speak from personal knowledge, but from some kind of instinctive knowledge of these things; but I think when Sir Henry Irving and other actor-managers have been producing a play their first thought has not been the particular pecuniary result or the pecuniary cost of such-and-such a production, or such-and-such a presentation—their first thought has been the artistic completeness and perfection. I know a distinguished actor-manager of to-day—I won't mention his name for obvious reasons—with whom I once travelled from Brighton in a Pullman car—it ran to that is the inspiration of high thought, of noble literature, of history truer, though it is written in poetry, than any written in a solemn and prosy chronicle—if there be one book more than another that appeals to the British people, even to those who hate the theatre, it is the plays of that same actor-manager, William Shakespeare. Well, in face of the fact that the greatest literature of the world must put as its first names the playwrights of the world, it is sometimes almost too sad for tears and too comic for laughter that there should be people still who do not recognise the great and supreme power that the drama, of which, after all, gentlemen, you are only the servants, exercises over humanity. I see constantly lamentations that the churches are not as largely frequented now as they used to be. I remember there is a very pathetic description in one of Carlyle's works of how John Stirling, a great friend of his, thought that the great calling of life to him was to become a clergyman of the Church, and how this John Stirling was found as the rector in a City church; and Carlyle, in his characteristically sardonic manner refers to this fine speaker addressing an audience where with perfect safety you could have fired a gunshot without the least chance of hitting any person. I do not know whether that is the state of the churches in the City to-day. I never go to the City except to lose money, and that you do on a week-day, and not on a Sunday. But I think I saw that a church in the City was recently sold because no one ever entered it. Well, gentlemen, if the pulpit does not reach the people, somebody and something else should reach the people. Far be it for me to suggest that a newspaper is an adequate substitute for the pulpit. I must remember at this point that I am a politician, and I am treading on rather delicate and dangerous ground. But if the world is to be taught lessons of courage, lessons of manliness, of fortitude in difficulty, lessons of tenderness and pity, and if men will not go to the pulpit to learn those lessons, they must go somewhere else; and I tell those who have never gone inside a theatre that in a properly-organised theatre, with a proper play and proper actors—and good heads of departments behind the scenes—they will learn the lessons of nobleness and of all these virtues. I think the people of this country do not require to be taught that lesson now. It is sometimes pitiful to think of what the actor is in the memory of mankind, in the imagination of mankind, and what he was sometimes when he was in the flesh. Molière was regarded as highly honoured when he sat for awhile at the same table as Louis XIV., and when Molière died he was denied Christian burial. And yet to-day there is no personage which France values so highly as Molière. I daresay if we knew something of the intimate history of Shakespeare we would have found that in his day he had to put up with a great deal of that contumacy to which he has alluded in the greatest of his plays, and that many of the lordly dames and noblemen who met him thought they were doing him a great honour by even recognising his existence. Well, gentlemen, I have always regarded posthumous fame as a very poor compensation for great discomfort and great dishonour during one's earthly existence. For myself, I would sooner never have done without a meal and a bed and a roof over it than have centuries of posthumous fame after my unfeeling dust had returned to earth. I think we owe something of compensation and something of conscience-money, if I may so express it, to those great luminaries of the stage who in their days of earthly existence were often the outcasts and derelicts of society, and now in many a crowded hour upon the stage, or in a solitary hour in the study, give to us those pleasures and those consolations which time cannot destroy, and which are among the holiest and among the highest enjoyments of the human soul.

MR. CHARLES CRUIKSHANKS, who responded to the same toast, said: On my road here to-night in my motor—omnibus—I had time to think of a few impromptus to fire off; but when I remembered that I had to reply to the toast of the visitors, and that I was put in the harness with my friend Mr. T. P. O'Connor, I knew there would be very little for me to say when he had finished. But I would like to tell you that I am here not as a visitor, although I am responding to the toast, because this is the ever-so-many-something occasion on which I have been amongst you; but I presume I am down to reply for the profession. Well, I think the profession is in a very fair way. As to the actor-manager—what is the matter with the actor-manager? If it were not for him we should not have the fine plays we have had for the last few years. What do you want? Do you want your theatres run by a syndicate of pork butchers and plaster of Paris manufacturers? And when somebody comes along with the money, why should he not play the leading part? Personally, I have been very much indebted to the heads of departments, and I wish them all success. We only want unity among actors and the Actors' Association would be a very fine association indeed. I will conclude by saying that I sincerely thank you on behalf of the visitors and the profession for my presence here this evening, and I trust that I shall have the honour of being amongst you on many other occasions.

MR. JOSEPH WILSON, who replied to the same toast on behalf of Mr. John Wilson, said that he had had the honour of being in the acting profession for twenty years. He was now attached to the variety branch, and on behalf of that branch he begged to return his most sincere thanks.

MR. JAMES CULLEN, in proposing "Our Chairman," said: Gentlemen,—It gives me the greatest pleasure to propose this toast, although the pleasure I feel is tempered by the knowledge that my remarks will fail to do justice to the chairman or myself. Our chairman will, I am sure, make allowances for my shortcomings. I am but a workman, representing other workmen, who, whatever their shortcomings, have a deep regard for the name our chairman bears—a name which is deservedly honoured wherever the English tongue is spoken, and in that wider world in which genius and nobility of mind are held in high esteem. As the son of a man whom we have good cause to hold in affectionate remembrance, and for his own sake, we could not be otherwise than proud of his presence here to-night, or fail in our welcome to him. I well remember my last meeting with his father. It was on an occasion, most memorable to me, and the most memorable in the history of the working staff societies in this country. That occasion was when I had the honour to present the late Sir Henry Irving, after his last performance at the Drury-lane Theatre, with a testimonial on behalf of the working staff in the United Kingdom. In the address which I read, we gladly and gratefully recognised that he had done much to hasten the time "when to be a noble master among noble workmen might again be the first ambition." I had the honour to receive a letter from Sir Henry Irving, after that memorable gathering, in which he said "To have done something to promote friendly relations between masters and workmen is a title to remembrance of which I am very proud." Surely, nothing kinder to us could have been said. It is because of these cherished associations, and because our chairman is worthily upholding the name he bears, that we rejoice to have him with us to-night.

I may say that I held my present position, as master carpenter, at the St. James's Theatre, when our chairman joined Mr. Alexander in 1896 to play in The Tree of Knowledge and The Ambassador. Since that time our chairman has done much to make a career and a high place for himself in the profession, and I hope his present play at the Lyric Theatre may have a long and prosperous run. I understand that our chairman will visit America this year. He will find in every city he may visit, from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, a branch of the alliance which our comrades in that country have created, and I can promise him that we will ask them to do what lies in their power to help our chairman and his staff, so that their visit may be as pleasant as possible, and free from avoidable discomfort. I ask you all to join me in drinking the health, long life, happiness, and prosperity to our chairman, Mr. H. B. Irving.

The Chairman: Mr. Cullen and Gentlemen, I thank you most warmly for the kind words in which this toast has been proposed. I can only say that it has been a great honour and a great pleasure to me to come here to-night, and to feel that, in your asking me here, you were perhaps thinking of those associations with my father that were made very dear to you all. I am only too proud and too happy to think that I have had an opportunity, however humbly, of acknowledging that feeling which I have always known has existed between you and your Association and him. As I have already said, it will always be a cherished memory with me and my family, and those who come after us, as we think of that night when you were kind enough to present him with that bowl, and that address, which so feelingly and so kindly expressed what you felt towards him. He spoke to me afterwards about it in a manner that made me feel that you had done something that brought great happiness to a man who was feeling then that his career was approaching its end, and that all he had to look for were testimonies from those with whom he had been associated. It has been a great privilege to-night to listen to the remarkable speeches, especially that of Mr. O'Connor. He has spoken a good word for the theatre, and I feel that we have a great friend in him. I feel that our profession has won the regard and esteem of the outside world when a man so distinguished, a man so eloquent, and a man who has known the world as Mr. O'Connor has known it, shows himself ready to speak in our defence. I wish you and your Association every prosperity and every happiness.

Mr. Arthur Earnshaw, who proposed "The Artists and the Committee," said he thought it was very kind of the ladies and gentlemen who had come forward that evening for their benefit, and entertained them so well. In reference to the committee, they were jolly good fellows, every one of them. They worked most loyally and well for the Association. He noticed there were one or two changes in the constitution of the committee. Mr. Barbour, the honorary secretary, had retired, and Mr. George Dyball had taken his place, and they could not have a worthier successor. It was pleasing to be able to report that Mr. Barbour was still with them, and that they would still have a call upon his services.

Mr. Herbert Grover, in responding for the artists, said that musical artists, like theatrical, were always delighted to come to the aid of their professional brothers and sisters. He desired to express his gratitude for the compliments that had been showered upon them.

Mr. G. H. Dyball acknowledged the toast on behalf of the committee. The members of that body were, as Mr. Earnshaw had said, all jolly good fellows. They worked very hard, and tried their utmost to attend the committee meetings. In regard to Mr. Barbour, that gentleman, during his year of office, had done everything he could to further the interests of the Association. Then, as to Mr. William Johnson, he (the speaker) did not know where they would be without him. He was the life and soul of the Society. If they lost him they would never find his equal.

The speeches were from time to time varied by a most agreeable musical entertainment. Miss Ethel Walker delighted her hearers with a couple of humorous songs, "If you only knew," and "Nothing"; Mr. Herbert Grover rendered in fine style "Alisa Mine" and "Mary of Argyle"; Miss Elizabeth Davies enchanted everybody with her interpretation of "Give your heart to me," and Miss Ella Lorraine won golden opinions with "My dearest heart"; while Mr. Walter W. Arter accompanied in admirable fashion.

GREAT QUEEN STREET THEATRE.

On Friday, April 6, the Play, in Five Acts, by Anton Ohorn, entitled

"DIE BRUDER VON ST. BERNHARD."

Der Prior	Bruno Wiburger
Der Subprior	Willy Schmidt
P. Fridolin	Hans Andresen
P. Servaz	Karl Berger
P. Simon	Ph. Lesing
P. Meinhard	Richard Starnburg
Fr. Erhard	Ernst Reicher
Fr. Paulus	Hans Stock
Fr. Bruno	Ottomar Bloss
Döbler	Paul Wind
Marie	Ida Weiss
Grete	Johanna Becker
Franz Richter	Georg Baselt
Brinkmann	Willy Klein

Die Brüder von St. Bernhard can scarcely be called a pleasing play, a vein of morbidness running through it from beginning to end, and the mean, hypocritical cruelty of the Prior of the monastery, together with the bigoted and sleek sub-prior, combine to give a distasteful impression. The story in brief runs thus. The first act opens in the monastery of St. Bernard, where monks are dining. It has come to the Prior's ear that Paulus Döbler, a novice, has been reading Lessing's "Nathan die Weise," and also that he has been writing articles in an advanced newspaper. The Prior reproaches Döbler with acting against the dictates of the Church, and forbids him to read any book unless first submitted to his inspection. Paulus hotly refuses to consent, and is about to tear off his scapular when he is stopped by Brother Meinhard, the only one of the monks worthy of the name. At this moment a letter arrives from Paulus's sister, saying that his mother is very ill. He leaves at once for his home, and finds that his mother, not satisfied with putting him into a monastery, wishes to do likewise with his sister Grete, who is greatly averse to the proposal, knowing that she loves, and is loved by, the very estimable Franz Richter. Paulus excites his father's anger by threatening to renounce the Church, but decides to take the vows on condition that his sister shall be allowed to marry the man of her choice. The third act sees him back in the monastery, where he is about to be admitted to the priesthood along with a young hypocrite brother Erhard. The Prior of the monastery is dying, and his subordinates immediately solicit the votes of the other monks for the succession. More discreditable incidents are depicted, and at length Paulus decides that he will not take the vows—a piece of news that is disastrous to his father, who bestows his curse on the young man, and falls dead. Hans Stock made the most of Paulus, and imbued the part with the necessary amount of feeling. Brother Meinhard was decidedly life-like and natural in the hands of Richard Starnburg. Willy Klein played the part of Brinkmann in the clever, careful manner of the experienced artist. Georg Baselt brightened the piece up a little as Franz Richter; and Paul Wind was excellent as Old Döbler. Ada Weiss gave the part of his wife Marie the required amount of selfish hypocrisy; Bruno Wiburger as the Prior and Willy Schmidt as the Sub-Prior both did well. The piece was played to a good audience.

TOURING MANAGERS' ASSOCIATION.

NEW MANAGERS' CLUB.

The annual general meeting of the Touring Managers' Association was held on Wednesday afternoon at the Tavistock Hotel, Covent Garden, Mr. E. Lockwood, the president, occupying the chair. There was an excellent and representative attendance of managers.

The honorary treasurer (Mr. J. Bannister Howard) submitted the balance-sheet for the past year, which was declared to be satisfactory in every respect, and was unanimously passed.

A lengthy discussion took place in regard to the proposed Managers' Club, and in reference to the Touring Managers' Association being formed into a limited liability company. A resolution to the following effect was carried unanimously:—

"That the formation of the Managers' Club and the registration of the Touring Managers' Association, Ltd., in accordance with the memorandum and articles of association in draft, as submitted by the honorary solicitor, be proceeded with."

The honorary secretary (Mr. William Martin) then gave the following details as to the subscription and qualifications of membership of the club:—

"The subscription to the Managers' Club for members of the Touring Managers' Association is an extra 10s. 6d. per year on their present subscription. The entrance fee for non-members of the Association is 2 guineas, and the annual subscription is 2 guineas; but the first one hundred members will be admitted without being required to pay any entrance fee. The membership of the Club will be limited to London and country managers of public entertainments, including business and acting managers, or any gentlemen interested in, or connected with, the theatrical, concert, or music hall professions who may be deemed eligible by the committee."

Club Premises.—It was also decided that the honorary solicitor be empowered to continue the negotiations already entered into for acquiring the Club and Association premises in Savoy Mansions, as he may deem fit, the term of occupancy to commence either at the half-quarter, or, if possible, at June 24.

Management of the Club.—It was further decided that the management of the Club should be vested in a committee of twenty-one, to be elected from members of the Club.

Several new members were elected, both for the Association and for the Club.

The present committee and officers of the Association were duly re-elected for the ensuing year, as follow:—

Committee:—Mr. Clifton Alderson, Mr. Rollo Balmain, Mr. Cecil Barth, Mr. J. A. Campbell, Mr. Lester Collingwood, Mr. Edward Compton, Mr. A. Courtenay, Mr. C. St. John Denton, Mr. George Edwardes, Mr. E. Graham-Falcon, Mr. William Greet, Mr. W. H. Hallatt, Mr. Charles Harrington, Mr. W. W. Kelly, Mr. F. Mouillot, Mr. Norman V. Norman, Mr. Alfred Paumier, Mr. G. A. Polini, Mr. T. M. Powell, Mr. H. Ralland, Mr. Bertie Shelton, Mr. Edward Terry, Mr. H. Beerbohm Tree, Mr. John Tully, and Mr. J. E. Whitty.

Officers:—President, Mr. E. Lockwood; vice-president, Mr. Milton Bode; honorary treasurer, Mr. J. Bannister Howard; honorary solicitor, Mr. William Muskerry-Tilson.

Secretary:—Mr. William Martin, 3, Bedford-street, W.C.

A cordial vote of thanks was passed to the officers for their services during the past year, and a vote of thanks to the chairman for presiding terminated the proceedings.

Mr. Sidney Dench, the manager of The Rich and Poor of London company, playing this week at the Irving Theatre, Seacombe, had an unpleasant adventure on Wednesday. He was leaving the building when he was set upon by a coloured man named Burt, formerly employed as agent-in-advance of the company, who was recently discharged by Mr. Dench. His assailant seized him by the throat and attempted to strangle him, but Mr. Dench escaped, and ran into the theatre. A constable was sent for, and Mr. Dench again ventured forth; but Burt returned to the attack, and once more seized him by the throat. Then the officer interfered, and, with the aid of bystanders, dragged Burt away and handcuffed him. On being searched at the police station, a six-chambered revolver, fully loaded, was found upon him.

The King has subscribed for the Royal box for the forthcoming season of opera at Covent Garden, which opens on Thursday, May 3. The subscription is unusually large, and early application is advisable both for the season and the "Ring" cycles. Tristan und Isolde will be given on the opening night, Herr Burrian and Frau Wittich in the title-rôles. Rheingold will be produced on the 4th, Walküre on the 5th, Siegfried on the 7th, and Götterdämmerung on the 9th. Two novelties will figure in the programme on Tuesday, May 8, on which occasion Cornelius's Barber of Bagdad and Poldini's Princess and the Vagabond will be staged.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

Mr. Charles Whitlock has, in his latest drama, The King's Secret, revelled in sensation, the piece being brimful of exciting events, which succeed one another in startling fashion. The action of the play takes place in and around Alexandria, and Egyptians lend colour and picturesqueness to the scenes. The private signal code of the British Navy is stolen from an English captain who has married an Egyptian, Zenopa, believing his first wife to be dead. Zenopa only wants his money, and, aided by her accomplice, Hassan Alfar, stabs her husband, and imagines him also dead. He returns as Lord Zardon, and plots to get back the "King's secret." At a fancy dress ball he eventually recovers the book by a clever ruse. He discovers that his first wife is alive, and rescues her and his little son from a horrible death. Still more complications follow, and the boy is stabbed, and dies. The wife is again inveigled into a death-trap, but saved. An American and his daughter assist in righting the wrongs, and a lieutenant in the 7th Hussars and an English boatswain aid them mightily. Murders and attempted murders punctuate each act. A most horrible device is a machine which, when set going, gradually winds a rope which is drawing to its doom the victim round whose neck it is tied. The last scene, in which a woman tied to a gate at a railway-crossing is saved from an awful fate, is marred by the flimsy character of the train.

Of the acting, it may be said that each one worked hard and well. In the trying and exacting rôle of Zenopa Miss Zana St. George deserved nothing but praise. She depicted the Egyptian adventuress with rare power and naturalness, and scored a big success. Mr. Edward Fryer as Hassan Alfar, Zenopa's accomplice, with his rage for stabbing, played with force and fervour. Mr. James Stillwell as Captain Douglas Fairburn represented in manly fashion the Englishman who dared much to re-establish his honour. Mr. Beckett Bould was amusing as Lieutenant the Hon. Percy Dorincourt. Count von Bernstein found an able exponent in Mr. Atherden Edwards; and Mr. Charles Crosby gave a capital character-study as Lawyer Swiverton. Boatswain Jack was presented in merry, breezy fashion by Mr. Paul E. Teulon; Mr. Robert A. Earl as Jonathan looked and spoke as a thorough Yankee; and Miss Kitty McPherson as Jonathan's daughter was still more eloquent of Yankee-land. Miss Katherine Barnett was quiet and subdued as Leila Fairburn; and Miss Hester Kennedy was pleasing and winsome as the captain's son. The minor parts were well filled. The scenery was excellent, and the dressing picturesque and appropriate.

The Athenæum Theatre, Lancaster, with properties including two cottages and shop attached, was put under the hammer on Wednesday evening before a fair attendance. Bidding commenced at £2000, and was taken to £2800, when the property was withdrawn, the reserve price being declared at £4000. Mr. Porter of the Palace, Mr. Malvern of the Royalty, Morecambe, and Mr. Chorlton of Kendal, were the only people representing the profession present. The Athenæum was built in 1781 by a local syndicate, and was opened during the assizes and the races, when it did a tremendous business. The management were able to command the best talent, and amongst those who graced the boards on these occasions were Mrs. Siddons in 1802, Miss Mellon in 1804, Master Betty, "the young Roscius," with Betterton and Mrs. Glover, in 1805. In 1843 it was opened as a music hall. From 1849 to 1882 the Athenæum was the property of a private company, and entertainments of a high-class order were given. In 1882 the company was wound up, and in 1884 the hall came into the possession of Mr. H. Wilkinson, the present proprietor, who, after twenty-four years' service as entrepreneur, is about to retire into private life. Mr. Wilkinson rebuilt the stage end of the building in 1897, at a cost of over £1000, and added new dressing-room accommodation.

Mme. Sarah Bernhardt was recently championed by her son Maurice, who, considering that an article in an illustrated paper was offensive to his mother, sent his seconds to the author. The matter has been settled, however, by an apology by the writer.

SORE THROAT OR HOARSENESS
CURED IN A FEW HOURS.
Sir Morell Mackenzie, M.D., the Eminent Throat Specialist, constantly recommended Condy's Remedial Fluid to be diluted and used as a Gargle for speedily curing Sore Throat or Hoarseness.
Dr. Walford Harris, in his book entitled "The Throat and its Treatment," says: "I have found the 'Condy' and cold water gargle excellent, many cases being cured immediately."
The late Mr. Sims Reeves, the world-famed Tenor Vocalist, wrote: "'Condy' used as a Gargle clears the voice and braces up the uvula."
Condy's Remedial Fluid, sold by all Chemists at 1s. 1½d. Caution.—Insist on having "Condy's."

ALLEGED STAGE FRAUDS.

Somewhat curious were the remanded charges of false pretences heard on Wednesday at Bow-street against Charles Henry Houghton, of Theobald's-road, and Hedley Howard, alias Gay, a live stock dealer, of Waterloo-road.

Mr. Williamson (for the Treasury) said there would be other charges against both prisoners and against Gay alone in connection with a business known as "Gay's Fisheries," carried on by him in the Waterloo-road. The prisoners occupied an office on a third floor in the Strand, calling themselves the Empire Dramatic and Variety Agency.

Violet Crossley, of Ivanhoe House, Kenton-street, King's Cross, said that on March 15 last she saw the following advertisement in the Stage newspaper:—

"Wanted, 24 chorus ladies and gentlemen for leading West End music halls and suburbs. Ten weeks' engagement. Also ladies and gentlemen for dramatic parts."

She called at the address given in the Strand, and there saw Houghton. He eventually agreed to engage her for a sketch which, he said, was to be produced at the Palace Theatre and music halls in the suburbs, and told her she would have to pay £2 owing to the valuable dresses to be worn. She paid 6s. on account, and a few days later Houghton introduced her to Gay, who filled in a printed form of contract.

Houghton told her that the sketch was to be entitled An Affair of Honour. (Laughter.) The contract was signed, and she paid the balance of £1 14s. She had never secured any engagement through the prisoners.

The prisoners were again remanded.

Mr. Kent applied for a reduction of the bail in the case of Gay. He mentioned that his client had "some fisheries at Surbiton."

Detective-Inspector Drew: That is not so. Two years ago Gay rented a house in the country at £26 a year, and had a few holes in the back garden in which he was supposed to rear gold fish. They are now filled in with mould, and flowers are growing there beautifully.

The magistrate refused the application.

JIMMY SHIELDS, the well-known one-legged comedian and dancer, has secured a scena from the pen of Mr. Tony Ivesoh, entitled "An old veteran's advice to his son," in which Mr. Shields takes the character of an old soldier. Blarney and Kennard, after their success at the Foresters', return to London on May 7, to fulfil engagements on the Machaghten circuit.

THE LAW OF COPYRIGHT FOR ACTOR AND COMPOSER.
BY ALBERT A. STRONG, LL.B.
Copyright confusion is, like the poor, always with us, and as it seems likely to remain so until at least the crack of doom, it were well for all concerned, or likely to be concerned, to take immediate steps to secure a copy of Mr. Albert A. Strong's new work, entitled "The Law of Copyright." Mr. Strong is already favourably known to the profession for his text-book on "Dramatic and Musical Law," which, like his latest production, is published at "The Era" Office. "The Law of Copyright for Actor and Composer" essays to make clear to the non-legal mind what is—or, in some cases, what probably is—the law as to musical and dramatic copyright. The chapters on the Berne Convention and on the Chase Act, passed by the United States Congress last March, are full of interest.—Referee.

THE ERA ANNUAL, 1906.
"The Era" Annual again makes its welcome appearance. I say welcome because, as a work of theatrical reference, it is always handy to have in the house or office. In this connection I am glad to note that the lists of play-productions for the past year are given in better type and altogether in a much clearer manner. As of yore, there are sundry stories in prose and verse. The best of these include "Stage Superstitions," by Charles Warner; "Boy Bob at Sea," a poem by Louie Freear; "The Last Muster," a weird tragic military story, by Mr. Joseph Wilson, who has been a soldier himself; and "Nellie Bligh's Notices," a capital theatrical story, by Mr. Frank Desprez.—Referee, Jan. 28, 1906.

THE ERA

SERIOUS PLAYS AND THEIR PATRONS.

In one of Mr. BERNARD SHAW'S plays a dear old waiter at an inn says feelingly, "What I always think about an 'otel, Sir, is that it's such a refuge from 'ome!" The English theatre has long been regarded by the British public as a Refuge from Thought; and it is only recently that a kind of toleration has been extended to Ideas on the stage. Even now, we doubt if the enthusiasm and interest which Mr. SHAW'S pieces have evoked are not, to a great extent, assumed and fictitious. That is to say, if the Average Patron of the Court Theatre, for instance, really grasped Mr. SHAW'S meanings, he (the Average Patron) would be either intensely irritated or disgusted. But the A. P. is like the pantaloon in the pantomime, under the influence of the harlequin. He is turned round and round until he is giddy; he hears the flip-flap of the supple wand until he is entirely amazed and bemused; and then hey, presto! come the clown's merry quips and cranks, and the A. P. is in a condition, at the conclusion of the performance, to agree that it is "all werry capital," and that he has had his money's worth, and a little over.

In what other way can one account for the favour extended to Mr. SHAW'S pieces by members of the real British public? For there is no mistake about the author's intention. He is a proclaimed Socialist, and the object of his works is to push his hearers up in a corner and convert them to Socialism. Take Widowers' Houses as an example. Its moral is that improvement under the present individualistic arrangement of things is hopeless. We are all in the same boat, says Mr. SHAW, and it is hopeless to struggle as long as we are under the heel of capitalist production and social conventions. The young man in Widowers' Houses virtually "throws up the sponge" because he cannot contemplate a reduction in his income that would mean an immediate descent in the social scale. He becomes hopeless, and joins the ranks of the "blood-suckers." And Mr. SHAW is an opponent of the present marriage law, and an advocate of Free Love. In Candida the right of a woman to break the Seventh Commandment—"dispose of her person" is, we believe, the consecrate phrase—is insisted upon by being asserted by the "good woman" of the piece, a most lovable and admirable individual. She tells her husband "straight" that it is her love for him, and not any notions of right and wrong, that prevents her from "going wrong"—excuse the necessary euphemism—with any young man who would be improved by her embraces. Barring this love, she would as soon cohabit with the youth as lend him her shawl if he felt cold. Mrs. Warren's Profession is an indictment of the "sweated" labour system which is mercilessly severe and relentless. Mr. SHAW'S contention is that, until you have Socialism, present conditions will continue. As long as people are what they are, they will get married; as long as they marry they will have families; and as long as they have families the labour market will be overstocked, and you will have so many thousands of men and women always on the verge of starvation, and forced to live in kennels at exorbitant rents, to produce families of degenerates, and to sell their bodies for bread.

Now, the number of Socialists in England in the middle class—the class that keeps the Court Theatre, like other playhouses, "going"—is very small. In an anti-Socialist who sees Mr. SHAW'S drift and appreciates his intention, these plays of his should cause violent indignation and irritation. The anti-Socialist ought to be swearing or growling between the acts, even if he does not actually get up in the middle of the performance and protest excitedly against its continuance, as somebody did in that of The Promise of May. It should be still worse with an audience which witnesses the performance of a work like M. BRIEUX'S Maternité at the King's Hall on Monday afternoon. It is a horrible play for anyone to see who takes the theatre and what is done there seriously. Of course, M. BRIEUX exaggerates to emphasise. Things are not as bad, nor are all people as bad, as he depicts them in Maternité. But there is sufficient foundation in fact for his situations to send a whole audience away in hopeless despair—supposing they took the play seriously.

So far as we could observe, however, from the behaviour and attitude of the audience at the dispersion of the "house," Maternité went off the audience at the King's Hall at the matinée on Monday as water goes off a duck's back. English audiences apparently possess the power of interposing a shield of some kind between the appeal upon the stage and their minds. How else can we account for the patronage often bestowed upon adaptations of French plays in which the leading character is a jocund adulterer? Adultery is rare amongst the well-to-do middle classes in England; when it is discovered, the scandal and sensation created attest its unusualness. Yet the same sort of people who go and weep over a clean domestic drama, breathing marital virtue in every scene, will crowd in the next week to witness a piece the fun of which consists in men pursuing other men's wives, getting into difficulties, and having to hide or disguise themselves in consequence. It is this curious insensibility to logical conclusions, this extraordinary indifference, this resolute refusal to take the playhouse as anything but a toy and a box of puppets, that makes us less hopeful than Mr. JOHN HARE is of the ultimate establishment of an Endowed Theatre.

A LADIES' AFTERNOON.

The Eccentric Clubbers gave their lady friends a delightful afternoon at the Hotel Cecil on Tuesday, when one of those agreeable functions for which the club is renowned took place. The fine tones of Mr. Norfolk Megone's grand orchestra, which prefaced a very long programme, were much appreciated. Gintaro, that wonderfully clever Japanese equilibrist, opened the performance. Charming ballads were sung by Miss Annie Bartle, Miss José Collins, Mme. Mackenzie Fairfax, Miss May Gurney, and French songs by Miss Annie Mars, Mlle. Da Costa, Mlle. Ena Mady, and Mlle. Fougère. A duet was given by Miss Elsie Southgate and Miss Florence Venning, Mr. Frank Lawton whistled, Mr. George Mozart submitted a funny dissertation on hats, and Miss Millie Lindon gave in her best style, "Mary, the Dairymaid." Miss Ida Kahn, a fresh young singer, delighted all with a powerful rendering of the jewel song from Faust. Miss Kahn is a very successful pupil of Randegger, and, we venture to predict, will have a very fine career. Mr. Bransby Williams's imitations were greatly admired, the Follies quite sustained their well-earned reputation, and Cliff and his little dog proved very amusing. Mr. Charles Warner gave a recitation by Kipling; Miss Margaret Cooper pleased all present with that charming ditty, "A Grand Lady," rendered in her inimitable style; Miss Katie Moss sang very sweetly "Sing me to sleep," accompanying herself on the violin; and Miss Mabel Love gave a recitation in her most charming manner. The stewards have every reason to congratulate themselves on a very long programme most successfully carried out, the popular Mr. "Billy" White and J. A. Harrison especially distinguishing themselves in their efforts to promote the happiness of the afternoon.

MR. HARE ON ACTING.

The rising generation of aspirants to the stage is indeed fortunate. Quietly and steadily, a system of education is being organised which, when completed, will compare favourably with the method in vogue at the Paris Conservatoire. Imagine the advantage of final tuition by such masters of their art as Sir Squire Bancroft, Mr. Beerbohm Tree, Mr. George Alexander, Mr. Bourchier, or Mr. Pinero! Fancy the finishing polish which may be put upon a learner's style by such an expert in technique as Mr. John Hare, who, as is well known, is one of the most enthusiastic advocates, not only of an English Conservatoire but of an English Endowed Theatre.

"No," says Mr. Hare, settling himself into the easiest of easy chairs in his cosy study in Upper Berkeley-street, "I am not a fanatical admirer of French acting all round. Whatever estimate one may form of the leaders of the Paris stage, there can be no doubt that, in the grades below the very best, we have in England a vast deal more of individuality, of gift, and of genius than they have in France. Why," he continues, waxing enthusiastic, rising, and standing with his back to the fireplace, "whenever I go to a theatre here I am amazed, positively amazed, at the marvellous number of clever men—especially clever young men, I see acting. It does not matter where you go—it is the same in all departments. Take The Little Michus at Daly's. In the cast is Mr. George Graves, an admirable, a delightful comedian, who would shine in Sheridan or any high-class modern comedy. Take His Majesty's, the Haymarket, the St. James's, the Court, and the Garrick, and see the galaxy of mature and immature talent their respective managers have gathered round them. I need not mention names; they will occur to you in dozens. No, I say boldly, that in material, in the amount of talent in existence, we have the advantage of the French. Beneath their great geniuses we find a stratum of flat mediocrity, of young men who all appear to have been cast in the same mould and trained in the same school."

"And yet, if your Academy of Dramatic Art is brought to perfection, that is the ultimate result you may attain here?"

"I anticipated your objection; but, believe me, it will be a long time before we need trouble ourselves about over-training. Our position is at the opposite extreme. Our ability is scattered, crude, and often wasted. What we are trying to do at the Academy is simply to prepare young actors and actresses for the stage."

"And you think that can be done by tuition in classes?"

"My dear sir," says Mr. Hare impressively, "it has been done! Look at Miss Mary Barton, who made such a success in L'Enfant Prodigue at the matinée at His Majesty's last week. How long would she have spent offering her services to managers in the usual way before obtaining an engagement? How, indeed, could she ever have realised how great her gift was without the aid of the Academy? Remember, the object of all schooling is—or should be—not only to cultivate talent, but to discover it, to develop and draw it out. Previous attempts at an English Conservatoire have failed, chiefly because the basis of the enterprise was necessary. At the Academy we do not take all that comes to our net. Before being permitted to join the school, the aspirant must satisfy certain skilled judges that he or she is suitable. Thus we weed out the 'impossibles.' We are not obliged, in order to make both ends meet, to accept hopeless 'duffers' just because they can pay the fees. The Academy is "run" for love of art, not money. Do you think any money would induce men like Bancroft, and Tree, and Alexander, and Bourchier, and Pinero—

"And Mr. Hare?"

"Exactly, I don't except myself: do you think that any money consideration would make us devote a certain number of hours, as we are going to do, to teaching acting? But something had to be done. Between the decay of the provincial stock company system and the establishment of the Academy of Dramatic Art, the managers had to do, in the theatre, and at rehearsals the hard-labour of teaching technique, which is now done at the Academy by such fine instructors as Mr. Fisher White, Mr. Fred Kerr, and Mme. Cavalazzi. And how well they have been doing it was shown at the matinée, when these young people—who, mind you, had only been instructed in class, and on a miniature stage—went on to the vast boards of His Majesty's Theatre, and gave us, with complete confidence and ease, a performance which was equally excellent in miming, and in elocution, in gesture, attitude, and delivery."

"You are a 'stickler' for elocution, are you not?"

"I always was. When I was in management, and was rehearsing a new piece, do you know what I used to do towards the end of the rehearsing period? I used to seat myself in a private box, turn my back upon the stage, and take up a newspaper. I expected the delivery of the dialogue by my company—without the assistance, you understand, of the gesture and pantomime—to distract my attention entirely from the news of the day. When the enunciation got 'sloppy,' and the expression a little flat, I used to call out, 'I am beginning to enjoy my newspaper!' What we must do is to revive the Art of Diction. It is a fact that wherever a blank verse play is performed at a London theatre, the audience loses a large fraction of the words entirely. In the case of Shakespeare, the shortcoming is pierced out by knowledge of the text and the situations; in the case of a new play there is a good deal of guesswork. I want our young poet-dramatists to have every possible chance. What is the use of a man writing poetry if all the music of his verse is lost in its delivery by a subordinate artist? Remember that the finest bit of writing in Shakespeare—the description of Cleopatra's barge—falls, not to one of the principals, but to Enobarbus. I hope to see the time when plays, long and short, may be written with the intention of their succeeding by their poetry as much as by their situations—plays like those of Augier, De Musset, and François Coppée, only in good English verse instead of the French Alexandrine—an inferior medium, though, perhaps, a more facile one."

"You are to be envied, Mr. Hare, for your hopefulness."

"I hope for more; I hope for an English Endowed Theatre. Observe that the time is past when such an institution was absolutely 'laughed out of court.' It has come to the stage of being considered, and seriously discussed. Look at the success of the experiment at the Court Theatre! Think what the Lyceum was under Irving's management—a house to which one could take a foreign visitor with pride; a house with a recognised status, a cachet of superiority, a great reputation. Well, Irving dies, and it all 'makes itself air.' The traditions, the cachet, the career of the house as a theatre, evaporate. It is the same with the Court. It is entirely dependent upon the caprice or capital of an individual, or individuals. I hope some day to see a playhouse, permanent and artistic, where the aim will be absolutely uncommercial."

"You don't expect assistance from the State?"

"No, that's out of the question in a country where most of the ratepayers persist in regarding the theatre not as a most valuable educational medium, but purely as a means of diversion. Our only chance is that some Astor or Carnegie may arise to endow and establish an Art Theatre, where the question, 'Will it pay?' would never have to be put in considering a new production; where credit, not cash, would be the ruling influence, and where, in time, we might establish traditions, produce classics, and create a 'school' of the drama—in another sense from that in Gower-street."

"Which would, of course, be a valuable 'feeder' to your endowed playhouse?"

"Of course. There ought to be in London what there is in Paris; a house where if you are only staying in the capital for a week you are certain to be able to see a masterpiece adequately enacted; where the traditions of the past are maintained, and a high standard set of technique, of quality, and of ambition."

"And where would you expect to get your audiences?"

"Where? From the great minority of the cultivated folk, who at present abstain from the theatre almost entirely; from the people who go to the Comédie Française, and the Odéon when they are in Paris, but refuse to take the London theatre seriously."

The real difficulty in dealing with the translation of M. Brieux's play Maternité, which was presented at the Stage Society's matinée at the King's Hall, Covent Garden, on Monday, is that it is a challenge to the discussion of a subject which it is disgraceful to talk about in the presence of ladies. Either one has to be content with evading M. Brieux's attack on Society, or one has to meet it; and this would involve going to the bottom of the subject. Paraphrases and synonyms are useless in this instance; and M. Brieux has "got up his case" very cleverly. Unless you march round the position he has taken up, you must take it by a siege involving something like a pamphlet or an article in a scientific review. Perhaps it is better simply to describe the play, and leave the refutation or support of M. Brieux's theories to students of sociology.

M. Brieux's contention is that the limitation of families by any means should be tolerated, if not encouraged, by society in every possible way; and that motherhood, even if the child is illegitimate, should be revered and respected. As a "rider" to his proposition, he puts in a claim for the wife's right to a free disposal of her person as regards child-bearing. At present, the wife, according to M. Brieux, is a mere brood-mare, from whom the husband may extract as many colts or fillies as he desires. We are shown a spouse of this sort, Lucie Brignac, who does not love her husband. How should she, indeed, when he has used her three confinements to escape from his allegiance, and, as Emilia puts it, "Pour his treasures into foreign laps." Here we have the wife refusing to bear any more children, and the husband insisting on her having them.

The second thread of the story leads up to the old grievance of the severity of society on the seduced girl, and its indulgence of her dastardly betrayer. The innocence of Annette, Lucie's sister, has been taken advantage of by a young man named Jacques Bernin, whose mother explains to Lucie that she—Madame Bernin—and her husband have had such debasing experiences in amassing a competence that their son, in order to avoid similar trials, must marry a woman with money. As Annette is dowerless, she cannot wed Jacques. When it is discovered that Annette is enceinte, Lucie demands that the birth of the child shall take place in the house, where the poor girl may have every care and sympathy. The husband refuses his consent to a course which would injure his social position; and Lucie leaves her home indignantly with Annette. In the end, the birth of the child is prevented by surgical means; and the woman who performed the operation is placed in the dock at the Assizes. Her trial involves the examination and touching excuses of a working-man and his wife, who have practised similar means of preventing an addition to the number of the mouths they have to feed, and the poor "board school" mistress, who has found large families unpopular with the authorities. Finally, the Court dissolves amidst the fiery denunciations by the prisoners of Society, and especially the "men."

The piece was acted with great care and genuine ability by the well-selected cast. Miss Suzanne Sheldon played Lucie Brignac with admirable intelligence, and looked the part thoroughly well; Mr. Dennis Eadie, as the completely vain, selfish, and pompous sous-préfet was cleverly made-up, and acted with clear and acute characterisation; and Miss Muriel Ashwynne put deep and poignant intensity into her pathetic performance as Annette. Miss Lilian M. Revell delivered Mme. Bernin's sharp definition of her views with commendable distinctness and severity; and Mr. Fred Grove was excellent as the plump and prosperous Pierre Poiret, the silly Jacques Poiret being well represented by Mr. Trevor Lowe. Mr. Kenyon Musgrave, as the President, was the essence of official insensibility; and Mr. Blake Adams and Miss Eily Malyon powerfully and graphically depicted the hopeless working-man and his wife; Mr. C. Herbert Hewetson speaking out strongly and well as the Avocat, and Miss Italia Conti representing Marie Gaubert very judiciously. Mr. Vincent Sternroyd, neatly made up, was effective as M. Chevillot; and Miss Claire Greet showed well-restrained power as Madame Thomas. Mr. Charles Dodsworth distinguished himself by a telling piece of resolute argument as Laurent. The piece was applauded with enthusiasm by the members of the Stage Society; and—but, perhaps, on the whole, we had better "leave it at that."

VARIETY GOSSIP.

Miss Vesta Tilley sails for New York, per s.s. Cedric, from Liverpool on April 20, to fulfil six weeks' engagement with Mr. Percy G. Williams. Miss Tilley will be all the time at the Colonial Theatre, New York, but if the weather does not grow too warm, she will remain an extra week or two to play at Mr. Williams's Orpheum Theatre, Brooklyn. This gentleman has the exclusive right of Miss Tilley's services on this trip, but it is on the cards that she may return to America in 1907 to play the Keith Circuit, in conjunction with Mr. Williams's New York houses. Miss Tilley is to have the highest salary ever paid to an individual European artist in America.

Mr. Walter de Frece, who now controls fourteen or fifteen hippodromes and variety palaces in Great Britain and Ireland, will accompany his wife (Miss Vesta Tilley) on her forthcoming trip, and will be very pleased to hear from American variety artists desirous of visiting England where and when he can see their acts. He will be able to offer a six months' engagement to suitable turns. Letters addressed care of Percy G. Williams, Esq., will be duly forwarded.

Messrs. Fred and Michael Abrahams will again be seen at the Queen's, Poplar, which has been redecorated, and will reopen on Easter Monday with Mr. Peter Conroy, late of the Canterbury, as musical director, and Mr. Jack Woolf as manager.

Mr. Harry Lauder has been unable to answer to his number at his various engagements this week, and somewhat disquieting reports regarding his health were prevalent. We are, however, assured by Mr. Joseph Wilson that the famous Scotch comedian's absence from the Tivoli programme will be of a temporary nature. He has contracted influenza, and is also suffering from slight bronchial trouble, but hopes to resume work in the course of a few days.

Mr. George Robey has given us his confidences as "The Mayor of Muckemdyke," as "The Dresser," and as the Lost Property Office official; and this Easter, on his welcome return to the West End, after his immensely successful pantomime engagement at Liverpool, he will entertain us with "The Village Beadle," a favourite character in many a melodrama. He will be singing on Thursday at Mr. W. W. Kelly's matinée for the Liverpool Theatres Gala Fund, taking the night train to the Lancashire metropolis immediately after the conclusion of his turns, and returning in time for his engagements.

Mr. Thomas Barrasford has offered to place the Lyceum Theatre—the scene of her many triumphs—at the disposal of the executive committee of the Ellen Terry presentation fund for a special matinée.

So as to avoid clashing with another premiere, the new revue, Venus 1906, will be produced at the Empire on Tuesday, April 17, instead of on the 18th, as previously arranged. The revue, which is by George Grossmith, jun., and being produced by Mr. Tom Terriss, will be in four scenes. In it Miss Daisy Cordell will play a classic Venus; Miss Elizabeth Firth, a typical Gibson girl, who is the Venus of the present day; and Miss Sybil Arundale will impersonate Lord Percy Pall Mall, Mr. R. Tremayne will be Vulcan, and Messrs. W. H. Berry and Harry Grattan will play a number of parts which have not yet been specified by the author There is, of course, a chorus, and the regulation number of supers as in a "sketch."

Next Monday—the Coliseum Grand Revue! What will the celebrated French writer, M. de Cottens, show us? That remains to be seen, of course. In the meantime he promises that his "magic mirror of the times," his "living newspaper," his "pot-pourri of fun" shall consist of seven scenes: The Actuality Club, Earl's Court, The Boulevards, The Zoo, A Lady's Socialist Meeting, The Frocadero, and the grand finale, The Jubilee of the Victoria Cross. The Theatrical Supper Party takes place very appropriately in The Frocadero scene, and among the successes of the year present will be the charming representatives of The White Chrysanthemum, The Beauty of Bath, The Scarlet Pimpernel, The Spring Chicken, The Little Michus, and others.

The chief parts will be played by Tom E. Murray as Compère, Miss Billie Burke as Commère, Mr. Arthur Conquest, fresh from his triumphs at Drury-lane, George Le Clerq, the Trumpeting Girls, the Rocking Girls, the Dandies, George Lashwood, Bella and Bijou, and George Lupino. Over 300 beautiful women take part in the principal spectacles.

The Earl's Court scene will be a blaze of colour—a really faithful presentation of the beautiful Western Gardens and beautiful buildings so well known to Londoners. Every device of the scenic artist and engineer has been utilised to make this scene the triumph of the revue, though the finale in which the decorations of nations is the principal feature should undoubtedly come in for the highest praise. Mr. Walter Slaughter has had the composition and arrangement of the music, the lyrics are by Messrs. Roland Carse and Arthur Wimperis, and Mr. Will Bishop has rehearsed the entire production.

The Palace Theatre directors at their last meeting decided on a new departure. Hitherto (except at matinées) the lowest priced reserved seat in the house has cost 5s., but from Easter week it will be possible to book the 3s. seats in the Royal circle.

Mr. C. Geraldo, of the Geraldos, and Messrs. Bliss and Bliss, comedians, are the latest to swell the ranks of the Terriers' Association. They were elected on Sunday last.

The Terriers and their friends, numbering over sixty, had their annual Good Friday dinner and concert at the Hôtel Boulogne, Gerrard-street, W. A most enjoyable evening was spent, commencing at 7 p.m., and lasting till midnight. Mr. Archie Howells presided at the piano, and Mr. F W. Millis, the popular ventriloquist, occupied the chair. The arrangements were admirably carried out by the secretary, Mr. Harry Lester.

At the last meeting of the Music Hall Benevolent Fund the committee investigated twenty-eight applications for assistance, and relief was granted in every case.

Among the novelties that are to be produced at Easter, a special note must be made of the production at the Oxford by Fred Karno's company of The Smoking Concert. If this be as funny as His Majesty's Guests, The Mumming Birds, or Moses and Son, presented by the same company, then we anticipate a long and enduring success for it. It will have every possible advantage that good stage-management and liberal mounting can give it at the Oxford.

Miss Victoria Monks' two new songs, namely, "Every little bit of help's worth a deal of pity" and "Hullo! who's there?" have been secured for publication by Messrs. Sheard and Co. Both are from the joint pens of Messrs. Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford.

We regret to learn that Mr. Walter Munroe, the well-known Irish comedian, has, during the past two weeks, been lying dangerously ill at Edinburgh with pleurisy and congestion of the lungs. His doctor states that some weeks must elapse before he will be able to get about again.

Building operations in connection with the New Coliseum at Portsmouth are about to be commenced. The architects for the new house are Messrs. Frank Matcham and Co., of London, and as Messrs. Moss' Empires, Limited, are associated and immediately interested, success may be assured.

The King's Theatre, Gateshead, will reopen its doors on Easter Monday to the public—this time as a music hall on the two-houses-a-night principle. Mr. Joe May is the new manager. The Queen's Theatre, in the same town, will also open as a variety house on the same night.

The news of the death of Mr. Leonard Vidal, late acting-manager of the Leicester Palace Theatre, will be received with sincere regret by a large number of members of the variety profession. The sad event happened with painful suddenness at the residence of the deceased gentleman in Doncaster-road, Leicester, on the 5th inst. On the Tuesday evening he was present at the performance at the Leicester Pavilion. Before his connection with variety the late Mr. Vidal was associated with the D'Oyly Carte Répertoire Company in the provinces, and was for some time with Mr. J. B. Mulholland as acting-manager at the Grand Theatre, Nottingham. He was only forty-five years of age.

The management of the Hastings Hippodrome has wisely abandoned the idea of resuming at Easter the practice of giving two performances nightly. This determination has been arrived at in consequence of the unanimous wish of the patrons.

At the Hastings Hippodrome, on Friday, the 6th inst., much interest was aroused by a game of billiards played in the lions' cage by the manager, Mr. Albert Mathams, and Mr. George Gooding, during Miss Ella's visit there. Although Miss Ella was present, the lions were at first rather restless. Mr. Mathams won by 3 a game of 25 up, in which he made a break of 22.

The Empire Theatre, Liverpool, is still to exist as a one-show-a-night music hall. As was reported in our columns last week, the management had an idea about two shows and an excise licence, but the authorities thought otherwise. There was provision for waiting crowds to be made, and the Licensing Bench had views on the matter. The result was that the application was withdrawn, and the Empire will go on in the old sweet way.

At the Empire, Bristol, on Saturday night, after the final performance, Mr. Frank Weston, the manager, appeared behind the footlights, and expressed thanks for the generous support that had been accorded by the Bristol public to the Empire Music Hall. In all businesses, however, there was frequently a change, and he had to announce a change of proprietorship there.

The Empire would be carried on (from Easter Monday next) by a very excellent firm, headed by Mr. B. Pearce Lucas, of the New Bedford Palace, London, and several provincial houses of entertainment. The hall would be redecorated and re-upholstered, from top to bottom, by the well-known firm of Maple and Son, of London, in co-operation with Messrs. W. Cowlin and Son, of Bristol. A new fireproof wall-paper would be used at that hall for the first time in any place of entertainment. The hall, Mr. Weston mentioned, would be reopened on Easter Monday. The staff demonstrated the esteem in which Mr. Weston is held by presenting him with a large photographic group, and Mr. Wilkie Bard also presented him with a case of silver plate.

The many friends of Mr. Percy Aldin, who to-night (Saturday) finishes his engagement at the Southampton Hippodrome as acting-manager, intend to give him a good send-off. He has been compelled to resign his position owing to ill-health, and intends to retire from the profession altogether. During his short connection with the "Hippo," he has made hosts of friends, who, one and all, wish him a speedy recovery, and he and his wife the best of luck in the future. Mr. H. P. Howell succeeds Mr. Aldin as acting-manager .

Mr. Sydney Paxton, who has so successfully managed the Grand Theatre, Southampton, for the past three years, will sever his connection with Mr. Mouillot and Southampton in the autumn. Until October he will continue the management of the Grand and Hippodrome as hitherto. We understand that Mr. Paxton's arrangements beyond the autumn are not yet complete. That he will be missed in Southampton is to put the matter mildly, for he has endeared himself to local playgoers by his geniality and astuteness. Mr. Paxton is a model manager, and his departure will be regretted by all.

Grosvenor H. Hamilton, of Hamilton's Excursions, reopens the Grand Theatre of Varieties, Manchester, on Easter Monday, with an attractive programme. He should do well, as the Grand is one of the oldest variety houses in Cottonopolis.

Mr. Fred Coles, the popular acting-manager of the Lyric Theatre of Varieties, Liverpool, was, by the kindness of Mr. Henry C. Arnold, lessee and manager, accorded a bumper benefit on Thursday, the 5th inst. His many friends from far parts of Liverpool and district crowded to help, and a financial success is certain. We sincerely hope that his health will soon improve.

Croydon's new Empire Palace of Varieties will not open to-night, as previously announced. The Croydon Council, at their last meeting, would not issue the licence, owing to the building being then unfurnished. As the Council do not meet again until the 30th inst., the opening is postponed until early next month.

The details of the story of how Arthur Baxter, aged 23, a gymnast, of Essex-street, Old Trafford, came by his death, were given to the Manchester City Coroner (Mr. E. A. Gibson) and a jury on Monday, when the inquest was held. Baxter, whose professional name was Hilton, was last Wednesday morning, the 4th, shot out of a cannon at the Ardwick Empire, whilst qualifying as understudy to the "Human Bullet," Professor Cassini. The young man failed to catch the bar of the trapeze, and, falling awkwardly into the net, injured his spine. Death took place at the Royal Infirmary on Friday evening, the 6th inst. The jury, after a consultation, returned a verdict of accidental death, brought about by the fall into the net.

At the Palace Theatre, Halifax, on Tuesday night, occurred an incident which created some alarm amongst those behind the scenes, and yet was to some extent unnoticed by those in front. Dr. Walford Bodie, now appearing at that place of amusement, with special curative demonstrations for paralysis, was engaged upon one of these experiments in the second house, and was experimenting with current of high voltage power, when a short circuit was established, and an explosion occurred. Dr. Bodie was badly burned. His moustache and eyebrows were singed, as well as his face and head injured. He adopted measures which secured momentary relief, and continued his experiments, the audience evidently being under the impression that what had occurred was part of the "turn." This, however, was not the case. Dr. Bodie had experienced a nasty shock, and some very painful burns. Still he was present on Wednesday evening at the Palace Theatre, and also during the remainder of the week.

The annual meeting of the London Entertainments Protection Society was held on Wednesday, when the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—President, Mr. Henri Gros; vice-president, Mr. George Adney Payne; treasurer, Mr. Joseph Davis; hon. secretary, Mr. J. L. Graydon; auditors, Mr. Henry Tozer and Mr. Joseph Davis; standing counsel, Mr. Walter Payne; solicitor, Mr. Philip J. Rutland; and architect, Mr. Walter Emden.

Mr. Leo Dryden had a lucky escape from serious accident on Saturday night last, when one of the horses attached to his brougham became restive, and urged on its wild career along the Brixton-road. The animal fell at Brixton Station, and both artist and coachman escaped unhurt.

Mr. Harry Bawn has been re-elected President of the Grand, Clapham, Cycling Club and also Vice-President of the Chelsea Cricket Club, which he founded when established at the local Palace as acting-manager.

Mr. Will Evans always catches the whim of the passing hour, and knowing generally how exercised in its mind is the British public over the story by Mr. William Le Queux in the Daily Mail of "The Invasion of 1910," he has determined to give a parody of the idea. With only a quarter of an hour to develop the idea, it would be thought that the popular comedian would be handicapped; but we make no doubt that he will contrive to be funny. He will produce the novelty at the Metropolitan.

Some eighteen months since we prophesied that the natural development of what is called the "song-scena" would necessitate the establishment by every far-seeing manager of a variety theatre of a small trained contingent of singing and dancing ladies. Since then Mr. Oswald Stoll has opened the Coliseum with a choir of forty; Mr. Alfred Butt has presented the Palace Girls in various productions; and now Mr. Frank Glenister in connection with two novelties, which will be presented by Mr. Ambrose Thorne at the London Pavilion, announces the Pavilion Girls.

It was whilst studying in St. Petersburg to become an engineer that Hackenschmidt spent some part of his unoccupied time in gymnasium work. Such progress did he make that he had a shot at record breaking in weight-lifting, and in a little time he had no fewer than twelve records to his name. This was only ten years ago, and since then he has been busily employed defeating the champions of different countries, until to-day he stands the unconquered champion of the world. His first wrestling match was against the Frenchman Paul Pons, the then champion of the world, seven years ago. The Russian won after a keen contest of forty-six minutes. Hackenschmidt is an enthusiastic cyclist and a good swimmer. Most men would consider skipping an effeminate kind of amusement, and yet the Russian finds that it is excellent for keeping all the muscles in condition, and attributes to it the very noticeable quickness of his movements.

Mr. Gus Elen, who returns to town on Easter Monday, to take up his number at several re-engagements, has been spending the past few weeks with the rod and fly after the wily trout on the banks of the beautiful Exe, his headquarters being at the quaint old-world Somersetshire village of Dulverton. Mr. Elen is a lover of nature, and revels in the morning anthems of the chaffinch and wren. He loves to find the primrose "by the river's brim," to pluck the early blossoms of the wild flowers from the hedges, and to make just a nodding acquaintance with that beautiful, but exceedingly shy bird, the kingfisher. He has followed the hunt after the stag on his beautiful 10-horsepower Panhard car, which answers splendidly up and down the hills and dales, and will return to town with the health bloom on his cheek, and happy recollections of a delightful holiday.

Miss Lil Hawthorne, who starts on the Stoll Suburban Empire circuit at Easter, was born in Texas, the land of the cowboy, where her father had a large cattle ranch. Miss Hawthorne became a fearless rider, and would mount the most spirited horses. No doubt this physical training helped to give her the clear, healthy complexion and fine figure she now possesses. At the age of fourteen she, with her two sisters, owing to financial reverses, had to seek their fortune, and found it on the stage. They went to New York to a variety hall, where the agent for the late Chas. Morton made them a tempting offer to appear in London, where the charming trio became very celebrated in their pretty scena, The Willow-pattern Plate. When her sisters returned to America Miss Lil remained, and continued the same success as a single turn. She has played in any number of pantomimes as "principal boy." Her chief successes have been "Kitty Mahone," "Rosie O'Grady," and "I'll be your sweetheart."

Miss Maree Kean, comedienne, is by way of making her début at the Oxford this afternoon, when she will sing, "I'll ask mother if I may," a number from the pens of Harrington and Tate. Miss Kean is a descendant of the famous Edmund. Her father, John Taylor, was the first manager who took touring companies round the West of England. When she was but eight years of age, the late Mercer Simpson, of the Theatre Royal, Birmingham, made little Marée a very flattering offer, which she was not allowed to accept. She has hereditary talent, and has the glorious privilege of youth, being just out of her teens.

Mr. Albert Gilmer, the popular manager of the Oxford, at the installation meeting of the Willing Lodge, on the 5th inst., at the Hotel Cecil, was presented with a handsome Past Master's jewel on completion of his year of office as Worshipful Master. Mr. Gilmer was also cordially congratulated on his brilliant work during the year.

Miss Molly Seymour, who has for the past few weeks been hard at work rehearsing a pleasing little novelty in a duo-scena, has, upon the eve of production, been so unfortunate as to contract measles, and will have to postpone her engagements for four or five weeks.

The largest man in the world, Giant Machnow, will make his reappearance at the London Hippodrome on Easter Monday. Arrangements have been made for him to take exercise early every morning on a new motor omnibus. He will arrive in London at mid-day on Easter Sunday, and, after touring round London will probably make a trip on the Baker-street and Waterloo Electric Railway, visit the Zoo, and retire to his quarters in close proximity to the stage-door of the Hippodrome. It is rather doubtful if he will be seen outdoors, except for early morning fresh air, during the whole of his stay.

Miss Florrie Gallimore will, on Monday next, introduce at all her London engagements, to wit, the Oxford, Canterbury, and Euston, the popular number with which she has been so phenomenally successful during her recent three months' provincial tour, viz., the late Mr. George Le Brunn's last song, "Remember me to mother, dear," published by the Monte Carlo Publishing Co., in their "Sixpenny Successes" series.

The Theatre Royal, Darlington—licensee and manager Mr. Jas. Bell—will on April 30 be transformed into a first-class music hall, with two performances nightly at 7 and 9.

Mr. Frederic Bavon, general-manager for Mr. Frank Macnaghten, will be given a grand testimonial benefit at the Britannia Theatre (which has been kindly lent by Mr. Thomas Barrasford) on Friday evening, April 27. The arrangements are in the hands of Mr. James Fortune, of Fortune and Granville.

It is highly gratifying to learn that the net pecuniary result of the recent matinée at the Alhambra for the immediate relief of the sufferers by the Courrières Colliery Disaster exceeds even the substantial sum which Mr. Alfred Moul (acting as honorary treasurer to the Fund) announced tentatively on the occasion of the performance. That the receipts reached the handsome total of £538 2s. 6d. is exceedingly satisfactory; and, in acknowledging in a letter, couched in warm terms of grateful appreciation, the receipt of a cheque for this amount, His Excellency the French Ambassador further intimates that the money has already been applied to the service for which it was raised.

The following is a copy of the letter:—

Ambassade de France, à Londres,
Avril 6, 1906.

Monsieur,—Par votre lettre du 5 courant, vous avez bien voulu me faire parvenir un cheque de £538 2s. 6d. montant des recettes obtenues à la representation donnée, par vos soins à l'Alhambra, pour venir en aide aux victimes de la catastrophe do Courrières.

En vous accusant reception de cet envoi, je tiens à vous exprimer de nouveau ma profonde gratitude au nom de nos malheureux compatriotes frappés par ce terrible malheur.

Je n'ai pas manqué de leur faire transmettre aussitôt votre don genereux.

Monsieur Alfred Moul,
Directeur de l' Alhambra.

A new music hall comedian has arisen in Mr. Arthur Laceby, who has been re-engaged to appear at the Lyceum during Easter week. Those who saw this actor in Bernard Shaw's play of Major Barbara at the Court Theatre would have found it difficult to recognise him the other night at the fine variety theatre mentioned above. In a miserable visage he discussed many subjects, and gave one the impression that everything depressed him. He has studied the anatomy of melancholy, and has made it very funny.

Notwithstanding the "barring" clause, Mr. Tom Barrasford seems to be able to compile at the Lyceum a programme which, apart from any ordinary merit, possesses one particular feature, viz., that hardly a turn on the bill has been seen in London before. The Easter attractions will be of this nature, and we are informed that it is Mr. Barrasford's system to wait for his provincial managers' weekly reports before finally deciding what artists shall make their London début in the following week.

Thiel's Pompons, who have proved so successful in town, are about to go on a short provincial tour, visiting Chatham, Eastbourne, Hastings, Bristol, &c., after which they commence their season at Roker, Sunderland, returning to town in October.

The "first séance of the Magic Circle" was given at the home of mystery, St. George's Hall, on Tuesday night. "The Magic Circle" is a newly-formed club for amateurs and professionals interested in the art of conjuring, whose intent is frankly to deceive. There was a long programme, contributed to by some of the leading professors of the art, and eagerly followed by the amateurs. The performers included Mr. J. N. Maskelyne, Mr. David Devant, Mr. Nate Leipsic, Mr. Max Sterling, Joad Heteb, and others.

Miss Millicent Marsden, who is now giving such a remarkably clever rendering of the part of Lola in Cavalleria Rusticana at the Coliseum, and who recently was singing so successfully the pictorial song "In Dreamland" at the same house and playing Lange in Madame Angot, has had the unique professional experience of having begun her stage career at the early age of six in the Gilbert and Sullivan children's opera companies, since when she has never once been out of an engagement, having made what is practically one continuous run of over twenty years.

La Belle Atalanta, who has recently returned from her highly successful forty weeks' tour in America, will open at the Pavilion, Glasgow, on April 16, with her dainty and fascinating disrobing act on the wire. She will return later to commence a re-engagement at the London Pavilion.

Mr. Eugene Stratton's latest success, "De White-Washed Coon," written and composed by Messrs. John P. Harrington and Jas. W. Tate, has this week been issued by the Monte Carlo Publishing Co., in their "Sixpenny Successes," and has already commanded an immense sale, being the first song this eminent comedian has ever consented to have published in sixpenny sheet music form.

Mr. Hubert Bartlett, of Muir and Bartlett, has written for the Becketts a comedy duologue, entitled Two's Company, which will shortly be produced at a West End hall.

Mr. David Day has this week secured two novel "free" songs for immediate publication, entitled respectively "My Summer Butterfly" and "Grow, Little Mushroom, Grow," two numbers especially adaptable to seaside entertainers, &c. Both are by Messrs. Mellor, Lawrance, and Gifford.

Miss Lelia Rozn has thoroughly enjoyed her three weeks' holiday at Bournemouth, and will present her new scena at the Palace, Manchester, on Easter Monday, for one week.

Miss Ethel Gordon Paull will, in conjunction with Mr. Charles Hartley, begin a series of afternoon dramatic and song recitals, commencing this afternoon, at St. Leonards, going on to other seaside resorts. Miss Gordon Paull will return to town each evening to take up her part of the Hon. Mrs. St. Ozier in The King's Minister.

The Happy Valley, Llandudno, the resort of thousands of holiday-makers during the summer, is to be let for minstrel performances as from Easter, 1907, and tenders are invited by the Urban District Council for a lease of the ground.

William Heckford, 54, waiter, Kimmerton-street, Knightsbridge, was charged, before Mr. Denman, at Marlborough-street Police Court, on Wednesday, with stealing a diamond ring, of the value of £4, belonging to Mr. Philip Yorke, theatrical manager, of 36, Gerrard-street, Soho. The prosecutor said that formerly the prisoner had been in his employment as a messenger. About Feb. 24 he missed the ring in question, and hearing that the accused was wearing it, the police were communicated with, and he was arrested. Detective Barrell, C division, said he arrested the prisoner that day (Wednesday) in Gerrard-street. When told the charge he admitted the theft, and produced the duplicate relating to the ring, which he had pawned in Wardour-street. On the prisoner's room being searched several articles alleged to have been stolen from the Hyde Park Hotel were found. The prisoner was remanded.

Messrs. Frank Rendle and Neil Forsyth's successful series of fancy dress balls at Covent Garden ended on Friday the 6th. Two of the special prizes were awarded to Mr. Willie Clarkson for his "Roseland" and "In the Far East."

Mr. Norman Bowyer, who is scoring such a notable success as a young swell in Mr. Charles Carey's production After the Ball, is the youngest son of that genial "Savage" Mr. Fred Bowyer, who has written so worthily both for the theatrical and variety stages, his Little Stowaway being one of the notable successes of the nineteenth century.

At the London meeting of the International Artists' Lodge at the Hotel Provence, Leicester-square, on Sunday, April 8, Bro. 1312 was elected to the chair. There were fourteen members present. Bro. 1365 proposed that the meeting should pass a resolution to the effect that pamphlets should be sent out in small parcels to members in different parts of the country, with a letter asking for kind co-operation and help in making the I.A.L. known. This motion was seconded by Bros. 978 and passed. A member asked questions as to the payment by the lodge of costs in cases which are taken up, and was not at all clear as to the reason why in some cases the member had to pay. It was explained that this was owing to the fact of the member having practically taken the case out of the hands of the lodge by effecting a compromise himself.

Messrs. John P. Harrington and Jas. W. Tate have this week been busy on a new musical, farcical comedietta, the principal part in which will be sustained by that well-known and talented comedian, Mr. T. W. Volt, so long associated with The Lady Slavey; and principal comedian at the Hippodrome, recently, in Among the Stars.

A young tamer named Martha Lahire was killed by a leopard in a menagerie at Lyons on Sunday. She had only just been married to M. Lahire, with whose menagerie she had for some time travelled as principal girl. The animal had not been under her control very long, and was so savage that no one but Mme. Lahire could do anything with it. She had put it through its paces, and was turning to leave the cage, when the best sprang at her, burying its claws in her breast. Before she could be released she had been killed.

The Monte Carlo Publishing Co. have recently acquired from Mr. J. F. Lambe a new Irish song, written and composed by him, entitled "Widow Doolin," which, although it has only been accepted a few days, has already been "placed" by the firm with nearly every pierrot troupe of note for the forthcoming season.

The 458th meeting of the Music Hall Artists' Railway Association was held at Wellington-street on Tuesday, when there were present Messrs. Joe O'Gorman (in the chair), J. Collinson, Fred Herbert, Charles Pastor, George Preston, Jeff Vendome, and C. Douglas Stuart (secretary). The minutes of the previous meeting were passed, and correspondence was disposed of. A letter thanking the committee for their vote of sympathy on the death of her late husband was read from Mrs. Proctor, in whose hands the agency at Plymouth is to remain. The case of a member who wanted to pay a portion of his renewal fees out of a refund due to him was considered, and it was decided such a proposition could not be entertained, and that the member must forward his subscription in the usual way.

Mr. Charles Coborn commented in a letter on the discourtesy with which railway officials were occasionally treated by members of the Association, mentioning one instance in particular, and the secretary was instructed to write a letter of warning to the offending person. A case which had given rise to some complications was submitted to the committee. Two members had written to a certain town to have their names placed on the sheet to make up a party about to travel to London, but in the meantime one of the artists who formed the number arranged to go to town with a theatrical company, and withdrew his name from the sheet. He was applied to to have his name restored, but refused, and the others were consequently obliged to pay full fare. Subsequently he consented to make up the party, and telephoned to the artists first alluded to, but they had already purchased their tickets. Two of the gentlemen concerned appeared before the committee and stated their case, and it was agreed to ask the railway company to refund the difference, in default of which the member who refused to make up the party should be held liable.

The secretary reported the receipt of a cheque for £50 from the Ocean Accident Company in fulfilment of their promise to pay an ex gratia compensation to the mother of the late Mr. Allen, of the Donaldson Brothers, and he was instructed to forward the amount to the lady. Twenty-nine new members had joined during the week, and the financial statement showed the amount received to be £30 5s. 6d. Mr. George Ashton, of the Pavilion, Greenock, was appointed local agent. The next meeting of the committee was fixed for Thursday, instead of Tuesday, in Easter Week.

Mr. Ernest Shand is making his satirical ditty, "Look at the weather we're having," his pièce de résistance at all his turns, the Oxford included, on Easter Monday. The Monte Carlo Publishing Co., of Berners-street, who are issuing this song in their "Sixpenny Successes," may be congratulated on having secured one of the biggest "winners" of the year.

The usual monthly meeting of the committee of the Music Hall Sick Fund was held at the York Hotel, York-road, on Wednesday last. Mr. W. J. Wainratta (vice-president) occupied the chair, and there were also present Messrs. Frank Heath (hon. treasurer), W. Brisco, G. Desmonti, and W. West. The business was of a purely formal character, and the meeting closed with the usual vote of thanks to the chairman.

Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter are publishing a new song "I ain't a-goin' to work for you no more," written and composed by Mr. Charles Collins, to whose fertile brain the world is chiefly indebted for that immense success, "I wouldn't leave my little wooden hut for you," Mr. Collins being, in fact, the absolute originator of the idea, the principal author of the words, and the composer of the music of that song. The new ditty, which is expected to rival the popularity of its predecessor, will first be sung by Miss Daisy Dormer.

The case of Clifford v. Neal came up at Westminster County Court on Tuesday, Mrs. Clifford claiming wages in consequence of her sudden dismissal by a proprietor of aerial ballets. She was première danseuse in the aerial ballet which was part of Fred Karno's pantomime at Manchester. She did not attend a rehearsal because it was suddenly "called" to take place between the afternoon and evening performances. The defence was that the defendant had supplied aerial ballets for twelve years to sixty-nine pantomimes. Specialities rehearsed when they could. For safety's sake it was imperative there should be a rehearsal at each place to test the wires; and on this occasion it was arranged for at the first opportunity, but the plaintiff led a rebellion, and four girls "struck" with her. Having heard evidence on both sides as to custom Judge Woodfall found for the plaintiff with costs.

LONDON VARIETY THEATRES.

THE CANTERBURY.

Smart duologues, nicely balanced with song and dance, and with just a little plot, are always acceptable at the variety theatres, and Mr. Walter Tilbury's new and original production When the Cat's Away, which was produced at the Canterbury on Monday, fulfils all the conditions necessary for such trifles. In it fun and sparkling music are pleasingly allied. Of the plot, we need say no more than that Binks, a musical page-boy, being placed in the household of a burlesque actress, is caught by her in the very act of playing on the grand piano during her supposed absence. A bright thought strikes her. Binks may be usefully employed in playing the accompaniments of her songs and rehearsing her for the production of a musical comedy. This slight imbroglio—if it may be so called—is the prelude to a series of solos and duets that are bright in character and engaging in their melody. Mr. Walter Tilbury (the author of the trifle) and Miss Daisy Forde, his charming partner, are happily associated in the duet "Sweet love, come away," and a number that bears an up-to-date topical complexion is entitled "If." Mr. Tilbury scores a great success with a Tariff Reform song, in which the following prophecy is made:—"There will be work for every man when we impose that duty." It is written as a parody of "The Death of Nelson." Braham's melody fits the words exceedingly well, and the number, which is admirably rendered, makes a decided hit. Miss Daisy Forde looks decidedly fascinating in the tunic and tights of a principal boy, and sings and dances effectively. When the Cat's Away should certainly find much acceptance from music-hall audiences, as it is a playlet that has plenty of musical charm and brightness.

A new mimic has arisen in the person of Miss Lilian Elfreda, who is making her first appearance at the Canterbury. She is an artist who has evidently used to good purpose keen powers of observation. She starts a series of imitations with a reproduction of Mr. Gus Elen's methods, mannerisms, and voice in "Meriah." Though taking the melody a little too slowly, Miss Elfrida presents an excellent counterfeit of the famous coster comedian. George Bastow is also another comedian imitated very cleverly by the débutante, who also scores highly as Miss Marie Lloyd with "It's the skirt that tells the tale" and as Miss Kate Carney, the coster queen. Miss Elfrida's success is striking, and she was loudly applauded on the night of our visit.

Miss Millie Lindon has a delightful song in "Angel of my dreams," which she renders with charming effect, being recalled again and again; Keen and Waller are clever acrobats, with a nice derangement of twisting somersaults and acrobatics as smart as they are eccentric; and Mr. George Mozart presents his capital entertainment "Hats," and his humorous impersonation of Bertie, the dandy M.C., the inventor of a new dance, the "Grazando Gasata." The dance accompanying the description of several patrons and patronesses of the shilling hop at which Bertie officiates is screamingly funny, and the waltz with a gigantic partner intensely amusing. Harry Lauder has unfortunately been unable to answer to his number during the week, and his place has been taken by that popular coon singer Miss Victoria Monks, who is a very warm favourite at the house in the Westminster Bridge-road. Miss Monks has a "way" with her that "fetches" audiences north, south, east, and west, and her vivacity and entrain are remarkable. Mr. G. H. Chirgwin, a favourite of Londoners for more years than we care to count, is as popular with the new generation as he was with the old. He is always happy in his methods of entertainment, and the union of tune and tattle makes for strength. Nightly for very many years he has been asked to sing "The Blind Boy." This fact is an astonishing proof of the love of a simple melody that possesses the hearts of the million. The White-eyed Kaffir does not always comply, but whatever he presents in the way of entertainment invariably fills his audiences with delight.

Miss Winifred Hare, one of the most cultured vocalists on the variety stage, and a charming actress, puts much verve and piquancy into her pierrot song; the Griffiths Brothers furnish broad fun in their burlesque of catch-as-catch-can wrestling; and the Sisters Hall are effective vocalists. Lee and Bentley, in their absurdity The Member for Muddlesex, well sustain their well-established reputation as farceurs; and Mr. Leonard Mortimer and his company present the thrilling story of a West End haunted house, entitled Spectres, with much success. Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope is responsible for a series of interesting pictures. Mr. Fred Miller is one of the most genial of London's managers.

HAMMERSMITH PALACE.

During this the dullest week of the year Mr. J. C. Coe is presenting a really capital programme, and his enterprise has drawn excellent houses. A genuine hit is made by the screaming comedy sketch presented by Hodgson and Lowther's company, and entitled Barmaids. This is another variant of the frisky husband imbroglio, which in the form of farcical comedies in three acts used to delight us at the Criterion in the days of our youth, when Sir Charles Wyndham first made a reputation as the most alert and facile light comedian of the Victorian Era. The hubby of Barmaids, during the absence of his unsuspecting wife, has indulged in a loose leg—in fact, to freely translate a Parisian idiom, he has "thrown his cap over the mills." In his visits to various hostelries he has made appointments with no less than three barmaids. Of course, each turns up at his residence, and just precede the return of the wife. A trusted footman is charged with the interviewing of the intruders, while the Brixton Lovelace hears what is going on behind a screen. The confidential man is urged to "sound 'em, my boy, sound 'em," and this process seemingly demands much liquid refreshment. The situations are of the broad description that invariably appeals to popular audiences, and the company, which includes a decidedly clever comedian in the part of the footman, has to listen to the gratifying sounds of uproarious laughter during the progress of the trifle. No cast is given, unfortunately, so that we are unable to praise individually the members of the company, who play with genuine comicality and smartness.

A happily devised trifle is Matrimonial Agency, to the farcical situations of which the acting of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sugden gives unwonted strength. The trifle reminds one forcibly of that ancient and rollicking farce, Perfection. Mrs. Sugden very ably represents the proprietress of the agency, whose clients include a rich lady with wooden legs. Mr. Sugden is highly amusing as the impecunious suitor who woos the timber-toed damsel for the sake of her cash, and discovers to his delight that she is an old flame, who since she jilted him for a richer man has become a widow. The wooden legs are simply assumed for the sake of the fun they create. Miss Carlyle is well placed as the widow.

The programme is opened in an interesting manner by Frank Hartley, a boy juggler, who possibly may, some day, become another Cinquevalli. He is especially deft in plate throwing and catching. Miss Esme Gordon, a fascinating comedienne and dancer, is particularly well suited in her coon number, "Rufus Rastus Brown"; Mr. Arthur J. Hill, the living Lilliputian, gives an entertainment that many years since was popularised by the Tissots. He is amusing as a Scotchman and a dame, and the dancing causes a deal of laughter. Versatility and well-directed energy mark the doings of Terry and Bentley, who present a comedy sketch, entitled The Hunt. There is some laughter-provoking cross-talk by the two; some clever acrobatics on the part of the gentleman and the lady's singing is much enjoyed. A bright interlude is wound up by a pas de deux. Miss Ruby Bijou is one of the daintiest dancers, and reminds one by her perfect exhibition of the lamented Katie Seymour, who graduated at the halls and then went to the Gaiety. Ruby's bare-footed dance is worthy of all the applause it receives. Miss Clara Rita impersonates a dark-eyed Senora from Sunny Seville, and appropriately winds up her turn with a Spanish dance accompanied by castanets. Fun is in the ascendant while the Brothers Griffiths occupy the stage in their burlesque wrestling; and Mr. J. P. Dryden and company present a most effective dramatic sketch in five scenes, entitled The Soldier's Wife.

A pronounced hit is made by Coram, who, quite unannounced, appeared at the Lyceum a month or two since, and has rapidly gained the favour of Londoners as a ventriloquist of the first rank. The distinguishing feature of Coram's clever show is that he lets his figure "Jerry" do the largest share of the talking—if we may so express ourselves in writing about a dummy. The whole entertainment is without the slightest sense of effort, and the illusion is perfect. Other attractions on the bill are Mr. Fred Dunstone, character comedian; Mr. Will Farrell, comedian; and the Edisonograph. Mr. Lewis Vincent is a capable and courteous acting-manager, and Mr. J. H. Cleve a good musical director.

BOW PALACE.

Miss Eva Kelland's song, "Farewell, my little bush mare," has quite caught on, as the saying is, and this week it has helped the young lady to win further laurels at the Bow Palace. The idea of bringing a pony on to the stage to assist in the telling of Miss Kelland's story pleases the audience immensely, especially as the pony seems to entertain not a little affection for its mistress. The song concerns the selling of a mare by a young girl to a brawny bushman. She doesn't wish to part with the animal, and she doesn't after all, for the would-be purchaser's proposal of marriage is accepted. It is a pretty theme prettily told. Mr. Billy Williams, who styles himself "the famous singer of little people," causes a good deal of amusement with his parodies on "I wouldn't leave my little wooden hut for you" and "Stop yer ticklin', Jock." He has a style of his own which is received with great favour by the East-Enders. Wake and Dean are about as comical as anyone could wish with their argumentative patter, which is full of really funny remarks. Mr. Fred Conquest and company are seen in the sensational sketch The Freak's Revenge, in which Mr. Conquest presents his weird and thrilling characterisation of a man-monkey, and Mr. Leon Dubois as a gorilla treats us to another clever portrayal of an animal.

An engaging little artist comes on the stage in the person of Miss Lottie Bell. Miss Bell, who is described as an Australian vocalist, gives a delightful rendering of a song the subject of which is appropriate to her age. The burden of it is that a child is endeavouring to console her mother for the unlooked-for absence of the father, and the last verse tells the good news of the father's return. Miss Bell also proves herself to be a talented dancer by her graceful and smart execution of a step-dance. Zasma renders an excellent account of himself in his trapeze act. He shows himself not only to be an agile and accomplished gymnast, but possessed of remarkable physical strength. He imparts the sensational element to his doings by lifting and swinging heavy weights suspended from his teeth. We wonder whether these exercises have the effect of strengthening or weakening his "incisors" and "canines." At any rate, he seems none the worse for the strain to which he puts them. The Five Casino Girls submit some agreeable performances of popular melodies on different instruments, their playing giving evidence of considerable skill and musical attainments.

Luis Hardt, "the mighty atom," furnishes an act of the strong-man type. With one hand he plays with a 130lb. bar-bell in much the same way that the ordinary man contents himself with swinging a 5lb. dumb-bell. Then he supports a weight of 425lb., in addition to a couple of men, who stand one upon his chest and the other upon his thighs. Thirdly, resting his head on one stool and his feet on another—his body of course being in a horizontal position—he keeps his limbs rigid, while bearing a weight of a quarter of a ton. The feat which seems to prove the greatest trial to him is the lifting and raising above his head with one hand of a 171lb. bar-bell. In a series of classical poses one sees the wonderful muscular development of Mr. Hardt, and his turn throughout is a most interesting one. Messrs. Dottridge and Longden's company in the episode Did he Deserve It? add quite a feature to the programme. Mr. James Willard acts with brutal naturalness in the rôle of the woman-deceiver, and Miss Lydia Hart is amusingly realistic in her portrayal of the boxing woman. Most of the humour, however, is furnished by Mr. Willie Atom, who, as an impertinent "boots," contrives to be comical in the extreme. Miss Violet Carr is pretty and unaffected as the flower girl. The concluding item on the bill is Lacey's Erascope, which, as usual, displays some admirable films.

THE DUCHESS.

The suburbs are evidently determined to be in no way behind the City in the provision of amusement, one proof of which is supplied in the fact that pictures of the boat-race were exhibited on Ruffell's Imperial Bioscope at the first house at Balham on Saturday—a feat of which Mr. George Wilson, the manager, is reasonably proud. The picture, which has also been given this week, is a remarkably fine film, and depicts with exceptional clearness the start and finish of the race, together with the embarking and landing of both crews. Other interesting and amusing views on the cinematograph also figure in the programme, and are thoroughly enjoyed. An interesting feature of the current bill is the barefoot dancing of Miss Mildred De Grey, whose illustrations of the art are given in exquisite costumes. Miss De Grey's dancing, which is done in a handsomely-furnished set scene, is accompanied by entrancing music, to the strains of which her varied movements are skilfully adapted.

Clever mimicry is supplied by Mr. J. P. Ling, who imitates a glee-party singing "Hail, smiling morn," with a too obtrusive and less tuneful tenor. An imitation of a boy playing a cornet is given, and a gentleman, who finds the high notes of "Mary of Argyle" too much for him, and a lady with peculiarities of respiration, are also travestied. Mr. Ling's performance is a finished one, and the impersonations cause great laughter. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Finden provoke uncontrollable mirth with their sketch Two to One, in which Mr. Finden is responsible for some quick changes, which would not disgrace a professed protean artist; and both performers act in the skilful comedy style for which they are famous.

A sketch with a similar object is that of The Silly Burglar, played by the Three Waldrons. The gentleman who enacts "Johnny," an enterprising youth, who attempts to frighten the maid-servant by pretending to be a burglar, loses no opportunity of creating laughter, and some of his effects are very ludicrous. His make-up as the "burglar" is a fearsome one, and his drolleries are never-ending, and quite fulfil their purpose. The well-known zoological comedy submitted by the Donaldson Brothers and Ardel gives occasion for further hilarity at the expense of the misadventures of the individuals who visit the famous gardens at Regent's Park; while the antics of the two apes who occupy the monkey-cage are wonderfully realistic. The mirthful devices employed are many and various, an important contribution being made by the diminutive comedian, who appears at one time as an Indian rajah, and at another as a baby in a perambulator. A juggling act, supplemented by a quantity of humour which is highly appreciated, is provided by Drawee, Frisco, and Hambro, whose turn is one of the most successful of the evening; Miss Rita Bell is a talented comedienne; and the Right of Hearts, vocalists, also figure in the programme. Mr. Chas. Longmaid directs a well-qualified orchestra, and Mr. J. H. Watling is agreeably conspicuous as acting-manager. An appropriate attraction was provided for Good Friday in a special sacred series of animated pictures, including "The Passion Play," as represented at Ober-Ammergau. The actual performances take place only at intervals of seven years, and a large audience on Friday were thoroughly justified in availing themselves of the opportunity of witnessing a reproduction of so famous a series.

EALING HIPPODROME.

The magic name of Hackenschmidt is spelling the word "success" in a most unmistakable manner at the Ealing Hippodrome this week, and the crowded houses, at both first and second performances, are showing how keenly the sport-loving world of the western district appreciates the appearance of the "great wrestler." Additional interest is lent to the display owing to the expectations aroused in connection with his forthcoming encounter with the "Terrible Turk" at Olympia towards the end of the present month.

To those who love to see an athlete in the pink of condition a real treat is afforded. Hackenschmidt, on appearing on Monday, was given a most hearty reception, as also was his first opponent, Jack Smith. The bout, in catch-as-catch-can style, proved very short, Smith being easily disposed of in one minute. Hackenschmidt's second opponent, however, proved to be of tougher metal. Gunner Moir is an athlete of as fine a physique as even Hackenschmidt himself, and a much more exciting struggle ensued. One, two, three, four minutes were marked by the timekeeper ere superior skill commenced to assert itself, but at 4min. 6secs. the game "Gunner" succumbed. Conqueror and defeated were alike accorded honours at the termination of their fine display.

A very welcome turn here this week is that of the Four Magnets, termed the "finest quartette of lady dancers in the country." The four handsome and prettily-costumed ladies are both clever and graceful. Their first dance, coupled with a song, "There is only one New York," is given in excellent style, and a coon dance which follows, with a slight change of costume, secures an unqualified success. C. J. Johnson, the "Black Diamond," follows with two songs, "The Darkie and his girl" and "My friend is my pocket," concluding with the usual cake-walk, which never fails to please. Miss Linda Wasey proves a most welcome item in the programme, giving in bright and enchanting style her two songs, "You must hear many things that you hate" and "Have you noticed the boy who has been blessed with good luck is the boy who looks after his mother?" the refrain of which is quickly caught up by the audience.

Fred Adderley and company, in their musical medley, The Rivals, are responsible for some amusing episodes. The lady member of the combination, who plays a domestic of the Marchioness type, is particularly mirth-provoking. The two gentlemen well second her efforts—one of them, a most capable musician, rendering several morceaux at the piano with good effect. Beyond the title, no names are attached on the programme to the trifle, which receives a cordial welcome. The Eight Lancashire Lads form a smart company of singers and dancers. A harmonised version of the ever-popular "Annie Laurie," which they sing, is listened to with rapt attention. Some capital clog-dancing follows. Splitting into couples and then into single file, the "Lads" make a merry clatter with their clogs, and amply justify their claim of "a turn without a rival." Miss Fanny Wentworth is ever welcome. A clever instrumentalist and a witty raconteuse, she has always her audience with her, and her anecdotes are, as usual, smart and pithy. In Black Justice, Messrs. Brown, Newland, and Leclercq present a sketch of the most side-splitting character. Many, no doubt, are familiar with its incidents, but this is its first appearance at the Ealing house. Of course a trifle of this kind lends itself to all sorts of ridiculous predicaments, and judge, counsel, policeman, and prisoners exploit the situations for all they are worth. By the introduction of a piano-organ and a couple of street dancers a very lively termination is arrived at. The sketch is admirably played, and evokes screams of merriment. The Astley company of American musical farmers shows how music may be allied to fun, and how tuneful sounds may be obtained from all sorts of unlikely material.

ELLIOTTS and SAVONAS

CAUSE GREAT BUSTLE AND EXCITEMENT AT THE HIPPODROME, HUDDERSFIELD.
A GREAT TRIUMPH.

It is about four years since that marvellous musican combination, The Savonas, visited Huddersfield, and their return visit, which was made at the Hippodrome on Monday evening, was signalised by the achievement of a great triumph. In the gorgeous "Palace of Orpheus"—a scene which from its utter brilliance is difficult to describe—they gave a truly remarkable performance. Nearly half an hour was occupied by seven members of the troupe in a rendering of the whole of the overture to Rossini's "William Tell." The instruments used are three organs, saxaphones, sleigh bells, chimes, ocarinas, aluminium lyres, American organ chimes, musical metal discs, xylophones, silver tubes, and many other kinds. The effects produced in the storm music is wonderful. Lightning is made to play by means of electricity, a motor works the organ bellows, thunder roars from some other ingenious appliance, and the sound of rain trickles from a revolving barrel, whilst the other instruments are utilised by the Savonas with surprising rapidity, the players using one after the other as called upon in this marvellous creation of musical effects. There is no such thing as playing from copy with the Savonas. All the parts have been religiously memorised. It is all too prodigiously complicated to discover who is who. One moment a player is tinkling sleigh bells on the stage, and the next he is seated at an organ high up in the glittering and bejewelled erection which forms the background of the scene. And so on. All is bustle, excitement, and sound, and there is plenty of all these. Another extraordinary performance is a fantasia, "A Moonlight Trip on the Mississippi Steamer," written by Mr. J. B. Elliott, the designer of the "Palace of Orpheus." Here again wonder exerts a big influence on the audience, who applaud unceasingly.—Huddersfield Daily Chronicle, April 10, 1906.

The Duchess, Balham, another famous house on the Gibbons circuit, will present to crowded audiences that charming vocalist Miss Alexandra Dagmar, the Gotham Comedy Quartet, the Gregson Comedy Trio, the Katos Komikal Kidgets, the Sisters Aindow, the Brothers Hayes, and Gertrude Glenn and company in Larks in the Park.

"Variety consolidated" and amusing will be found in the Easter bill of the Walthamstow Palace, where holiday crowds will be entertained by George Antill, Leo Dryden, Sisters Caselli, Sterling and Love, Drawie, Fred Eustace and company in Lights of the Harbour, Halton and Stanton, and Ruffell's Bioscope.

EASTER VARIETY PROGRAMMES.

"Spring's delights are all reviving; verdant leaflets clothe each spray," says the song, and the sunny weather that prevails at the moment of writing leads our thoughts to primrose paths and dalliance with southern breezes. With a continuance of the present meteorological conditions, indeed, seaside excursions and outdoor recreation should be quite in favour; but good old London will hold thousands of variety lovers, who will be glad of the excuse offered by the first St. Lubbock day of the year to revel in the halls of smoke and song. Comic singing favourites are returning from the realms of pantomime to strengthen many programmes, and we anticipate an excellent time for the box offices during the earlier days of next week.

Those holiday-makers who can appreciate a widely-diversified variety entertainment will certainly be attracted by the lavish programme which the Alhambra puts forward for Easter. This theatre has ever been the pioneer of the best Continental turns, and Leo Nino, in a new musical act, the marvellous dogs of Richard Braatz, the accomplished Yiulian Troupe, and Les Uniques hold foremost places in the new bill, which includes also the Four Harveys, in the prettiest tight-wire act before the public, and Miss Edna, the remarkable siffleuse. Ballet will sustain its high prestige here with the second edition of Parisiana, introducing new scenes, new dances, and new music, and A Scene in Holland; while the Urbanora animated picture exhibit will give a new and complete exposition of the marvels of the bioscope in expert hands.

The Easter novelty at the Empire will be the revue by George Grossmith, jun., entitled Venus, 1906, which is in four scenes. To this we have already referred in our Gossip columns. In the production the principal characters will be taken by Miss Sybil Arundale, Miss Firth (in the title-rôle), Miss Daisy Cordell, Mr. W. H. Berry (who has established his position as one of London's principal comedians since his début at the younger house in Leicester-square last October), Mr. R. Tremayne, and Mr. Harry Grattan. Cinderella will be retained, and most of the members of the variety company doing duty this week.

The Palace Theatre retains the services of charming Millie Lindon, in her delightful scena In Barcelona, and the Palace Girls have a new dance scena. Other Easter attractions are the Dumonds, who will give choice examples of Parisian minstrelsy; Aurora Castillo, the Marie Lloyd of Spain; dainty Daisy Jerome, a great Palace favourite; and Cole and Johnson and Grant and Grant, two pairs of coloured duettists. Mirth will be provided by the Frank Elliston company in Aunt Matilda; Toch and Tard, eccentric acrobats; and Jack Lorimer, comedian. Other turns include Charles Norton, mimic; Dorothy Gould, comedienne and dancer; Hebe Dennis, vocalist; Arley's combination and performing dogs; and the Bioscope. There will be a special matinée on Easter Monday at two o'clock.

At the Coliseum, in the six o'clock programme only, will be found Mr. Charles Warner and company, in two scenes from Drink; Mme. Alice Esty and E. C. Hedmondt in an excerpt from Cavalleria Rusticana; and Duncan's Collies, the Marlo-Dunham Trio, Millie Hylton, Decima Brooke, the Classicum Quartette, and the Juggling Taylor Trio take part in a comic album, entitled Puck's Portfolio, written by Arthur Shirley. The Grand Easter Revue will be presented at the three o'clock and nine o'clock performances. It is dealt with in detail in our "Variety Gossip."

To the London Hippodrome Giant Machnow will return as a big attraction. Another return is Paul Cinquevalli, the world-famous juggler; and the wonderful spectacle The Flood will, of course, be retained, with Dronza, the wonderful talking head, which is causing much speculation in the wigwams of the scientists and quidnuncs. Other turns include Brothers Leslie, eccentrics; Frobel and Ruge; Claire Beasley's Cats; Sutcliffe Family, Scotch pipers and acrobats; Villaud Brothers, clowns; McPhee and Hill; Rohda Brothers; the Labakans; Lydia and Albino; Lavater Lee, with his wrestling mule; Alexandre and Hughes, eccentrics; O'Gust, clown; and the Bioscope.

An exceptionally strong holiday programme is promised at the Tivoli. George Robey, fresh from his pantomime triumphs, returns to the West End halls, with songs new and humorous; Harry Randall comes from Old Drury, also with new songs; and other humorists include Harry Ford, T. E. Dunville, and the Poluski Brothers. Happy Fanny Fields, Alice Hollander (the Australian contralto), with a new song "Irish Lily," of which report speaks very highly, Amber Austa, Rachel Lowe, and Billie Barlow are also included in a company of exceptional strength at the "cosy little house in the Strand."

The Oxford also welcomes back George Robey and Harry Randall after their pantomime triumphs for the Easter programme, and such names as Fred Karno and company, in The Smoking Concert, Gus Elen, Clark and Hamilton, Harry Tate, Ernest Shand, T. E. Dunville, Fred Earle, Flo Gallimore, Edie King, Margaret Ashton, Florence Esdaile, Rachel Lowe, Winifred Hare, the Poluskis, the Casino Comedy Four, Griff and Alpha, and Ike Scott and Son cannot fail to attract. A matinée will be given on Easter Monday.

At the London Pavilion Mr. Frank Glenister, in his holiday scheme, announces old favourites in Messrs. Malcolm Scott, Ambrose Thorne, and Mark Melford and company in the well-known sketch My Wife Won't Let Me. Mr. George Mozart, who is still retained, has a new song from the pen of that versatile author, Mr. Chris Davis, entitled "The Teapot Queen"; and the Motramos and Foreman and Fannan also continue their successful engagements during holiday week. Mr. Marriott Edgar, "the man in red," will fulfil his first re-engagement at the famous house. The Pavilion Girls will assist in a singing and dancing novelty; and capital attractions will also be provided by Hill and Whittaker, in nigger melodies and song; Susie and Protti, speciality dancers; the Three Laurels, speciality acrobats; the Raies, dancers; Massona, juggler; Josh Dixon, eccentric comedian and dancer; Nell Richardson and Arthur Aldridge, vocalists; the Glenroy troupe of International dancers; My Fancy, the famous sand dancer; Kit Keen, bone soloist; and Jock Whiteford, Scotch comedian.

An interesting programme has been prepared at the Holloway Empire. Prinz's Lions to many will form the particular attraction, but otherwise there is a variety of talent. The Arthur Lloyd Trio will give their sketch Little Charlie; or, the Twin Sisters; the Norman Leonard Trio will submit their amusing act, The Musical Itinerants; the Uessems, two wonderful head-and-hand balancers, will also appear; and Gracie Moore, in a picture setting, will sing the ballads "In Dreamland" and "Homeland of my heart." Other members of the company are Chinko, the boy juggler; Marba and Verity, the whirlwind dancers; Will Vokes, eccentric dancer; and Brooks, Dale, and Blitz, with their comical mule.

Heading a varied bill at the Shepherd's Bush Empire next week is Tom Edwards, the clever ventriloquist. In the same bill are included the two favourites, James Finney, of world renown, and his sister. Other important turns are Ross and Grayson, Starr and Leslie, Esta Stella, Beatrice Willey, the De Lucca Troupe, and Frank Leslie.

Hackenschmidt, the unconquered, is the big liner at the Hackney Empire. Special features will be provided by, among others, Seeley and West, Mark Sheridan, Binns and Binns, the Sisters Chester, Alcide Capitaine, Frank and Free, Odeyne Sparke, Francis and Alfred, and Belloni's Cockatoos.

At the Stratford Empire the Novellos will appear in a scena, India in Europe. In this act will be seen several highly-trained horses, dogs, and elephants. In the same bill are the Maples, with a practical example of how to deal with a burglar; Bessie Featherstone, a winning comedienne; the Holles Trio, in their famous sketch The Little Charwoman; the Morton Trio of comedians and singers; H. Sloan, comedian and juggler; the Six Lancashire Lasses, singers and dancers; Harry Bedford, comedian; the Canary company, in a comic pantomime; and Boswell's Circus.

Those funny pantomimists the Boissets top the bill at the New Cross Empire. Lil Hawthorne is an important turn. This popular comedienne comes with all her latest song successes. Miss May Henderson is another bright star in the same programme; and others on the bill are Cora Caselli, Walter King, the Seddons, Vernando, the Sisters Bosanquet, Chas. Gardiner, and Ella Lane. A fine series of animated pictures will be thrown on the screen by the Bioscope.

Mr. Jack Edgar's Easter crowd at the Metropolitan is headed by Miss Ella, with her performing lions. Will Evans will be seen in an amusing novelty, 1910 Invasion; the Rousbys will foreshadow Paris in London in some remarkable electric tableaux; and other entertainers will include Tom Woottwell, Victoria Monks, Albert Le Fre, Lucy Clarke, Ara, Zebra, and Vora, Hamilton Hill, the New York Nippers, Baker and Balfe, Edna Thelma, Jack Charman, Georgina Leonard, Frank Seeley and the Sisters Oswald. Pictures on Ruffell's Bioscope will also be seen.

Mr. J. L. Graydon's company contains such popular favourites as Lieutenant Travis, the Leonards, Arthur Reece, Harry Weldon, Charles Baldwin's comedians in The Bank Clerks, Fyne and Hurley, Vincent, Sisters Pine, Fielding and Hall, Baby Hunter, Molly Doon, the Great Northern Troupe, Thomas E. Finglas, Wal Phillips, Amy Ellie and company, Hague and Russell, Amy Sullivan, Collings Trio, and Dorothy Veld.

THE SHOWMAN WORLD.

We congratulate the deputation of the Showmen's Guild that lately made a representation to the London County Council with regard to living-vans on the success of their efforts. As will be seen from the new regulations which we give in extenso below, living-vans are permitted on the open spaces under the control of the Council and used by Londoners at holiday times.

The whole body of showmen are under a deep debt of gratitude to their president, the veteran showman George Sanger, and to the hon. organiser, the Rev. T. Horne, and their hon. treasurer, Mr. Pedgrift, of The Era, for the great work they have done in safeguarding the interests of the show business.

Showmen were fully aware of the serious issues at stake so cogently expressed in one of the arguments used by the president in his speech before the committee, "that, if London led the way in a reactionary movement against the liberty and business privileges of showmen, other public bodies would speedily follow suit, and the prohibition of living-vans would become general throughout the country."

The Parks and Open Spaces Committee were undoubtedly most favourably impressed not only by the matter but by the charm of the veteran showman's speech, and the members of the deputation left the committee room buoyed up with the confident expectation that the Council would give every possible consideration to the justice of their demand, and this expectation has been fully justified by the successful results.

We have reason to believe that the imposition of the rule prohibiting living-vans was occasioned by the thoughtless and utterly selfish conduct of a few individuals who are unworthy of the name showman, and are merely hangers-on of the fairground business. These people forget that by their selfish and reprehensible conduct they involve the large and respectable body of fairground traders in public contempt, and bring them under vexatious restrictions of public bodies and officials. It will be for the peace and well-being of the whole body of amusement caterers when these people are brought to recognise that the local authorities must not be unduly provoked, and that all necessary regulations for the public health and the proper control of open-air amusements must be respected and honourably carried out by showpeople.

For sixteen years past the Showmen's Guild has defended the trade interests, the domestic life, and the good, honest character of the great body of itinerant providers of popular amusements with severe impartiality. This work has been done as much for the non-subscribers and non-members as for those who have given priceless time and large means to the defence movement.

It has very frequently happened that individuals without any authority to speak in the name of the organised showmen have used the name of the Guild in threatening legal proceedings against local authorities when the authorities have been in the right. This is an abuse of the Guild's protective work, and it ought to be clearly understood that only when authorised by the committee should the authority of the Guild be used by individual showmen.

From time to time we have ventured to speak plainly with regard to the care that should be taken to keep all living-vans in such a condition of scrupulous cleanliness that suspicion would be at once disarmed, and that the people would say: "Come and see how beautifully homelike these vans of the showmen are." Of course this homily only applies to a very small and fast-diminishing section of people who abuse the name of travelling showmen and bring disgrace upon an old and honourable profession.

LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL.
Parks Department, 11, Regent Street, S.W.
April 11, 1906.

NOTICE TO LICENCE HOLDERS.

The Parks and Open Spaces Committee have carefully considered the representation made to them by the Deputation from the Showmen's Guild on March 16, 1906, with regard to the use of dwelling vans in connection with shows, &c., at holiday times, at Blackheath, Hampstead Heath, and Wormwood Scrubbs, and as an experiment have decided to relax the present regulation prohibiting the use of such vans, subject to the undermentioned regulations:—

10. Horses used in connection with shows will not be allowed on the open spaces after 11 a.m.

12. The licence of any person not conforming to the above regulations will be cancelled, and the amount (if any) paid in respect of the licence will be forfeited.

Any licence holder desiring to have a dwelling van in accordance with the above conditions must forward to me, by return of post, the fee of 10s. payable under regulation 6. The holders of licences for side-shows must keep the dwelling van within the area already allotted to them or pay at the usual rate for the extra space they occupy.

JNO. J. SEXBY,
Chief Officer.

We are sorry to hear of a serious accident to a well-known Birmingham showman, Mr. George Ford. He was travelling with his living-wagon near Over Whitacre when the vehicle was accidentally overturned. Obtaining assistance, he proceeded to set the van again on its wheels, and, whilst thus engaged, the sustaining rope broke, and the wagon toppled over again, pinning the unfortunate showman to the ground. When extricated from his perilous position, he was found to be seriously hurt.

A gentleman of the town kindly conveyed the injured man in his motor-car immediately to the General Hospital, Birmingham, where he received every possible attention. It was found upon examination that he had sustained a serious fracture of the left thigh and a compound fracture of the right ankle. The poor fellow now lies in a critical condition in the institution to which he was so quickly conveyed.

Towyn kept its fair in grand style with the following shows and fairground varieties:—Baker's circus, Farrell's coliseum of varieties, Huting's temple of magic, and Wright's fine art academy. The whole of the machines and a number of the minor novelties were provided by Charles Farrell, the enterprising lessee and caterer of this circuit, and included flying motors, galloping horses, two sets of steam swings, one set of big boats, two shooting concerns, and two throwing games. The other caterers were Turner, Fossett, and Wright, with shooters; Greatorex, Wright, Dobson, Fossett, and Turner, with varieties and throwing games.

A new cycle factory will shortly be commenced at Redditch, and showmen and others should make a note and pay a visit to this progressive town. There are several large manufacturing villages in the district—viz., Astwood Bank, Studley, Alvechurch, Feckenham, etc., the market day being Saturday. The show-ground is situated in the centre of the town. The annual pleasure fair will be held on Aug. 4, 6, 7, and 8. Headless Cross Great Cherry Wakes are fixed for July 13 to 18.

T. Jennings and Sons' elaborately electrically-fitted gallopers, with attendant side-shows, have pitched upon the Broad Quay, Bath, for the holiday season, and crowds are being attracted to enjoy the capital sport provided by these enterprising showmen.

Sir Robert Fossett and Son's Circus and Hippodrome has been giving excellent performances at Alcester, Feckenham, and Droitwich. At Alcester the workhouse inmates were given a free treat.

Horse Sales or Fairs will take place on April 24 at Bromsgrove, on May 1, 2, and 3 at Wrexham, on April 17 at Shipston-on-Stour, on June 22 at Shipston-on-Stour, on June 25 at Bromsgrove, and on June 26 at Pershore. A Foresters' fête is fixed for July 2 at Inkberrow, Worcestershire.

The fairs ahead for next week are: Birkenhead, Blackheath, Cheltenham, Clevedon, Exeter, Gainsborough, Garston, Halesowen, Hinckley, Hockham, Jarrow-on-Tyne, Luton, Malvern, Midsomer Norton, Morecambe, New Brighton, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Newmarket, Northampton, Northwich, Portsmouth, Richmond (Surrey), Richmond (Yorks.), Rothwell Feast, Rushden, Ryde, Seaham Harbour, Selby, Southport, Stafford, Thornaby, Torquay, Tring, Tunbridge Wells, Wormwood Scrubbs, Folkestone, Hitchin, Romsey, Thame, Wareham, Barnard Castle, Lincoln, Bedford, Yarmouth, Bicester, Devizes, St. Austell, Tyldesley, and Chesham. In Scotland, Hamilton; and in Wales, Aberdare, Cardiff, Merthyr Tydfil, Mold, Newport (Monmouth), and Pontypridd.

The spring fair at Pendlebury, near Manchester, is evidently growing in popularity, and in the early days of the show business season supplies an evidently much-felt want. For the amusement of the people of this large industrial district the following shows and fair-ground amusements were located on the market ground: Dennis' circus and variety empire; Colonel Clarke's electric coliseum of animated pictures and varieties; Mitchell's motor-cars; Hurst's flying ostriches; Richard's steam yachts; Holland's whirling the whirl; Harrison's slipping the slope; and Shuttleworth's three concerns—the juvenile motor-cars, the big wheel, and park swings. The rifle ranges and shooting saloons were provided by Booth and Henshaw. The minor novelties, variety stalls, throwing games, &c., by Messrs. Brannan, Lorenzo, Henshaw, Street, Freear, and others.

From Middlesbrough we have news of the following shows having been located on the market ground: Crow's cinématograph theatre; Davies' model show, a working coal mine; galloping horses and steam sets by Rich, Crow, Small, and Culline; big boats and swings by Watkins, Twilley, Rich, and Cullin; rifle saloons and bottle batteries by Thompson, Crow, Harper, Twilley, and Watkins; varieties and throwing games by Williams, Nicholls, Rich, Twilley, and Watkins.

The amusements at Bridport Fair were provided by the local caterer, Townsend, and included a set of steam horses, three sets of park swings, three rifle galleries, Emma and coker sheets, with stalls, and other fair-ground attractions.

SENATOR J. LEO.

One of the younger generation of showmen, whose career on the road has been a series of unbroken successes. The son of a well-known and highly-respected Blackburn tradesman, he was educated for a skilled trade, but early in life earned considerable appreciation as an amateur ventriloquist, conjurer, and gymnast. After a preliminary venture in conjunction with a partner on the variety stage, he started his one-man show at the fairs, beginning with a ground booth and himself as the living ventograph, a clever variation of ventriloquism. In connection with this show, he added various mysteries, such as the flying lady, Fatima, Galatea, and La Morte. Then for two seasons he ran an entirely novel concern, the portable Egyptian hall, introducing to the fair grounds the theosophic and Buddhistic dark séance, the principal features of which were reincarnation and dematerialisation.

In a former notice of Mr. Leo and his showground enterprise, we paid an eminently just tribute to his adaptability as well as remarkable ability, and we ventured to anticipate for him a brilliant future. This anticipation has been more than justified, for, after several years of persevering effort to introduce entirely original and special business, he has come to the conclusion that the show of to-day and the show of to-morrow is the cinématograph. So that a year ago found James Leo starting out with the latest model of the cinématograph theatre. This has been brought up to date by the latest novelties and improvements in both organ and electric light installation.

James Leo has thrown himself most heartily into all movements for the betterment of the showman and his avocation in life. He is a member of both the Showmen's Guild and the Roundabout Proprietors' and Showmen's Union, a keen man of business, full of sympathy and kindly charity, and is universally esteemed by all sorts and conditions of show people.

STORIES OF SHOWMAN LIFE.

By the Rev. T. Horne, Hon. Chaplain to the Showman's Guild.
(Copyright.)

"TRUTH WILL OUT."

Yorkshire showmen will remember that about thirty years ago there appeared on the fairground a new showman, Professor Bockler. He brought a clever variant of the then great novelty, Pepper's Ghost Illusion. Bockler was a man of original ideas, and to aid him in the carrying out of his original notions he was ready to pay good money to clever people. Amongst his company were the clever Brothers Panto, whose early life has already formed the subject of a showman story.

Withing the limits of our purpose we cannot go into minute details concerning the things that led up to the trouble that lies at the very heart of this story. It is enough to say that Bockler had conceived a most virulent hatred of the two clever young men who but a few months before he had gone out of his way to entice by the offer of a big salary from excellent employment.

The quarrel between Bockler and the Panto Brothers came to a head at Armley Feast, and to everybody's amazement the two young men found themselves cast into gaol to answer a charge of theft brought against them by their employer, Bockler.

This was a veritable thunderbolt to all the old travellers who had known the Pantos from their childhood, and so great was the indignation towards Bockler, and so strong a conviction in the innocence of the young showmen, that a fund was immediately started to provide them with legal assistance.

The Pantos were not without friends outside the showmen world, and to the great delight of their showmen friends one of the Leeds Parish Church Clergy, who had known the Pantos on and off for a considerable time, came forward to testify to their good character.

It was a crowded court when the Bockler charge was preferred against the young showmen, and it was with the greatest possible satisfaction that the rebutting evidence as to good character given by their curate friend was received by the court.

The story of the theft as told by Bockler was as follows:—"About six months ago I engaged the Brothers Panto at a salary which entitled me to all their services. When they had been with me some little time I suspected James Panto of taking sketches and plans of my show novelties; in particular, he sketched the most important part—'The Dark Chamber'—of the ghost illusion. I charged him with this, and he answered me that it was impossible for him to take part in the illusion without getting at the secret or professional wrinkle of the trick. Of course, I admitted that; but what I charged him with, and I had reason to believe the truth of the accusation, was that he had prepared sketches with a view to selling them to a business rival.

"Of course, this led to serious words between us, and from that time on up to Armley Feast we never got on together, so at last I determined to dismiss them with a week's wages, sending them about their business at a moment's notice.

"It was after they left the show that I missed two valuable Fantoccini figures. I immediately followed them, and caught up with them at the Central Station, where I charged them with the theft, and, sure enough, my figures were found in one of their boxes hidden amongst their dress togs."

At this point the solicitor for the Pantos began his cross-examination of the prosecutor.

"You say rightly, sir, that the figures were hidden among the theatrical togs, and the point of our inquiry is, Why were they hidden, and by whom? It is my case that my clients deny all knowledge of the presence of these figures in their box. They assert that, whoever placed them there, they did not. Now, sir, I put it you, did you place the figures there yourself?"

Quite sternly the solicitor gazed into the face of the accuser, and the accuser quailed before that penetrating look. Manifestly breaking under the suddenness of the attack, he gasped, "No."

Then came the climax of the drama, and from the most unexpected quarter. Standing in the midst of a group of show-women was the fourteen-year-old daughter of Professor Bockler.

Clear and distinct these words rang out from the girl's lips: "Yes you did, father, yes you did; I saw you do it."

As may be imagined, the excitement was intense as the presiding magistrate asked the girl to tell what she knew without fear to the court.

The amazement and dismay of Bockler can also be left to the imagination, for the malignity mirrored upon his face was beyond the power of words to convey. He became a madman when his own child entered the witness box to tender her unexpected evidence, and it took two stalwart policemen all their time to restrain him from doing bodily harm to the child or to himself.

"I will ask you," said the magistrate, "if you understand what is meant by taking the oath—or, rather, I should say, do you understand what is meant by speaking the truth?"

"Yes, sir, I do, and the man who has taught me to understand and to speak the truth is Tom Panto, who is now charged with stealing what I know he did not steal, for I saw my father take the two figures out of the locker in the caravan, and hide them away in Tom Panto's box, and I heard him say, 'They are leaving me, but no one else shall have them, for I will see to that.'"

The magistrate said, "Thank you, my child, I believe you have spoken the truth, and I want you to tell me now, why is it that you have gone against your own father, and spoken up for these young men?"

The girl answered quite simply, "It is, sir, because I have known them to be kind and good and God-fearing men, who have taught me and other children to fear God and speak the truth."

"You are a brave girl, and, though you may have to suffer for having spoken the truth, you will always be glad that you were brave enough to do it."

At this point there was an outburst of the too long pent-up excitement of a crowded court, and it was more than the usher could do to suppress it. With a wave of his hand for silence, the magistrate said first to Bockler, "Out of the mouth of your own child, of whose ability to understand and to speak the truth we have no doubt, you have been proved one of the most despicable villains that it is possible for society to be afflicted with. With such men as you no man's character is safe, and I shall make it my duty to lay this case before the Public Procecutor with a view to your punishment."

Then, turning to the young men in the dock, he said, "It is with the utmost satisfaction that I welcome the complete vindication of your character. It is a mere truism to say that you leave this court without a stain upon your character. There is more than that to be said in this case. Your true character has been tried in the fire as gold and silver is tried, and it comes out all the purer for the testing. It is such men as you that bring honour and respect to any walk or profession of life. It is such men as your accuser who bring disgrace upon the most honourable profession with which they are associated."

The return of the Panto Brothers to Armley Feast was a veritable triumphal procession. The news of the dramatic scene in the magistrate's court spread like wildfire, and the end was one of those tremendous upheavals of popular justice that stagger the quieter minds in old countries, but are of frequent occurrence in newer lands. How the people gathered and who marshalled them was never known; nor, indeed, did there seem to be any need for generalship. The Feast was over, and most of the shows packed up and ready for departure to the next fair on the round. Bockler's show, owing to the trial, still stood, and was the target for the angry crowd.

Now, it fortunately happened that the Brothers Panto were at tea in Sam Pickulls' van when the roar of the crowd on stern justice bent reached them. "Good Heavens," cried Sam, "go and show yourselves, lads, or the people in their fury will pull down Bockler's show about their heads."

Mounting the run-up on Bockler's front, the Panto Brothers faced the crowd. They had faced many crowds, but here was a new experience—an angry, surging, tumultuous mob.

Tom Panto was equal to the occasion: "I know what you feel, you good Yorkshire folk, you want to do justice, and to wreak vengeance upon the man who did the evil deed.

"Men of Yorkshire, we thank you for the good thought, but we ask you not to punish the innocent with the guilty," and here he hurriedly whispered to his brother, "Go and bring the girl."

Turning to the crowd again, he continued: "Have patience, and before you attempt to lay angry hands upon the show think of the harm you will do to the suffering wife and family of the man you are here to punish."

At this moment Jim Panto returned, bringing with him the heroine of the Police Court scene.

"Friends, this girl was brave to tell the truth, now let us make a bargain—we may rest assured that the law will punish the wrong-doer. He stands self-convicted of a conspiracy and perjury. We may well leave him to the punishment stern justice will mete out to such villains.

"Now, here's the bargain: Leave Bockler to even-handed justice. Do not destroy these rags and sticks, let the show stand; and, if Mrs. Bockler will permit it, my brother and I will remain with the show, and, in spite of all her husband has done, see the family through the dark days before them."

At this there was a tremendous shout of approval, and upon the show front there came one of the crowd, who seized Tom Panto by the hand, and exclaimed: "Tha's jannock tu t' backbone. Heer's my hon, an' I speak for all Armley side: tha may be a show lad, but tha's gettin' a heart as big as a mountain, and if ever there wor' a Christian i' this wurld tha's one."

That was the end of the crisis. The show was saved, and Tom Panto's sermon on the text, "Return good for evil," is a sweet and precious memory amongst Armley people to this day.

With regard to Bockler, little more need be said; he was punished, and severely too, as the law directs.

Brief indeed was his incursion in Showland. Showmen have a sure and certain method of squeezing such men out when once their true character is discovered. It is recognised that every stranger who has talent or a novelty to submit for public approbation has free right to bring his commodity to the open market of the people at the fair; but if the would-be showman transgresses the well-defined lines of honest dealing between man and man, or attempts by unfair and dishonourable means to compass private gains or satisfy mean revenge, such a man is speedily fired out.

So it was with Bockler. He utterly disappeared, and the pity is that with him, to a certain extent, his family had to suffer; but as far as the Brothers Panto could mitigate that suffering it was done for the sake of the brave girl who, in spite of all risk and consequence, would speak the truth.

A "PICTURE" IN PREPARATION.

A production, commencing on Tuesday, April 3, and extending to the 10th, savours something of a Chinese entertainment; yet the famous episode in the life of Dick Turpin occupied this space of time, owing to the large tract of country that had to be covered to obtain the necessary local colour. The Hepworth Cinématograph Manufacturing Co. have a large theatre and factory situate at Walton-on-Thames, and in this vicinity and that of Weybridge was produced during the period mentioned a stirring episode of the notorious highwayman, entitled

"DICK TURPIN'S RIDE TO YORK."

Dick Turpin	Mr. Lewin Fitzhamon
Major Mowbray	Mr. Louis Stanislaus
Sir Luke Rookwood	Mr. Claud Whitten
Mr. Coates	Mr. Willie Hartill
Mr. Patterson	Mr. Elco Mearson
Mr. Tyrconnell	Mr. Cliff Bing
Inn Keeper	Mr. Tom Mowbray
Postillion	Mr. Frank Cousins
Ostler	Mr. Nathaniel Menzies
Horse Boy	Mr. George Curtiss
Maid at the Falstaff	Miss Emily Custance
Inn Keeper's Daughter	Miss Dorothy Lupone

It must have been disconcerting for the ordinary City man darting out of his garden gates to catch the morning train to be suddenly confronted by a brilliantly-costumed personage mounted upon a magnificent horse, and armed with murderous-looking pistols. Though closely pursued by the vindictive Lawyer Coates, Turpin was not at liberty to make a bee-line for York, for wherever there was the suggestion of a modern residence, and whenever the telegraph pole sprang up on the highway, he had to turn aside. Fortunately roadside inns of antique appearance are numerous in the neighbourhood, and Dick was able to make an effective escape from the Sir John Falstaff, Kilburn (the King's Arms, Weybridge), although, owing to the treachery of the inn keeper, very finely impersonated by Mr. Tom Mowbray, it was a near thing.

There was quick mounting by the pursuers, and next came an electric dash at top speed through the most ancient portion of Weybridge, to the gratification of the entire population, who lined the roadway five deep on each side, being kept back by the horse boys, travellers, gentlemen, and footpads dressed in the costume of the period, who fell into attitudes of astonishment as the cavalcade tore by, to reappear during subsequent days in all the glory of brocaded coats, jingling spurs, and clattering hoofs.

The Ride shows Dick leaping the toll-gate to the discomfiture of his pursuers, holding up the London to York coach, the narrow escape of Dick Turpin at the Beauchamp Arms, besides a great number of other thrilling escapades.

The production, which was under the direction of Lewin Fitzhamon, and entailed some weeks of preparation, necessitated the use of twenty horses, a coach and four, and an extraordinary number of costumes, chiefly supplied by Messrs. Raynes and Co. Black Bess was a superb specimen of the thorough-bred, and all were well mounted. Mr. Cliff Bing shining conspicuously on a spirited animal; while Mr. George Curtis showed that he is as good a jockey at the real thing as he is upon the stage. There were some hairbreadth escapes, such as the bolting of Lawyer Coates's horse, which finally fell on the pavement, nearly smashing a plate-glass window. Major Mowbray's horse also took fright at the extraordinary demonstrations of the crowd, rearing up and falling on its rider. There were humorous incidents, too, such as a somewhat heated interview between Dick Turpin and the driver of a steam-roller who lagged superfluous on the stage. This unfortunately was not chronicled by the biograph. Altogether, the Hepworth manufacturing Co. are to be congratulated on obtaining a very stirring dramatic film.

AMUSEMENTS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

CAPE TOWN, March 17.—Opera House (Sole Lessees and Manager, Messrs. B. and F. Wheeler).—There was a large and enthusiastic audience present on Tuesday, March 13, when the Wheeler-Edwardes Gaiety Company opened a season at the above theatre with San Toy, a piece in which they had not hitherto been seen. An energetic and powerful chorus presented the music with spirit, and the augmented orchestra, under the efficient direction of Mr. Herbert C. Howlands, rendered the score in finished style. Mr. Victor Gouriet was very diverting as the ingenious Li, and scored a conspicuous success. Mr. Gouriet is a clever comedian, who works hard with restless energy throughout the piece, and excels both in song and dance. Mr. Edmund Shirra as Captain Bobbie Preston could scarcely be improved upon, his good acting and pleasant singing ensuring his popularity. Mr. T. R. Norbury acquitted himself admirably as the pompous Yen-How, receiving several encores for his rendering of "Six Little Wives"; Mr. George Grundy made a favourable impression as Lieutenant Harvey Tucker; Mr. Arthur Staples was capital as the Emperor; Mr. Myles Clifton provoked much laughter by his able impersonation of Sir Bingo Preston; and satisfactory performances of Fo Hop, Hu Pi, Wai Ho, Li Li, Li Ho, Ah Wen, and Sing Hi were given by Messrs. J. Leith Harvey, R. Whitehouse, Gordon Adams, David Keay, Jack Harper, Sidney Holland, and Adam Gordon. The fine and well-trained voice of Miss Maude Thorne was heard to advantage in her artistic portrayal of San Toy; Miss Anna Hickish was an attractive Poppy, singing admirably; Miss Daisy Wallace made a charming and vivacious Dudley, displaying plenty of spirit and dash; Miss Nellie Palmer was also pleasing as Rose Tucker, dancing an exceedingly smart pas seul in the second act. Capable representatives of the Emperor's Own were the Misses Jessica Dean, Captain of the Guard, Miss Sybil Thorne as Yung Shi, and Miss Lilian Bell as Me Koui.

Mr. Harry Rickards, who will probably be seen in England at the latter end of the summer, reopened the Adelaide Tivoli on March 1 with a company headed by Leroy, Talma, and Bosco, who were such favourites at the Alhambra. After two weeks at Adelaide they went to the Theatre Royal, Perth, for two weeks, and sailed from Fremantle on April 2 for London per s.s. Orontes. Barnard's Marionettes, at the finish of their Melbourne season, opened successfully at the Tivoli, Sydney, on Feb. 24; and the Miles Stavordale Quintette, who arrived per s.s. Mooltan on Saturday, March 3, made a phenomenal hit. Martinetti and Grossi opened at the Tivoli, Sydney, on March 10.

Mr. Tom Leo, who has been scoring heavily at Richmond and Clapham with his "Too Lazy to Live" ditty, has consented to have his especial "business" printed on the copies of the song. The comedians of the various seaside combinations are keen on the number.

Mr. Tom E. Murray, the American comedian, who is to be the star of the Coliseum Revue, tells an amusing story of how he literally upheld the credit of the stage, under trying circumstances, in the days of his youth. He was a member of a small company playing a répertoire of comic operas, and at one little town it was discovered, during the last act of H.M.S. Pinafore, that the platform, with its oil lamp footlights and apology for scenery, was shaking ominously under the actors' feet. Mr. Murray and a friend found their way, with much trouble and in clouds of dust, to a small sort of cellar under the stage, and perceived the necessity for immediate action. The deck of the good ship Pinafore was actually creaking. They were both big men, and, hearing that the opera was nearly over, turned themselves into temporary pillars to support the stage—even while an unconscious comrade up above danced a hornpipe! Mr. Murray has—to alter the last word of a slang phrase—"the gift of the gag," and has written a particularly comic miniature monologue, which he frequently introduces into his pantomime parts, dealing with an imaginary quartette—"five of the nicest fellows," he says, "not including myself!"

Les Henris are still on tour, and are meeting with great success everywhere with their attractive equilibristic act. They will appear in London in July.

Before the Licensing Justices at the Portsmouth Town Hall on Wednesday morning, application was made by Vere D'Oyley Noble (secretary to the Portsmouth Coliseum Syndicate) for a dancing, singing, and music licence for the proposed Coliseum in Greetham-street. Dr. S. H. Emanuel appeared in support of the application. Mr. J. Alderson Foote, K.C., and H. P. St. Gerrans opposed on behalf of the Portsmouth Hippodrome, Ltd., and Mr. H. F. Dickens, K.C., and Mr. Theobald were present to oppose on behalf of the Citizens' Union and the owners and residents in the locality. Dr. Emanuel stated the case for the syndicate, and evidence in support was given by Mr. Frank Matcham, the well-known architect, who stated that the hall would hold 3000 people, and there would be two performances each evening, with an interval of six or seven minutes; by Mr. R. Allen, a director of Moss's Empires, and Mr. Vere D'Oyly Noble. After a long consideration the magistrates returned to Court. With reference to the Coliseum, the Mayor said the licence would not be granted, but he added "The magistrates are favourably impressed with the proposal to erect a music hall on the site in question in accordance with the plans produced."

Mr. Frank Coyle tells us that he is now able to sing three songs in nine minutes. Prodigious! He is also greeted with thunders of applause, and the only thing requisite to complete his happiness is a "lightning conductor."

A great favourite at the People's Palace and Aquarium, Scarborough, this week is Marie Winsome, male impersonator, who is accorded a rousing reception. Jack Henri, Scotch comedian, sings well, and gives the audience the benefit of his experiences the other side of the Tweed with great ability. Linton, in his cable act, has been rebooked this week, giving a comic exhibition on the wire with his usual ability. Leslie Murray delights the audience with his conjuring; Alec Kendall is a versatile comedian, endowed with a good supply of original patter; whilst Baroux and Bion give a good turn as eccentric acrobats, and Miss Bessie Willows is pleasing with her songs. Vernon's Imperial Bioscope displays a fine film, entitled "Two Little Waifs."

Mr. Alfred Humphreys presided on Saturday evening over the last smoking concert of the present season held at Canonbury Tower, Canonbury, and it proved a very successful function. Everybody joined very heartily in the chorus of "Here's a Health unto His Majesty," the solo of which was sung by Mr. Lambert Perry, whose sister, Madame Sanders, kindly gave her charming services as a vocalist. There was quite a big crowd of comedians, including Mr. Gurney Russell, Mr. Rex Kempton, and Mr. Fred King, all of whom were well received. Mr. Herbert Johnson delighted the company with a couple of songs, with violin accompaniment; and Mr. Donald Keir, the basso, again had a good reception. Mr. Charles Gellett, by special request, repeated his amusing Scotch recitation, "The Mission of McBray." Mr. Lovett King rendered loyal service as accompanist.

MR. BRANSBY WILLIAMS AT THE EMPIRE.

Mr. Bransby Williams is one of those men who, having achieved marked success in one characterisation, or series of characterisations, are not content to "let be." He is constantly giving us something new, therefore we are always ready to renew his acquaintance again and again. This week at the Empire he furnishes further proof of that wonderful versatility which has helped in so large a measure to make him a popular figure on our music-hall stage. He is appearing in what is described as a mimetic duologue, entitled Actors Day by Day, written by himself, and partly, we understand, introduced by him during the recently-concluded pantomime at the Shakespeare Theatre, Liverpool. Mr. Williams imitates the peculiarities of voice, manner, and gesture of Mr. George Alexander, Mr. Tree, Sir Charles Wyndham, Mr. G. P. Huntley, and Mr. Martin Harvey. He has contrived to concoct a most amusing dialogue from the names of well-known plays, songs, sketches, &c. Conversations, it should be mentioned, take place between Mr. Williams and a very charming young lady, to wit, Miss Daisy Cordell, who remains on the stage all the time and entertains the house while Mr. Williams is engaged in his quick changes—and marvellously quick they are. In the pretty æsthetic costume worn by gentlemen in the middle of the eighteenth century he shows us Sir Charles Wyndham as Garrick. Garrick demands to know if Charley's Aunt is still running, and the young lady replies in the affirmative. "Then it must be 'Her Second Time on Earth'!" he exclaims. Next we are treated to a capital imitation of Mr. G. P Huntley, who is made to say to the lady, among other things, "I missed you last night; I missed you to-night—that is 'Two Little Michus.'" Mr. Williams concludes his exceedingly interesting and clever act with a representation of Mr. Martin Harvey as Sydney Carton in The Only Way, delivering the famous lines of the dissipated barrister's last speech with appropriate pathos and feeling. Mr. Williams is to be highly congratulated on Actors Day by Day. It is crowded with well-turned phrases, puns, and witticisms.

MISS RUSSELL-GRAHAM'S CONCERT.

The Scotch violinist, Miss Reena Russell-Graham, pupil of Sevcik, made her first appearance in London at Queen's Hall on Friday evening, April 6. Miss Russell-Graham was assisted by the London Symphony Orchestra, and by Mr. W. A. Peterkin, vocalist. Miss Graham was first heart in Tschaikowsky's Concerto for violin and orchestra, which, although not the most interesting work of its kind, served to display the undoubted ability of the young Scottish violinist as an executant. What Miss Russell-Graham chiefly lacked was richness and fullness of tone in the more sustained passages, and this was more noticeable in Beethoven's Romance in G and Vieuxtemps' No. 4 Concerto, given later in the concert. Miss Graham's most successful effort was in Bach's "Air." The young artist, who was warmly greeted by her audience, also received many floral tributes at the conclusion of the Tschaikowsky Concerto. The London Symphony Orchestra, admirably conducted by Mr. A. W. Payne, rendered the utmost assistance to the concert, giving, in addition to accompanying the soloist, Svendsen's Overture, "Carnaval in Paris," and a sympathetic performance of the familiar "Vorspeil," from Lohengrin. Mr. W. A. Peterkin sang Burns' "Bonnie wee thing" in a large, expressive manner, and was particularly successful in Cowen's "Border Ballad." Being encored in the latter, the singer responded with another air, accompanied on the piano by Mr. John W. Ivimey.

A cheque for £50 has been forwarded to the Japanese Embassy by the directorate of the Alhambra Company, Ltd., with the request that it shall be applied by the Japanese Government in alleviation of the distress now existing through famine in Northern Japan.

Frank E. Fillis's New Circus of Varieties is playing to crowded houses in Johannesburg. The company is an international one, and includes several artists of sterling merit, prominent amongst whom are the Zeno, Jordan, and Zeno acrobatic troupe; the Brothers Lloyd, aërialists; Frehal Brothers, Continental clowns; Provo, illusionist; and Kearney P. Speedy, who gives a thrilling exhibition of high diving from a height of 250ft. into a pool of water 2ft. deep. The company concluded their season on the 20th inst., and then opened at Boksburg.

Mr. Edgar Hyman, the popular managing-director of the Empire Palaces, S.A., Ltd., announces that their new Empire Palace of Varieties, in Commissioner-street, Johannesburg, will be opened on May 14 by Miss Ada Reeve. This famous artist, who will arrive on Friday, the 11th, will most likely be present at the private view of the new house to be given on the 12th.

The Tivoli Theatre of Varieties, Cape Town, of which the lessees are the Empire Palaces, S.A., Ltd., and in which the Hyman family are largely interested, has been closed, owing to extensive alterations to the stage and fire exits. The house, however, was reopened on April 4, with a new company, headed by the Horne Bros., under the management of Mr. E. A. Pickering.

Mr. Fred Higham informs us that, on behalf of the "Pimlico Lodge" of Freemasons, No. 1772, he has had the pleasure of forwarding a cheque for £25 to the widow of the late Brother George Le Brunn as a grant from the Worshipful Master and Brethren of the lodge, with their kind sympathy.

Mr. Arthur Randal's costume concert party, the Middies and Maids, embark upon their spring and summer tour next week at the Pier Pavilion, New Brighton. The company numbers seven artists. Like other well-known comedy concert parties, they will be seen upon the halls next autumn.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hertz (Mlle. D'Alton), who were in London last week after their long Continental tour, left Southampton on the steamship St. Paul on Saturday for New York, and will be absent three or four months. Mr. Hertz is called away by the news of the dangerous illness of his father.

Miss Flo Warner, burlesque artist, who is at present touring the provinces, will be seen in London early in June.

Apollo, the modern Hercules and jiu-jitsu expert, supported by an excellent vaudeville company, is playing to good business at the Grand Theatre, Bloemfontein. Mr. T. A. Comby is the general resident-manager of this new theatre, which has just been opened.

Mr. Sylvester Schaffer, jun., who made such a success with his one-man show at the Alhambra some time ago, has been scoring a triumph in Dresden. He was responsible for the whole of the second half of the programme at the popular Central Theatre, and was honoured with a visit from the King of Saxony, accompanied by the Crown Prince and his other children. His Majesty, whose tastes lie in the direction of light music, is a frequent patron of the opera and the drama.

THE DRAMA IN BERLIN.

"HOCHPARTERRE LINKS,"

Farce, in Three Acts, by MM. Kren and Lippschitz, produced at the Thalia, April 7.

Von Münzhausen	Herr Toussaint
Von Branden	Herr Bartels
Von Rodenwald	Herr Werckmeister
Waldern	Herr Graening

Chauffeur	Herr Haase

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BERLIN, Thursday, April 12.—The latest novelty at the Thalia bids fair to rival even its predecessor, Bis früh um Fünfe, which reached its 200th consecutive performance. Its production was a signal success for all concerned—authors, artists, and managers being called and re-called and applauded till the walls rang. A farce by MM. Kren and Lippschitz cannot be detailed; it must be seen to be properly appreciated. Plot there is as good as none, but everything has been turned to account to produce laughter, and the audience complied from start to finish. The action passes this time among military surroundings—always a safe draw here. The interest centres in Otto Ostermann, a corn dealer, who is called upon to serve in the Army and go through the autumn manœuvres. Ostermann's wife, Minka, is a remarkably frivolous little person, and the two create all kinds of laughable "situations." Ostermann, in the barracks, is of side-splitting comicality, especially played by Herr Thielscher, our inimitable low comedian, the original Charley's Aunt, by the way. The whole cast is a capital one, and the incidental music by Paul Lincke is extremely pleasing and adequately executed.

Signor Francesco d'Andrade has commenced his annual season at the Theatre des Westens. The popular baritone, who took Berlin by storm some twenty years ago as Don Giovanni, is—if not quite as fresh as he was then—still delightful to listen to, and having studied his rôles in German, he does not disturb the "ensemble" as was then the case. He selected Rigoletto for his opening night, and being in excellent voice, earned enthusiastic applause. The star was efficiently supported by Fräulein Stoeller, Herren Hansen, Barck, and others, while Kapellmeister Buechel in the conductor's seat was all that could be desired.

Bernard Shaw being the mode of the moment, the Schiller Theatre O. put his satirical play, Helden, in the bill last week with, however, but scant success. The audiences of our two Schiller theatres (in the north and east of the city) are generally most grateful for what is set before them, but satire does not appeal to them. They did not understand many of the author's finest points and his most caustic raillery fell flat. The piece was far more successful when it was given a number of years ago at the Deutsches under Dr. Lindau's management. It was not satisfactorily interpreted, either, at the Schiller, many of the artists exaggerating unpleasantly.

And still they come, the imitators of Isadora Duncan, the "bare-foot" American dancer, who thus pays the penalty of popularity. First came Medelaine B.—as she was called, and nobody ever learnt her full name—then Miss Sanden, and now it is a Miss Maud Gwendolen Allan who "dances" Chopin and other great masters. This lady gave a highly interesting performance in the theatre of the Royal High School for Music last week, and showed us much that was tasteful and original. Among the numbers were Schubert's "Ave Maria," illustrated with slow, graceful movements by Miss Allan in trailing garments, and Chopin's "Dead March," for which she wore a mourning garb and veil. Her illustration of Schumann's "Träumerei" was charmingly poetic, and her vivacious dancing to the strains of Rubinstein's "Valse Caprice" (for which she wore a short Bacchante costume) electrified the audience. Miss Allan announces her intention of further following in Miss Duncan's steps by opening a dancing school here, where attention will be given to a certain kind of calisthenics as well as the terpsichorean art. Both these ladies hail from America, and Berlin is large enough for both.

The Schliersee peasant actors' company have commenced their season at the New Royal Opera, making their customary hit. These children of the mountains possess enormous native talent, more than some trained artists of our cities, and their volks-plays are full of fresh, wholesome humour and healthy sentiment. That the Kaiser himself has a predilection for the "Schlierseers" is not to be wondered at. The season commenced with a novelty, a four-act "country play," as the authoress, Frau Hartl-Mitius, calls it, entitled Die Zauberwurzel (the magic root). It is a comedy of the lighter sort, though were it not so playfully handled by the writer the plot might easily have become tragic. An elderly master-farmer has married a frivolous, heartless coquette for his second wife, who falls in love—or pretends to—with her step-son, Hans, and tries to seduce the young fellow. Hans, however, is true to his sweetheart, and the tables are turned on the foolish and erring step-mother. The acting was particularly bright, Xauer Terofal, the star of the company, being well to the front as Lorenz Schönwelter, a merry fellow and species of village wizard, who believes in the efficacy of magic herbs and who is a friend to everybody. This is the happiest-drawn character, and it was done every justice to by the clever artist to whom it was intrusted. It is a pity the Schliersee guests have not found a theatre more suited to their needs, the New Royal Opera being too large for plays of this description.

Fraulein Irene Triesch, or, to give this great actress her proper name, Mrs. Frederick Lamond, is still drawing large audiences to the Lessing to witness her faultless impersonation of Rebecca West in Ibsen's Rosmershohn. This is considered by many of the critics to be her best rôle, and the finest conception of the intricate character on the German stage. In the great scene with Rosmer and Kroll in the third act the strain is almost painful; the proverbial pin might be heard to fall in the crowded house, and the audience are too much moved to applaud. The Rosmer of Herr Reicher is, too, a grand reading, and the remainder of the cast in keeping. Und Pippa Tanzt and Kater Lampe are holding the boards on the other nights of the week. Fräulein Triesch, by the way, is giving an occasional recitation evening with great success. One of these took place on Wednesday in the Singakademie, the actress selecting passages from the Old Testament, poems by Goethe, Heine, and Lenan.

Tschaikowsky's opera, Pique Dame, which we were hoping to see produced at the Royal Opera this season, has now been definitely postponed until the beginning of next. Thus perish our hopes of hearing any new work at the Opera House.

A new playhouse, the Figaro Theatre, will be opened at the West End before long. It is under the joint management of Fräulein Olga Wohlbrueck and Herr Waldemar Wendland.

Miss Lil Hawthorne will be heard on Monday, at the New Cross Empire, in Lawrance, Gifford, and Mellor's new song-scena, My Cosy Caravan, with special scenery and effects.

STAGE STAFF GOSSIP.

The attendance at the fourth annual dinner of the Heads of Departments' Association was not so large as last year, this being due mainly to many members being at work. Owing to the necessity for the date of the dinner being fixed many weeks ahead, it is impossible to avoid circumstances such as prevented the attendance of many who would otherwise have been present. Those who would like to have a copy of the photograph of the dinner party may obtain one from Messrs. J. Jacks and Co., 22, Glasshouse-street, W. Price, mounted, 4s. each.

Those who are not yet members of the Association will find much instructive reading in the speeches contained in the report of the dinner published in another column. Mr. J. Cullen, the President of the Association, desires to repair an omission in his speech. He had been requested by Mr. George Alexander to personally convey to those present his great regret at not being able to attend and support the chairman, Mr. H. B. Irving.

Mr. Cullen also desires to contradict a statement that he is in charge of both the stage and property departments at the St. James's Theatre. There is no foundation for such a statement. Mr. W. Davies is the property master, and has been in sole charge of the property department since his predecessor, Mr. H. S. Henby, vacated that position.

The proceedings at the monthly meeting, on Sunday last, of the General Theatrical Operatives' Sick and Benevolent Society were somewhat lively. The complaint made by Mr. H. Kelly to Mr. Edward Terry caused an exciting discussion. A resolution was proposed that Mr. Kelly resign. In view of the fact that Mr. Kelly had invited the Society to grant him £20 as a reward for services, and compensation for expenses incurred by him, in securing a share of the Dramatic and Musical Fund for the Society, and that he actually did receive £5 in recognition of the services he claimed to have rendered, it does not appear that he has much cause for complaint.

It is not a fact that this Society refused to accept any working staff member of the Dramatic and Musical Fund, but it appears that some members of the Fund refused to join under the conditions offered to them by the Society. The resolution inviting Mr. Kelly to resign was lost by one vote, which sufficiently indicates the feelings of the members on the matter. It is to be regretted, however, that two of the most trustworthy officials and oldest members felt so strongly on the matter that they resigned their offices, and it is to be hoped that, in the interests of the Society, they may be induced to reconsider their decision.

The complaint made to Mr. Terry relative to the Dramatic and Musical Fund again occupied the attention of the Committee of the General Staff Branch of the National Association of Theatrical Employees at their meeting on Wednesday last week. The result of the inquiry made among the members to whom Mr. Kelly alleged he had acted elicited the fact that they had not sanctioned any complaint against this Branch and were not aware that such a complaint had been made. A vote of censure was passed upon Mr. Kelly, and he was requested to withdraw the statements he had made to Mr. Terry.

The Theatrical Sports Committee met on Thursday following; the list of events occupied most of the time of the meeting, and it is expected that entry forms containing a list of events will be issued next week. The Committee hope to be able to provide a handsome trophy for the tug-of-war competition. The assistance of volunteers is invited to act as representatives of the Committee in every theatre and music hall in the London district. Communications should be addressed to the hon. secretary at 29, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C.

Within a few days Messrs. B. Feldman and Co.'s newly-published song, "My Bungalow in Borneo," has leapt into popularity, and already Miss Ella Retford has made a great hit with this melodious number.

The popular comedian, Mr. Sid Cotterell, has terminated his fourth consecutive engagement at Drury Lane Theatre, and is now on tour with his comedy success, The Substitute.

Not since the erection of the Hippodrome, Wakefield, have there been more delighted and enthusiastic audiences than there have been this week to welcome Dr. Carl Hermann. The huge building has been filled at early-door prices on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday.

Miss Lilian Elfrida, the mimic, who has been scoring at the Canterbury during the current week, was responsible for a smart bit of work in travelling and opening on the 2nd inst. at the Palace, Northampton. Wired for from that town to deputise for the top-liner, in a few minutes she was en route for Euston in a hansom, caught the 6.5 p.m., and appeared at the second house at the Palace, being awarded three encores and high encomiums from the management.

A singular charge of wilful damage at the Empire Music Hall, Newcastle, was heard in that city on Wednesday against Robert McDonald, electrician, who had been discharged for drinking. The man was seen on Sunday in the motor-room of the hall, where all the switches for the main lines of light were kept. On Monday it was found that these had been tampered with, the current cut off, the fuses drawn from the footlights and thrown about the floor, and the arc lamps in the front of the building rendered useless. But for the timely discovery, the building on Monday night would have been in darkness. There being no direct evidence against McDonald, he was discharged. A few minutes afterwards McDonald was heard to say to the manager of the Empire (Mr. Conroy), on leaving the court, that he did do the damage. Accused was then brought back, and, sobbing, admitted the offence. Mr. Conroy asked the Bench not to be hard upon the man, and a fine of 20s. with costs was imposed, or a month's imprisonment.

We have to record the death, on March 29, of Mr. Tom B. Harms, one of the founders of the well-known American music publishing house of T. B. Harms and Co., of New York.

Mr. Fred Day, the energetic manager of Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter's New York branch, has secured for his firm two numbers of which much will be heard later this side "the pond." The titles are "Said the Hornet to the Bee" and "Moonshine." Miss Vesta Victoria's "Waiting at the Church," by Leigh and Pether, commands a steady sale, and a song entitled "Bridget," by the former writer, is gaining in public favour with our Transatlantic cousins. Mr. W. A. Francis, the son of Mr. David Day's partner, who looks after the printing department of the Anglo-American music publishing house, attained his majority on the 2nd inst., and was the recipient of a now much-prized memento of the auspicious occasion from the London staff.

Mr. Oswald Stoll has accepted the dedication of Kenneth Lyle's fine march song, "The Beat of the Drum," the professional copies of which have just been issued by Messrs. Francis, Day, and Hunter.

HAVE YOU CONSIDERED
What the Possession of a Voice of First Class Quality and Timbre Means to you?
PHONOZONE
is quite unlike the usual Voice Specifics, which you are doubtless familiar with. It is not a Jujube, and it is not a drug, but it is a delicate and Refined Tincture, which may be used with confidence by the most fastidious. An occasional use of Phonozone gives a delightful tone and beauty to the Voice, which delights all who try it.
In cases of Hoarseness, Cold and Loss of Voice, its use will bring about the happiest of results.

RE APPLICATIONS FOR ENGAGEMENTS

All applications by either Artists or their Agents must be made to the Head Office.

Lowest terms must be stated, and distinction made between salaries required for larger and smaller towns.

Vacant dates should be stated. If a list of existing bookings be sent, it will render selection easier.

Artists employing Agents should accredit one only at one time, as the friction arising when several Agents are employed at the same time, all expecting the one booking to go through each of them, often renders it expedient to avoid that booking altogether rather than give undeserved offence to several Agents.

New Acts seeking engagements, or turns not rebooked (possibly because they have played a series of dates without introducing new business), will facilitate matters by having their acts seen by our District Managers. Their Districts and Postal Addresses are as follows :—

MANCHESTER, LIVERPOOL, AND DISTRICT.
MR. ALAN W. YOUNG,
Empire Theatre, Liverpool.

EDINBURGH, GLASGOW, NEWCASTLE, AND DISTRICT.
MR. S. GETHING,
Empire Theatre, Glasgow.

LEEDS, SHEFFIELD, HULL, BRADFORD, AND DISTRICT.
MR. T. GERALD MORTON,
Empire Palace, Leeds.

BIRMINGHAM, NOTTINGHAM, LEICESTER, AND DISTRICT.
MR. HATTON WHARTON,
Empire Theatre, Nottingham.

SOUTH WALES DISTRICT.
MR. W. LEA,
Empire Theatre, Cardiff.

N.B.—Mr. OSWALD STOLL or Mr. FRANK ALLEN can be seen by appointment on all matters arising out of the above, and for the discussion of entirely new Numbers.

All Artists or Agents who communicate with our District Representatives must have made definite applications, in accordance with above directions, to the Head Office, at the same time, or just previously.

PLAYING TRUANT.
The missed lessons. An illustrated paper preferred to an exercise book. The boy's mother appears on the scene with the usual consequences. A good tack-in at the jam. Caught again. The boy decides to have a day off, and finding some money in a drawer he goes out and meeting his brother they both prepare for an enjoyable time. The baker loses his tarts. The disgusted old lady who finds a box at the end of her dog chain instead of her cherished pet. The disappearing drink. Gent rows the waiter. Nothing like cheek. Asking a gentleman for a light they leave a cigarette in his hand and make off with his more classy smoke. Visit to the children's pantomime. Visit to the toy shop. The missing horse. Chase by the proprietor and others. The surprised bill-stickers. At last the boys are caught and taken to their home where they receive what is considered a just reward for their exploits. AMERICAN CONVICTS' ESCAPE FROM PRISON.
A thrilling subject, interesting and exciting from start to finish. Planning the escape. The doomed warder. The first convict succeeds in escaping from his cell, and hurriedly releases all the others in his division. They flee through a window. Alarm sounded by the dying warder. A hot chase then ensues, the convicts making desperate efforts to get away, rushing through fields, over rocks, and through woods, pluckily followed very closely by the warders. The ambush. Murder of another warder. Two of the convicts are now armed with weapons taken from their dead pursuers. The picnic-party. The convicts threaten with death the person disclosing their whereabouts, and afterwards they again take up their desperate race on bicycles they discover in the wood. The warders are at fault for a moment, but again take up the chase on a passing motor-car. The convict party, now reduced to three, abandon the cycles, and, doubling back over the country, reaches the home of one of their number. The siege—a warm time. Both besieged and besiegers take big risks, and two of the remaining convicts are killed. The sole survivor is making a last stand when a bullet enters the window and mortally wounds his little daughter. The warders now rush the place, and drag him from the side of his dying child back to the dreary cell from which he made such bold efforts to escape. About 508ft.
The Subject, £12 14s. 0d.

LIVING FLOWERS.
A splendid array of choicest blooms transformed into brilliant scenes, with living figures. Magnificently coloured throughout. About 345ft.

The nurse takes the children, and the happy family depart with great joy. About 164ft.
The Subject, £4 2s. 0d.

A CARNIVAL NIGHT.
A lady is ready to depart for the carnival. Her husband objects, but is persuaded to go by some friends. Pretty scenes in the streets. Confetti throwing. Arrival at the ball. The wife's lover. A stolen kiss. Caught by the husband. The quarrel and duel. The husband disarmed. The second onslaught. The husband is just about to be run through when his wife rushes between the duellists and receives the weapon in her own body. The callous lover walks away without troubling to see what he has done, while the husband is overcome at the thought of his wife's injuries. About 278ft.

THE ERUPTION OF VESUVIUS.

WEIRD AND WONDERFUL.

The World's population has been thrilled within the last few days by the accounts of the Great and Epoch-marking Eruption of Mount Vesuvius—the most serious and destructive since A.D. 79, when Pompeii and Herculaneum were destroyed. 1827 years ago:

By a fortunate coincidence our Mr. Bromhead was in Naples recently, and only ten days ago made the ascent of Vesuvius which was then in violent eruption. He secured pictures on the Funicular Railway (now wiped out of existence) ascending the volcano, also pictures

STREAMS OF MOLTEN LAVA RUNNING DOWN THE MOUNTAIN SIDE.

The sight is awe-inspiring and wonderful, and when one remembers that it is now impossible to go within a mile or two of the spot on which the pictures were taken, the value of the film cannot be over estimated.

REMEMBER.—It is positively only ten days ago since the picture was taken, immediately before the widespread havoc was wrought.

No. 1014. CUPID AND THE WIDOW.

A young widow is turning over a number of old letters and lamenting her early widowhood when Cupid breaks in upon her sorrow, takes away her late husband's letters, and carries to her, from a private drawer, some other letters and a photograph. He chides her for continuing to lament the death of a man whom she married only for his money, and reminds her, by a vision, how her true lover had been thrown over for the wealthy suitor. The vision shows a pair of scales, with Cupid on one side and a pile of money on the other, and as the money is showered in by the rich man Cupid's side rises and the girl's choice falls upon her wealthy admirer. As the vision fades the true lover, still faithful to his early choice, enters the room, but the young widow orders him away. Cupid, however, runs and pulls him back, and pushes the girl towards him till she throws aside her mask of woe and welcomes the man she has always loved.

Length 180ft. Price, £3 15s. 0d.

No. 1009. THE PEASANT-GIRL'S REVENGE.

Along a lonely wind-swept country road in Eastern Russia three Cossacks are riding wearily, searching for some signs of human habitation where a meal may be obtained. Presently they spy a miserable little cottage some distance off the roadway, within which a frugal but sufficient meal is in progress. A peasant, his wife and daughter are sitting around the table eating food, and washing it down with a bottle of wine. Suddenly the tramp of horses is heard, and rushing to the door the peasant breathes the fatal word "Cossacks!" In a moment, fear and consternation put all happiness to flight, the peasant barricades the door, while his wife and daughter hide the remains of the food in a trap in the floor. Meanwhile the Cossacks, having in vain demanded admission, burst the door down and stride into the room demanding food. The peasant refuses to give it to them, and the officer runs him through with his sword and repeats his demands to the horrified wife. Maddened at the brutal murder of her husband, the peasant woman proudly refuses the food until they seize her daughter and threaten to flog her to death. Then she yields, and points to the hole in the ground where the food is hidden. When the Cossacks settle to their meal they find that the wine flagon is empty and they demand its replenishment. This is the peasant woman's opportunity to avenge the death of her husband. She fetches a new bottle and drops a terrible poison into it and carries it back to the intruders, but the officer refuses to drink until the woman has herself taken a cupful. Thirsting for revenge she is ready to take even this step to ensure that the murderers shall drink also, but they have thought of a better plan and they insist instead that the child shall drink the wine as a proof that it is "undoctored." Just at this moment the sentry outside calls the Cossacks' attention, and while their backs are turned the mother flings the poisoned wine out of the cup and presses the empty vessel to her daughter's lips. The Cossacks returning, are satisfied at last that the wine is safe, and all but the officer drink the poisoned liquid. Quickly the poison does its work, and two of the men are seized with their death agonies. Then the officer rises in wrath to slay the mother and child, but the little girl has seized a dagger from one of the men, and she deftly plunges it into the villain's back just in time to save her mother's life.

Length 300ft. Price, £7 10s. 0d.

AND THE RUINS OF POMPEII.

Length 180ft. Price £4 0s. 0d. (Subject). Code Word "VESUVIUS."

A fine Picture, giving a splendid idea of this awful catastrophe. The Ruins of Pompeii, destroyed A.D. 79, stand revealed in a pretty moonlight tint. A lava stream is next seen concluding at the mouth of the crater. Then the summit of this belching Volcano is shown with the smoke and steam rising into the heavens. The Picture concludes with a close view of the yawning chasm, tinted red, with volumes of smoke and steam pouring out, together with the death-dealing lava, the cinders and masses of rock being hurled into space.

THE L.C.C. AND AMUSEMENTS.

The usual weekly meeting of the London County Council was held on the 10th inst at the County Hall, Spring Gardens.

INSPECTION.

The Theatres and Music Halls Committee reported that the expenditure incurred with regard to the inspection of places of public entertainment respecting the character of the performances, &c., during the quarter ended March 31, was £2 5s. 6d.

LEWISHAM PALACE OF VARIETIES.

The Committee reported that the Council on March 14, 1905, approved drawings submitted by Messrs. Owen and Ward, on behalf of Mr. W. Stephens, of a music-hall building proposed to be erected at the corner of High-street and Limesgrove, Lewisham, subject to the condition, inter alia, that the building should be commenced within six months from the date of the approval. On Oct. 17, 1905, this time was extended by six months, and Mr. Stephens has now applied for a further extension of six months. The Council on March 27, 1906, on the recommendation of the Building Act Committee, extended the periods allowed for the commencement and completion of the erection of the building by the terms of the consent granted under the London Building Act, 1894, and recommended that the application be granted upon condition that the building referred to be commenced within eighteen months from April 4. Agreed to.

THE OXFORD.

The Committee reported that they had considered a drawing, submitted by Messrs. Wylson and Long, showing certain alterations which it is proposed to carry out at the Oxford Music Hall with a view to preventing the gangways on each side of the stalls being used for standing room. They recommended that Messrs. Wylson and Long be informed that the Council has no objection to the arrangements shown on the drawing submitted by them with regard to the proposed alterations, provided the cross gangway between the tenth and eleventh rows of the stalls be not reduced in width. Carried.

STANDING ROOM IN THEATRES.

Captain Hemphill asked the chairman of the Theatres and Music Halls Committee if it was intended to drop the question of standing room in theatres, as the report on that subject had been withdrawn at the last meeting.

Mr. Yates replied that there had been some little misapprehension as to what occurred at the previous meeting. It was not the intention of the committee to let the matter drop; on the contrary, they were pursuing the subject very actively. The report had been withdrawn because the Theatre Managers' Association had approached the committee, and promised to lay before them certain facts and figures, which could be discussed in a perfectly friendly manner. He hoped that the Music-Hall Managers' Association would see the wisdom of adopting the same course, and in that case he had no doubt that some satisfactory and amicable arrangement would be arrived at. The committee would report fully on the subject at the conclusion of the negotiations with the Theatre Managers' Association.

UNREGISTERED AGENCIES.

On the presentation of the report of the Public Control Committee recommending that an assistant at a commencing salary of £150 a year be appointed in the Public Control department in connection with the Council's work in respect of the regulation of employment agencies, Mr. Hardy, M.P., the chairman of the committee, said that some of the revelations concerning unregistered theatrical agencies were positively appalling. The Committee's report did not deal with sound professional agencies which were registered, but with a lot of consummate rascals, who, under the guise of theatrical agents, debauched, or caused to be debauched, young women applying for professional engagements. They not only brought girls from the Continent, but exported young girls to the Continent.

SHELTERS.

The Building Act Committee recommended that the Council do consent to the erection of an iron and glass shelter in front of St. George's Hall, Langham-place, Marylebone, as shown on the plans, dated Feb. 27, 1906, submitted with the application of Mr. J. G. Buckle, on behalf of Mr. J. N. Maskelyne, such consent being subject to the usual conditions.

The Committee also recommended that the Council do consent to a deviation from the plans approved on Dec. 12, 1905, for the erection of two glass and iron shelters at the Aldwych Theatre, to abut upon Aldwych and Drury-lane, Strand, so far as relates to an alteration in the construction of the shelter at the main entrance to the theatre, as shown on the plans, dated March 6, 1906, submitted with the application of Mr. W. G. R. Sprague, such consent being subject to the following conditions—that the modified construction be to the satisfaction of the district surveyor, and that all the conditions contained in the resolution of Dec. 12, 1905, consenting to the erection of the said shelters, be otherwise strictly complied with.

THE SHOWMAN'S DWELLING VAN.

The Parks and Open Spaces Committee reported as follows:—No. 10 of the regulations governing the use of swings, roundabouts, and shows at Blackheath, Hampstead Heath, and Wormwood Scrubs at holiday times does not allow of dwelling-vans being taken on to the open spaces. Such prohibition has, we understand, inflicted considerable hardship on those who cater for the amusement of the public on such occasions, and, after having very carefully considered representations made to us on their behalf, we are of opinion that the restriction might be removed, subject to the responsible persons complying with such regulations as may be made to safeguard the interests and property of the Council. We propose to regard the concession as an experiment, and, if the use of dwelling-vans should prove objectionable or insanitary, we will consider and advise the Council as to any further action which should be taken in the matter. We have had prepared certain regulations which will, in our opinion, meet possible objections to the use of the vans, and recommend (a) that No. 10 of the regulations relating to games and recreations at Bank Holiday times be rescinded, and that regulations Nos. 11 to 17 be renumbered accordingly; (b) that the regulations governing the use of dwelling-vans in connection with shows at Blackheath, Hampstead Heath, and Wormwood Scrubs, as submitted separately, be approved. The recommendations were adopted without discussion.

After a sitting lasting seven hours the Council adjourned for the Easter recess until May 1.

On Thursday afternoon, Mr. W. W. Kelly generously devoted the proceeds of a special matinée at the Metropole, Birkenhead, in aid of the Birkenhead and Liverpool charities, when a host of attractions from the theatres and music halls of Liverpool, Manchester, &c., appeared, including Mr. George Robey, who journeyed specially from London in order to be present.
